Women Follow Governor Right Into His Den to Pose for Photograph

Suffragists Wanted to Be Pictured With Friend of the Cause—Senator Goodson Not Invited.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

MEMBERS of the Board of the Missouri Equal Suffrage Association followed Gov. Gardner into his office Thursday afternoon desiring to be photographed with the executive who had called the extra session and his lieutenant who always has been such a good friend of suffrage. When they grouped themselves around the table it was found that piles of documents and books obscured the view. These were removed, whereupon a thick coat of dust loomed up on the polished surface of the table. The photographer remarked that the dust would appear in the picture and the women agreed this would never do. Miss Baxter, the Governor's private secretary, produced a dustcloth and it somehow found its way into the hands of Lieutenant Governor Crossley. That high official hesitated for a second and then set to work dusting and polishing the table.

"You see," he said with a rueful smile, "you see how it works out—the minute the women get the vote, the men have to do the housework."

The women merely examined the completed task with critical eyes and conceded it had been done as well as one of them could have done it.

When we had all departed for railroad station Mrs. Gellhorn, State suffrage president, lingered for some unknown reason. Arriving on board train she proudly displayed three slips of paper. They were receipts for three registered documents just deposited in the mails addressed to the President of the United States. A Government clerk had brought them to her with the final assurance that all the ratification documents were now on their way to Washington.

Criticise Senator Goodson.

When the Senate had placed its seal upon ratification and there was nothing else to do but wait for the Governor's signature, the women killed the idle hours in an impromptu debate upon which deserved the least praise, the three senators who voted "No" on the bill or the one who was in his seat and did not vote at all. This was Senator Goodson.

Animated opinions were aired on both sides of the question. It soon was to be noted, however, that those offering excuses for the senator who didn't vote were silent, while his critics, for all I know, are still holding forth.

"I hate a namby-pamby man more than I do one who is consistently wrong," was the way one of the critics expressed it.

It may be the senators who voted "No" foresaw the advantage of a last word. Certain it is they were not molested after the vote was taken, while if one woman said all she said she said to Senator Goodson and reported the occurrence as it really happened it may be he is readjusting in his mind the merits of discretion over valor.

"I've known him all my life," said this woman, "and when I'd got through telling him what I thought of a straddler he had not a word to say for himself. He wasn't in his seat when his name was called, he tried to tell me, until I told him I was right there and saw that he was there even when the Bs and the Cs were called. He heard Brogan and Cook vote 'no' and that ought to have helped him make up his mind but it didn't.

"Two women asked him to vote for it and his wife asked him to vote against it and he couldn't please all the women, he told me, as he patted his forehead and his chin and his neck with his handkerchief. I told him I had more respect for Sam Cook who voted 'no' when his wife always tried to get him to vote for suffrage. While I was giving him my opinion of any man who would let any woman make up his mind for him, he stammered and stuttered and shifted from one foot to another. He just didn't have a leg left to stand on."

Silent Worker on Job.

A woman whose name, because of the nature of her work and her absence of official rank, rarely has appeared in published reports of momentous suffrage happenings in Missouri the last few months, but whose face is more familiar than that of any other suffragist to enemies as well as friends of suffrage at the capital, and who is now coming in for a great deal of praise and credit for the outcome, is Marie Ames. Miss Ames is not a Missourian, but was loaned as a field worker and expert of experience by the national association. She has resided at the capital since the beginning of the last Legislature.

Her work has been figuratively to keep her fingers upon the enemy pulse, note each fluctuation and rush for restoratives. In the dead of night, between Wednesday, the day the House voted, and Thursday, the day the Senate was to vote, it is whispered now that the enemy had a sinking spell. Thirteen votes are said to have been lined up to defeat the measure. Nurse Ames, with her fingers on the pulse, knew all about it, being a night nurse as well as a day nurse, it seems.

The few anxious watchers who were informed thought the situation might be grave, but Miss Ames also knew enough about the case to be able to reassure them. Eighteen votes would be necessary to kill the bill and Miss Ames, knowing just how many were strong and healthy and how many weak and wavering, diagnosed the situation and pronounced the majority safe from infection.

With the morning sunlight the patient was out of danger and we all know now how he sat up and took his medicine like a man when the roll was called.

A little story was told me by Mrs. W. R. Haight, one of the most faithful watchers at the capital, which story, she declares, is proof of Miss Ames' peculiar gifts.

"Four of us went into an office where when you step across the threshold a bell rings back in an inner sanctum announcing your approach. As one after the other stepped on the rug we heard the bell jingle. But when Marie Ames entered there was not a sound. She has become just that skillful in pussy-footing!"

Words From a Man.

Men's votes have been the only things sought and the only things that mattered much with women this last week, but now I think it worth mentioning how Mrs. Gellhorn, presiding at the banquet the other night, declared it was a man who first converted her to suffrage, and how at the very end of the program she abdicated her position as the orator of her family and permitted him to say a few words.

Dr. Gellhorn rose to the occasion most gracefully and felicitously. When he came to this country 20 years ago, he said, he met a type of woman he had not known in any other land. They were alive, keen, with their fingers on the pulse of life. They were good mothers, good housewives, good to look at and fun to talk to. So far as he could discover, they were the equals if not in many respects the superiors of their husbands.

He could not see why they should not have equal privileges in the government under which they lived. He was thankful the struggle had been carried to a conclusion, glad for the sake of his wife's welfare that it was ended, but thankful for the example of courage, self-sacrifice and, above all, of patience, these women had presented to him and all mankind.

Spain's Great Novelist, Ibanez, Says American Valor Won Allied Victory

In the Excitement of the Last Days of the Conflict, Our Men's Work Was Overlooked, Declares Author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Gradual Return of Perspective to Normal Is Bringing Out that the Barriers that Held Our Cautious Allies Were Swept Away by Youthful Doughboys.

By Vincente Blasco Ibanez.

THE armistice came so quickly, ending the war when we least expected it, that a certain confusion arose about the military operations of the last period. And as the American army took part in overwhelming force during this period, it suffered the consquences of such confusion. The allied nations, in their enthusiasm over the triumph, did not pay much attention to the operation that had brought on the final victory. On the contrary, in all good faith, they fell into great errors and disregarded the heroism which had so vitally assisted in the last hour in breaking down the final resistance of the enemy.

It was the general belief at that time that the American army, organized at the last moment, of men who had never before made war, had limited itself to playing an inferor role. There was even one military writer who asserted that the Americans had occupied the lines just to fill up he gaps left by the more seasoned French and English troops, the only ones who could make an offensive. The modesty of the Americans, who, after having done such wonderful things, said nothing about their own exploits, contributed greatly to this general injustice. Today these mistakes and errors are recognized, and Europe knows all that the soldiers of the Union did on her soil in those few months.

America Surprised Them

Surprise has been added to surprise.

Europeans could not understand how an army born in the summer of 1917 could accomplish anything worth mentioning before two or three years. "Armies are not improvised, however rich and powerful a country may be," said the military specialists with authority. But in the spring of 1918 the few American divisions assisted in the counter offensive which saved Paris, and in the fall, on their own responsibility, under the direction of Pershing, they vied with the European armies in gaining the victory. It is really amazing that the American republic has been able to improvise in a year an army equal to those that Europe was able to put in the field only after four years of warfare and long periods of military preparation. This is a thing that many Europeans consider the greatest feat of the United States, and this from a country that everyone considers a land of miracles. But even more than the rapidity with which the army was organized, they admire the American's ability for soldiering. The great majority of them were men in civil life, citizens of a republic which had no compulsory military service, and who, for that reason, had never been in the ranks, and lived without even the rudiamentary military institution. Yet these citizens when they put on a uniform and took up arms became in a few months as thoroughgoing soldiers as the French and English, who had had three years of experience and took part from the first in the most bloody and decisive operations of the close of the war.

This leads to the idea that a vigorous, free, educated people, even though it live in peace, can organize itself for war with more rapidity and intelligence than those automatons, subjected to a military despotism, who after 40 years of mechanical discipline and of painstaking preparations were finally defeated.

From May to August of 1918, while Gen. Pershing was getting his army into shape to cooperate in the final action, the needs of the moment made him single out certain of the divisions that were being formed to place at disposal of Marshal Foch.

The Germans in their last desperate offensive had come almost as close to Paris as in 1914 before the first battle of the Marne. The situation in some ways was worse. Their long-range cannons were bombarding the capital, interfering with living there. A counter attack to repel the enemy advance had to be made as soon as possible.

The First Five Divisions.

And in this operation, which was to change the entire aspect of the war—for it was the prelude to the final victory—the Americans took part for the first time. The first and second American divisions reconquered Chateau-Thierry and Belleau Wood. Five American divisions figured in the terrible counter attack of July directed by Gen. Mangin.

This name means everything to one who has lived near the battle front.

Mangin has been the hero of heroes. However brave and self-sacrificing all the French Generals of this war may have been, there was one who stood out among them like Achilles among the other warriors of the Iliad. This man was Mangin. Wherever there was need of forcing a passage, winning ground and driving back the enemy, they called for Mangin. He has been the specialist of attack, of the "forward march at all cost."

It would be a mistake to think of him as a brave soldier, but one of little judgment, as a machine of war that knew only how to obey. Mangin is an intelligent General, but he is at the same time a man in the most virile sense of the word.

Reckless of Life, Defiant of Death

Short of stature, ugly as a devil (but a good-natured, friendly devil), he was born to command men and to inspire them with the heroic madness that ends in victory or in death. Peace never existed for him. He has made war ever since he left the military school, in Asia, in Africa, in all the colonies and lands conquered by France. He has fought with men of all colors under the difficulties that virgin forests and unexplored rivers offer. He has fought with the deadly diseases that lie in wait for the white man in tropical lands. And he has always come out a victor.

In this war the troops commanded by Mangin were the hardiest, the most reckless of life and the most defiant of death. The other divisions of the army were made up of "men," of citizens who fulfilled their duty to their country, and were ready to die if necessary. The troops of Mangin were composed of "warriors," of men who instinctively loved danger and adventure, the glory of arms, the rude charm of action and struggle. To the satisfaction of serving a noble cause was added the harsh voluptuousness of gratifying their personal tastes. They were French regiments picked by death, in which remained only the bravest and the maddest; Algerian and Moroccan troops, Spanish and African halfbreeds; the irresistible battalions of the Foreign Legion, of legendary fame; the Sengalese sharpshooters, who with the childishness of the bellicose negro considered war the only occupation worthy of a man. And they all adored Mangin, the invulnerable General, who, when the hour of attack arrived, advanced at the head of his soldiers, and in the moments of rest fraternized with them.

Those who held the same humanitarian ideas in war as in peace were his enemies and called him "Mangin le boucheur" (Mangin the Butcher) because of the readiness with which he sacrificed human lives to win an objective, not stopping until he had succeeded.

"Mangin the Butcher"

For a little while, at his own wish, he remained quietly in the background. Gen. Nivelle, during his brief period of command, began an offensive against the German lines, ordering Mangin to break through, whatever it might cost. And he would have done so, but there was a commission of Senators at the front then, men of peace, who knew war only by hearsay, and who were terrified at the reality of it. At seeing how the hospitals filled up; how the fields were heaped with the slain, they protested against this way of making war of "Mangin the Butcher." Painleve, the head of the Government at that time, could not afford to antagonize these Senators, and, so they say, he made Mangin suspend this costly operation, and made a failure out of what would have been a certain, though a bloody victory.

The chief victims, the soldiers, have been the General's stoutest supporters. Men instinctively love a hero who leads them either to victory or death, beginning at the bottom like themselves. They turned the nickname of his enemies into an enthusiastic battle cry. Like the soldiers of other centuries, who shouted the name of a saint, they charged, all these picked fighters, as they advanced in a bayonet charge, through the hail of machine guns, falling in groups, shouted with fierce fervor, "Mangin the Butcher! Long live Mangin the Butcher!" In the moments of calm the name of this General and his terrible nickname were a title of glory for those who fought under him.

I have sometimes seen in the trains, among the other soldiers going home on a few days' furlough, certain "poilus" who attracted general attention by the number of decorations on their breasts and the gold cordons hanging from their shoulders, by their fierce, determined air, and by their sharp, authoritative voices. They formed a sort of aristocracy; they considered themselves superior to the other soldiers.

And when they were asked to which army and to which division they belonged, they gave no numbers; details seemed superfluous. They merely answered proudly:

"I am one of Mangin's men."

And they added in their hoarse voices, looking pityingly at the other soldiers:

"Mangin the Butcher."

It was under the command of this terrible General in one of the most decisive and bloody counter offensives, that the American soldiers made their debut in France.

This tells everything.

What could surprise Mangin's warriors? For three years they had been continuously on the offensive. Whenever a breach had to be made in the German wall they were called. How could those hardened soldiers, the last word in daring and heroic madness, be astonished at another's bravery? . . .

And yet these warriors of Mangin, tried and tempted by three years of incessant attack, admired the youthful daring of the American divisions. They were amazed at the heroic, unwavering frankness with which they defied death, storming the enemy's positions.

There is a reason for this. In all wars, unseasoned troops have been given to panic, to lack of self-control, scattering or retreating under fire. Only after several months of fighting could they be depended on.

Astonished at Their Bravery

The present war has given the lie to the majority of the teachings of earlier wars. Perhaps it was because this was a war of emotions (some right, some wrong, but all equally real) that the new troops were more impetuous in their attack, more overwhelming and blinder to danger than those who had been campaigning for some time.

One has only to recall the beginning of the war. The French and the Germans were equally unseasoned; they had had a long, painstaking preparation for war, but no real experience. Almost all of them were soldiers of maneuvers, barrack soldiers, who heard the whistle of a bullet for the first time.

The world knows what the French did. Before the artillery could weaken the enemy, they rushed forward with their bayonets, shouting the "Marseillaise," as though courage were everything. They fell by the thousand, with unavailing heroism, long before they could reach their objective. A wave of madness carried them to a glorious suicide. The Colonels, their kepis on their sword points, advanced at the head of their regiments. As though their red-trousered uniforms, that turned every regiment into a poppy field, were not absurd enough, the officers wore their parade uniforms, with their white gloves and their showiest decorations. They thought only of dying, as though death were an inevitable condition of victory.

One must admit that the Germans were not far behind in this period of mad offensives. The papers of Berlin rightly spoke of the "German fury," as did those of Paris of the "French fury." They attached in a green mass, solid as a moving wall. In vain the enemy artillery cut great spaces in it; the living stepped into the breach left by the dead, and the human machine advanced. The drum and fife kept up a continuous accompaniment to the chant-like song of the assailants as they mounted the slopes and went down into the valleys, like an irresistible flood, leaving behind mountains and mountains of dead.

Stimulus of Enthusiasm.

It has been alleged that this tenacious attack, this lack of fear of the enemies' fire, was achieved by intoxicating the soldiers with something worse than liquor; stupefying drugs that made them lose the sense of reality. French writer friends of mine who were in the army assure me that there was a strong smell of ether about these advancing masses, and that many prisoners and wounded, who seemed mad, needed several hours to become normal. This may be true, since there are trustworthy witnesses to it, but I do not be-

Ibanez's Knowledge of American Soldiers Gained by Observations in France

VINCENTE BLASCO IBANEZ, Spain's greatest novelist, has become a popular name in the United States through the extraordinary success of his war novel, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Nearly a million copies of this book have been sold, and from its superbly vivid descriptions of the fighting in France readers throughout this country have been able to visualize the sights and scenes and horrors of modern warfare. His knowledge of affairs and his relations with the great figures of the war place Ibanez in a most favorable position to estimate the value of the services of American troops and this high appreciation of the character, spirit and soldierly qualities of our men, which he has written especially for the Post-Dispatch and New York World, is voiced with real authority.

Ibanez was born of Aragonese parents in that Valencia he so ably portrayed. He studied law at a local university, was ever a radical, and attacked Church and State with his pen even in his undergraduate days. Now, at 52, he has over a score of novels and hundreds of short stories to his credit. He is looking forward to a visit to the United States.

Author Wants to Write a Comedy, but He Finds It Outside of the Arena and a Tragedy Within.

By IRVIN S. COBB.

RINGSIDE, TOLEDO, O., July 4.

WHEN you are assigned to write a comedy and find yourself suddenly called upon to deal with a tragedy, what are you going to do? When you see a contest turned into a massacre, when you behold a slaughter where you had counted upon witnessing a fine play of science, when a so-called champion reveals himself as a broken husk, a foundering scuttled hulk, a splintered reed, a whatever you choose to call that which typifies complete and total loss—what are you going to say in the line of sportive comment?

When that which you had figured would provide material for good-humored persiflage reveals a display of pitiable unfittedness, the like of which is rarely seen even in the degenerated modern prize ring, how are you going to coin whimsies and quips? The answer is that you are not.

The new Jack the Giant Killer won creditably, considering that what he had to defeat was part myth, part popular fiction and part inefficiency. The loser acquitted himself creditably, too, considering that he was licked and trebly licked before he started, for he showed courage of a sort.

Let us consider this lamentable affair after some rough patterns of chronological sequence. The earlier proceedings are fraught with slight relief. The tragedy is to come afterwards.

One of Warmest Days.

It is 12:30 by the ex-war correspondents' wrist watches, on one of the warmest days experienced during the present century. There is a breeze, but it blows straight from Gehenna the Unblest. There are clouds once in a while, but they do no more than veil for a merciful moment the blistering darts of heat that pour down from almost straight up. The heat bakes resined smells out of the planks, which mingle with the reek of perspiring human bodies.

Overhead, above this vast wooden poringer of an arena swings a captive balloon. Around and around at an altitude of 300 feet circles an airplane advertising somebody's infallible something to the astounded sparrows.

Merely the forerunners of the crowd are here now, not more than fifteen or twenty thousand. With these early bird arrivals came rumors and yet more rumors. There is one cheerful story, shining forth like a good deed in a naughty world, to the effect that the ticket speculators, having overextended themselves in their first fine optimism, are now trying to sell for $35 seats which they bought at $60 each. There is scarcely a dry throat when this news spreads through the press stand, even pretty near beer tastes good when one drinks it as a toast to continued bad luck for the speculators.

About the Main Bout.

Touching on the main bout there seems yet to be little choice as between the two candidates. As I figure it, each of them is suffering from a severe psychological handicap. For I hear that Jim Corbett has picked Willard to win, while Damon Runyon favors Dempsey. This inclines me to think that the man who stands the best chance is Ollie Pecord or some other dark horse. I never knew either Corbett or Runyon to pick a winner—that is to say, intentionally.

All these types and sub-types of the human species that come where championships are being decided are represented among the living streams that trickle in through the entrances and spread along the wooden passways between the miles and miles of wooden benches. Captains of industry jostle elbows with gents who are accustomed to tell the time by other people's watches. Railroad presidents tread upon the heels of visitors whose home addresses are the size numbers in their hats. Prominent actors, prominent burglars, prominent faro dealers, prominent financiers, prominent pickpockets, prominent four flushers are all too common to attract more than passing attention in a gathering which has drawn to itself fit examples of every grade of society of this continent and it takes a physical freak to earn the tribute of a passing glance. For example, that eminent artist writer, Reuben Goldberg, Esq., is able to enter and find his ringside place without causing any undue amount of excitement, whereas a youth from somewhere down Texas way, who mostly bills himself as the tallest cowboy in the world, creates quite a stir. This young person wears glasses and plainly has been doing his best to make the world safe for some mail order house specializing in short clothes—if he is a real cowboy, then cows have changed greatly since I last visited Texas.

Cows must be getting more refined out there, so I beg leave to differ with the youth regarding his own classification as a cow hand but as to his size there can be no dispute. That speaks for itself. He looks as though he might have been born during the seventh inning where everybody was stretching. He admits to being seven feet one inch in height. Be his exact cubic measure what it may, he certainly towers above Jess Willard, who prior to his arrival was the tallest thing around these parts. He is followed now by a crowd who presumably are filled with a morbid degree to be present when the lengthsome lad becomes dizzy from looking down and tries to jump off.

Stranger in Purple Shirt.

An hour has passed. If anything it is hotter than it was. That is providing anything could be hotter than it was. A purple person in a purple shirt invades the newspaper section, begging the loan of a thermometer. Nobody knows what he wants with a thermometer, unless it be that he's one of those technical persons who can't accept their own word for it that they are warm and want scientific proof of it. The lavender-hued stranger goes away disappointed and we have opportunity to figure on the growth of the crowd within the last six minutes and to run a languid eye upon the preliminary bouts.

Perhaps I should have stated earlier that preliminaries have been going on at intervals since noon. They attract almost less attention than do the hawkers who go about huckstering drinkable and edibles of the more popular staple varities.

Into the ring climb a couple of third-raters, accompanied by a referee and an announcer and followed by bottle holders and other persons who are adept at the bath towel flirtation. These mute, inglorious gladiators pound each other until their naked bodies gleam and glisten with sweat and they suggest a pair of newly-hooked fish flopping together. If there is a knockdown or a knockout the crowd cheers languidly. If, instead, the fight lasts out the full six rounds the cheering is even less in volume. Offering commonplace preliminaries before a multiutde which has come from the four corners of the hemisphere to behold a championship battle between dreadnoughts is like asking the skipper of a whaling fleet to be interested in a quarrel among a school of passing minnows.

One of Dempsey's Aids.

Even Jack Malone, who enjoys the honor of being one of Dempsey's sparring partners, fails to enlist the full attention of the blistered populace when for eight tiresome but to say trivial rounds he buffets at will the rugged frontispiece of a medium-sized, dark-complectioned stranger, whose name your correspondent fails to get.

This party of the second part deported himself like one who as our home-coming President might have said a few years ago, is too cowed to fight. Nevertheless throughout his sufferings he wears a fixed, forced smile upon his face.

Jack makes valiant efforts to remove it, but at the finish the smile is still there, even if the owner of it isn't.

It is 2:30. Weather continued fair and warmer; crowd the same. Since last reports nothing worthy of mention has happened except that the audience has gained several thousand members, and has lost two. The captive balloon breaks its moorings and rides gaily away in a general northerly direction carrying in its basket a brace of unknown gentlemen who went up only for a short sight-seeing trip, and who now in all probability will spend the week-end somewhere in Michigan.

Personally I know that I have all the sensations of an order of ham and eggs, country style. At that I am luckier than some. From my station I behold upon every side of me gentlemen addicted to indoor pursuits, such as burglary and roulette, who I am sure are getting now the first genuine coat of sunburn that they have experienced in years and years. Going to a championship fight certainly keeps you out in the open air. For that matter being a seagull keeps you out in the open air, too, but who in thunder wants to be a seagull? In the temperature of 98 in the shade this open air thing may easily be overdone.

Dempsey in Dressing Room.

Three o'clock has arrived and along with it an excited courier bearing tidings that Dempsey is in his dressing room. The thrill occasioned by the bulletin having abat-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

An Ex-Soldier's Complaints.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The other evening while reading a true letter from "A Gold Star" in the Post-Dispatch I not only sympathized with this party, but recalled several things which I consider lack of appreciation of the deeds our men in uniform have done.

One of the things that I recalled was the fact that when I enlisted in the Fifth Regiment I was told that I would be paid for each night I drilled until called into Federal service. I still have that money coming to me and in addition to this must say that the State of Missouri has done less for her soldiers than most other states. Other states have given $100 or more to each returning soldier, while Missouri still owes many for nights they drilled. This is a "show me" State, so let us show the rest.

As Congress has been debating so many things lately, I suggest that they get together and do a little more for the boys in uniform. The war risk insurance is a wonderful thing for the soldier to pay his own pension. Upon discharge we were told to convert our insurance into standard policies at a very much lower rate—it could be a whole lot lower, but as it is at present it is very little less. They could reduce the rates a great deal and still make money. Do it, Congress, and show the boys you appreciated what they did. We got a $60 bonus when we got discharged—at present prices that bought a suit and a couple of shirts. Cut the prices or do something else. We got no more than those fellows who were attending universities and drilled for two or three hours each day—they got regular army pay and the same bonus as us fellows who were across and had life in danger the greater part of the time. Is this lack of appreciation or are the university boys better than us?

Some Senator can make a hit with the soldiers by taking up these points, for they are worth while. Also—to the front, Missouri. AN EX-SOLDIER.

Some Good Results of Prohibition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have to state that prohibition will be one grand thing, for the people have gone too far with the abuse of liquor; even women have done the same. I don't live far from where I have seen women and girls come staggering out of a place and act in the most shameless manner. When a young girl will allow three men to ride her all day around in an automobile, drunk as cuckoos, and bring her back and forth in a place where nothing but men are, I think it is time for the law to act, to end this, for our next generation's sake especially.

I think there will be more children wearing a pair of shoes and some get a chance to have two pair, and many a wife will have the pleasure or going to the park on Sunday with a sober man.

I know of children who were starved while the father was spending almost his week's wages over the bar.

A CONSTANT READER FOR 20 YEARS.

High-Priced Shoes.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The morning paper contains an interview with a retail shoe dealer who predicts that the price of shoes will be further advanced this fall.

No worse form of profiteering has been practiced during the past few years than that which has been followed by a number of shoe dealers. Shoes are being sold by certain dealers as high as $14, $15, and even $18 per pair. Every sensible man knows that no pair of shoes can be made of leather that is worth any such price. As proof of this fact, one can still buy good makes of shoes at from $5 to $7.50, and it is a fair assumption that a satisfactory profit is being made on these goods by the dealers who sell them.

The Government, in fixing the tax schedules, has levied a tax on all shoes sold above $10 per pair, but they have made the tax too small. Any man who is weak-minded enough to pay more than $10 for a pair of shoes should be relieved of his money, and the tax should, therefore be raised to at least 50 per cent. The people, themselves, are largely to blame for the high prices on shoes, and if they would refuse to be thus robbed of their money by unprincipled dealers, the robbers would be forced to either drop their prices or go out of business. COMMON SENSE.

Camp Bowie Boys' Appeal.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Last October approximately 4000 Missouri boys came to this camp. Many of them were from St. Louis. Several hundred of them are still here, despite the fact that they are needed by business firms and on farms at home. The work of this camp ended with the demobilization of the Thirty-sixth and Ninetieth Divisions. We are being held to do janitor, labor and kitchen work.

They will not release us until we receive a certain grade on our applications. We are all disgusted with the army and its methods. We all have employment awaiting us at home, and we are not needed here. All the other Missouri boys are home.

THE PLEDGE TO FRANCE.

The special treaty by which the United States pledges immediate aid to France should the latter be unjustly attacked by Germany is, obviously, a concession to French fears. It imposes no obligation on us which we have not already undertaken in the League of Nations covenant. What it does do is this: It gives specific assurance to France, it emphasizes the world's condemnation of German militarism, and it gives further notice to Germany that should she suffer a relapse of that malady and again assault her neighbor, she will be dealt with summarily.

But the wisdom of the pact is debatable, despite the fact it involves us in no additional commitment. Under the terms of the covenant the United States is morally obligated to go to the aid of France, if attacked from without, and as a matter of fairness as well as prudence we should do so as quickly as possible. We must defend our peace treaty. But since France has requested a distinctive agreement to that effect, the enemies of the covenant will allege that the instrument is impotent and that it has been repudiated in its own household. It will be pointed out, too, that, while England has entered into a similar treaty, the dominions of the British empire are exempt from such obligation and it will be charged that we have engaged to do a great deal more than England.

There is no merit, of course, in such arguments. The world war has made it plain that any assault which threatens the integrity of France similarly threatens England. In a world sense, France is the great buffer state between modernism and medievalism, between democracy and autocracy, between our civilization and the veneered barbarism of the Germany that was. An attack on France which would bring England to her side would bring all the dominions of the empire as spontaneously as in 1914. And the League covenant summons the United States to the side of an imperiled France as imperatively as does the special treaty—a summons we would answer instantaneously.

The thing to remember is that France has a bad neighbor who has wronged her cruelly and frequently. It does not seem possible that Germany will ever again be able to spring suddenly at France, but France doesn't intend taking any chances. Accordingly, she is organizing a force which no imaginable Germany will ever dare challenge. That is the explanation of the special French treaties and the history.

NORTH DAKOTA'S REVOLUTION.

Having ratified the industrial program of the Nonpartisan League, the people of North Dakota are about to undertake the most pretentious effort in state socialism ever attempted by an American commonwealth. The State will at once begin the manufacture of flour, the marketing of farm products and, with a State bank, will essay the financing of farm enterprises in a new and daringly liberal plan.

The term Nonpartisan League is, of course, a misnomer. It is a venture in class government—government by the farmers for the farmers. The god of the North Dakota machine is a man named Townley, who has demonstrated a dazzling genius for persuading farmers to join the movement and pay substantial membership fees and dues. Up to the present Townley has been the principal beneficiary of the project.

It is no exaggeration to say that the North Dakota experiment is a revolution. It has been accomplished lawfully, however, by propaganda, promises and glib solicitors canvassing the territory in flocks of Fords. It is a venture which the whole country will watch with interest.

The Townley panacea is now to be put to the test. If it makes good its effect will be incalculable. But panaceas have a masterly talent for "blowing up" when it comes to delivering.

THE SOUTH AND SUFFRAGE.

The Texas Legislature recently ratified the proposed suffrage amendment to the Federal Constitution, notwithstanding that a few days before the question of giving women the ballot had been defeated in a popular election. This action, seemingly defiant of the people's mandate, is easily understood. The explanation is found in a resolution introduced in the Senate by Senator Sherman of Illinois proposing to change the basis of representation in Congress from population to the number of votes cast.

The text of the Sherman resolution reads: "Representation in Congress shall be apportioned among the several states in the proportion which the total aggregate number of votes cast in any state of Representatives in Congress bears to the total aggregate number of votes cast for Representatives in all the several states in the congressional election next preceding the year in which an apportionment of Representatives in Congress is to be made." The fact that Senator Poindexter of Washington has a similar resolution pending in the Senate may be taken to mean that the Republicans are determined to put through this plan if they can. Under this plan, on the basis of the vote in the last presidential election, the 14 Southern states would lose a total of 64 Representatives in Congress, as follows: Alabama, 7; Arkansas, 3; Florida, 2; Georgia, 9; Kentucky, 1; Louisiana, 6; Maryland, 1; Mississippi, 6; North Carolina, 3; South Carolina, 6; Oklahoma, 2; Tennessee, 3; Texas, 9; Virginia, 6. In this group of states Oklahoma alone has given woman full suffrage and Mississippi and Louisiana partial suffrage, the rest of them denying women all voting privileges. Unless this embargo is lifted, the South, despite its greater population, will be outvoted by the tier of states west of the Rocky Mountains, where, with the exception of New Mexico, women already have full suffrage.

It clearly behooves the South, then, to swing into line for the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution. The action of the Texas Legislature seems to forecast such a movement.

PERIL IN FRENCH BIRTH RATE.

Mark Sullivan in Collier's Weekly.

IT is the exact truth, as a distinguished French economist said, that "the dead are but the smaller part of our loss." The worst effect that the war has had on the human race does not appear in the figures of the killed or in the figures of the dead and wounded. The worst effect of the war, the greatest loss it has inflicted, is its effect on the birth rate.

Before the war, in normal times, France had a birth rate of about eighteen per thousand. Eighteen babies born per year in each thousand of the population is a low birth rate. It was just barely enough to match the number of deaths per year, to keep France's population stationary. To keep a population stationary is not enough. A nation, like an individual, must grow or go backward.

As a matter of fact, the one largest element in the recent war had nothing to do with the glorious part that France played on the battle field after the war started. It was this fact: that before the war France had a stationary population, while Germany had a growing one. Any discriminating historian of the Great War will dwell long on this most significant of facts: in 1870-71 France and Germany fought a war; each nation had about 40,000,000 people; 42 years later they fought again; this time Germany had 70,000,000 people—France still had 40! There is both truth and pathos in the lament of a French statesman: "Our birth rate was miserably insufficient."

The figures which show the effect of the war on France's birth rate are only available for 77 out of France's 87 "departments"—what might be called France's counties. The other 10 departments are the ones which the Germans invaded; in those the figures, if ever they are available, will undoubtedly be worse. But the figures for the 77 districts show a present birth rate of nine per thousand.

With the very beginning of the war, France's birth rate began to fall. During the years 1915 and 1916 it fell to barely more than half of normal, to 10 per thousand. By 1918 the full effect of war made itself felt, and the birth rate had fallen to less than half, to nine per thousand. I do not know how vivid this figure may be to those who have not looked closely into such matters; it can, perhaps, be made more vivid by putting it this way: where only nine babies are born in each thousand of the population, it would be necessary for each of those nine babies to live 112 years in order to keep the population stationary.

At the present moment France is on the downward path toward the second class of nations, nations like Spain. Whether the trend will ever change, or how soon, is too large a subject to be treated adequately here.

JUST A MINUTE

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"IT is just possible that a good many of us have not appreciated the significance of prohibition," Mr. Antwine said.

"The people opposed to it attribute it to intolerance brought about by cranks like Mr. Bryan and Senator Shepard and religious sects like the Methodist Church. Those of us who are neutral enough as between the wets and drys to judge the phenomenon dispassionately cannot accept that explanation. One cannot indict a free and educated people like that of the United States upon such scores as intolerance and crankiness.

"The significance of prohibition lies much deeper than this, and if none of you minds I am going to dredge for it a bit. We have made a great point in this country of having public schools. There has never been anything else like it in history. Every man in the United States has desired education for his children whether he had it or not. There has been no better proof of our fineness as a people than this.

"Very well. It was inevitable that education upon such a great scale as this should bear fruit. Some New York exploiter of humankind said a short while ago that he was against public libraries. His reason was that men went into them, read themselves to death, and then came out against the Government! That is, the old order can never stand against the new understanding.

"Are we quite sure that prohibition is not one of the fruits of education? Educate a people, and they turn at once from the sordid things of life to contemplation of what they conceive to be best for all. We have just witnessed the remarkable spectacle of our own country, now become because of freedom and education the most powerful and influential ever known, addressing itself to the improvement of the whole world in which we live. Don't you believe that the little red schoolhouse had something to do with that? Don't you believe that the mass conscience in this country is what it is because all the people can by education understand and participate in it?

"Surely you do. Of course, we thought of the individual in relation to education more than the mass. It was with less hope or intention of improving humankind than love of the child that any man sent his child to school. Still, it was inevitable that we would in that way improve society, since the improvement of the individual results in the improvement of society.

"Is it not then possible that we have come to prohibition because we understand better than we formerly did the place of liquor in life? I think that is probably the fact. I know such a theory will be scouted by those who do not believe in prohibition, but the world has never gone forward upon any score without opposition. The status quo has always suited a numerous and powerful element. It would be unfair to say that these people have not for the most part been sincere. That would be quite as unfair as to indict as an enemy of society everyone who has engaged in the liquor business. When we put down slavery we were careful not to indict all slaveholders with the institution itself. That would have been grossly unjust. Men belong to their time. Thus, General Washington, owning slaves, is not the less beloved for that reason. His time was not our time. It was not the time of the abolitionists. If he lived now, he would be still that protagonist of our moralities that he was of those of his own time.

"In the judgment of the people of this country, after generations of education, liquor is an evil. They have risen against it. That is not a new thing in our country, nor does it differ in kind from the conclusion to which we came in time with respect to slavery. Perhaps we are coming to that same conclusion as to excess wealth. What are we going to do? Are we going to close the schools, as the man in New York would close the libraries?

"No. We are not going to do that. We are going to keep the schools open and close the saloons. That conclusion has not been reached for us by cranks and religious sects. We have reached it ourselves. The movement began among country people, who have the fewest entangling alliances with the status quo. It has been weakest in the big cities, which have the most entangling alliances with the status quo. The big cities are full of people who would like to have been as free to express themselves upon this subject as country people have been. Prohibition, as I see it, is merely one of the fruits of our education. If it is to many of us a bitter fruit, it is still the fruit of the tree we have planted."

MAN CHILD OF MINE.

LAST night I felt for that numb, endless time
When they told me how, O Hero Mine!
Into the Sunset Land my son had gone,
Smiling and brave, and I remembered all the songs;
All the dear things you used to say to cheer my gloom;
How sweet your cheek had pressed against me when you crooned;
Man-Child of Mine.
But now I know—if this must be my lot;
If you have given back to God what love begot;
If I must walk, alone, this long, long way, my dear,
Look down upon your Mother now—that scalding tear,
Is only from the price that fills my heart
That in this fight for right you had a part;
Man-Child of Mine.

Kenyon Would Open War on "Red Peril" by Giving Workman Credit at Bank

Iowa Senator Would Squelch Radical, but He'd Also Examine Culprit's Seat to See if Somebody Left Tacks There.

By PAUL HANNA.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Are there other ways to kill Bolshevism than beating it with a club? Is the "red peril" founded so simply in universal human cussedness that the rod is the only remedy? Senator William Squire Kenyon doubts it. He would squelch the rebel who uprises so violently as to menace the social household, but he would also examine the culprit's seat to see if some one hadn't left a few tacks there.

Kenyon has watched the masses fidgeting for some time past and is convinced that it is not a hopeless case of St. Vitus dance. He has been looking around for tacks and broken glass and has found quite a handful. If America will sweep up these irritants and apply some salve of consideration to the scratched and punctured parties he believes labor in the United States will settle back into a bulwark against revolutionary agitation. And if America does not take these precautions, Senator Kenyon thinks we are issuing an invitation to serious trouble.

The junior Senator from Iowa is 50 years old this month. He was born just after the issue of slave labor was finally settled by the most unpleasant process—by four years of civil war. His term in the Senate extends to 1925 at least. Between now and then he hopes to see the issue of wage labor well on the way to settlement by the best possible process by conceding labor's request for an equal partnership in industry.

Program Starts With Home.

I called at Senator Kenyon's office in Washington the other day and found a tall, youthful, white-haired man, very much exercised over the need for promptness in putting a comprehensive labor program through Congress. There was a lot of old-fashioned comfort in finding that this "radical" statesman's program radiated from the home. He wants everybody to own one.

"No man ever sat on his own front porch and plotted the overthrow of society," he began. "Social unrest begins among people who don't own their homes, and spreads about as fast as the number of such people increases. Why shouldn't the Government help the workingman to buy a home? It is helping farmers to buy farms. We have a system of farm loan banks which can easily be enlarged to give credit to home builders.

"When the farmer gets a loan from the Government he gives his labor power as the principal security. It stimulates his patriotism to find that, as he stands, he is an asset, good for a loan at the bank. Is the town workman a different and inferior person in the eyes of the State? He is a creator of national wealth; why has he no credit at the national bank? I propose we give him that credit, lend him the money and help him to erect a home that proof comfort him every day as proof that American citizenship is not a catchword but a tangible, material blessing. That would be my first retort to the Anarchist challenge."

All Classes Share Aspirations.

But others can be made that would be no less crushing in effect, Senator Kenyon believes. The very word "labor" is used in some quarters to imply an inferior social caste. The Iowa statesman perceives that men and women who work for wages are superbly human, and that the conditions of modern life, especially the public schools, have endowed them with aspirations which all classes share in common.

"Labor strives for status perhaps even more than it does for high wages," he reminds us. "It must be given a recognized share in the fruits and responsibilites of industry.' I am told that the employers' interest is prior because he risks his capital. My reply is that the worker risks his life—indeed, gives his life to industry. That is his investment, and he is entitled to a reward commensurate with his investment.

"What could be more offensive than the common phrase 'labor market'? It is only a slight improvement over 'slave market.' It makes raw materials and merchandise of human beings. It has no place in the minds or mouths of those who wish to destroy the suspicion and resentment of the masses."

Senator Kenyon's eyes flashed and his firm hand came down on the desk to punctuate the point. He rose and paced the floor.

"How long must we wait for all men to see these things?" he exclaimed. "Every day I talk with otherwise intelligent men whose minds are still shut to what is going on about them. When a constructive measure of social justice is proposed they back away and say: 'Our Government was never intended to undertake such things.' 'But our Government is not like the British,' they say. I point to some valid precedent in our own legislation. 'That was exceptional and should not be repeated,' they answer."

Wonders If He Is an Extremist.

The Senator paused. "Am I an extremist, a Utopian impossibilist?" he asked. "In the company of some men it has occurred to me that I am. And then I find myself reading such a document as this." Senator Kenyon turned and picked up "Social Reconstruction," a pamphlet issued in January by the National Catholic War Council. The pamphlet advocates a Government housing plan, declares that "wages on the whole should not be reduced even when the cost of living recedes from its present high level;" asks for minimum wage law and adds that, "After all, a living wage is not necessarily a full measure of justice;" advocates labor participation in industrial management through "shop committees, working wherever possible with the trade union;" demands vocational training and insurance against old age and sickness, and concludes with a simple declaration that "the majority of workers must somehow become owners, or at least in part, of the instruments of production."

"The authors and publishers of that program are noted everywhere for their conservative approach to social and political problems," Senator Kenyon resumed. "They advocate new policies only when they realize that new policies are essential. Yet their program goes in some respects beyond the measures I am recommending to Congress.

"I have submitted some ten main proposals, all of which are indorsed by the American Federation of Labor and some by the National Association of Manufacturers. We want a system of mediation in labor disputes, to be applied through the Department of Labor, extending the activities of the department's present bureau of conciliation. This is not an attempt at compulsory arbitration, which never works. Many persons have thought Canada was blessed by compulsory arbitration. The great general strikes that occurred at Winnipeg will teach them their error.

"I want an efficient and comprehensive national employment service. The need for and value of such a service has been fully demonstrated.

"A public works commission is needed to furnish employment in time of industrial depression or emergency. Canal, drainage and reclamation enterprises could be mapped out to absorb all those temporarily deprived of work in private industry.

"Some plan for old age, sickness and accident insurance must be devised. Perhaps the soldiers', sailors' and marines' insurance system can be intrusted with the job. There will be plenty of opposition from the private insurance companies, but I have introduced a bill to create a commission for investigating the facts and prospects involved.

"The Senate has approved the bill to provide vocational education for disabled soldiers and sailors. That is a fine, just measure. But we must do the same thing for the disabled veterans of civil industry. The disabled workman has a claim upon society and the Nation will be sounder and safer when he has been restored to self-supporting citizenship."

What About Child Labor?

I asked Senator Kenyon about child labor. The Supreme Court killed the law to exclude child labor products from interstate commerce. So Congress passed another law to emancipate the child slaves by placing a heavy Federal tax on the products of their toil. A Federal court in a notorious child labor State has declared this second law unconstitutional. But Senator Kenyon believes the Supreme Court will reverse that verdict and uphold the law.

"The Supreme Court cannot kill the second child labor law without reversing its several opinions that the Federal Government has unquestionable power to tax 'without regard to motive,'" he said. "If it should annul the law, however, we have still another recourse. Congress can and will enact a law to bar from the mails all matter concerning the products of children below a given age. In the interest of national security and welfare the Postmaster-General is at this moment excluding the mail of certain corporations and individuals. An act of Congress gives him this power, and does not require him even to give an explanation of the exact reasons governing specific acts of exclusion. Child labor being deemed a menace to the national welfare Congress is clearly performing its duty when it withdraws the postal service from that sort of industry.

"If the Supreme Court should destroy this third hope of ending child labor, then we must carry the fight to the people and have them amend the Constitution so specifically that there will be no question about the will of the nation and the right of Congress to abolish the evil."

Seator Kenyon has found that the mildest advocate of industrial reform may be accused of "Bolshevism." His outspoken admiration of Samuel Gompers does not protect him from suspicion.

"I regard Mr. Gompers as one of the greatest patriots of our time," he told me. "He has held organized labor to a true course of loyalty throughout the crisis of war. At this moment he is engaged again in a desperate and heroic struggle to keep American labor from adopting the extremists' doctrine and tactics of certain European countries. Distinguished leaders of English labor have recently succumbed to revolutionary temptation, and their promised activities here will make Mr. Gompers' task all the harder. To support and encourage the President of the American Federation of Labor in this critical struggle is the duty of every conservative agency."

Who will become the bride of Mr. George J. Lehman on July 9...

IN OBSERVING the first peacetime Fourth of July since before the war, the celebrants, in absence of the martial demonstrations of the preceding two years, turned naturally to social events to find outlets for their holiday enthusiasm.

Perhaps because freedom and the Fourth are ideas always associated, but more probbly because of the heat, social affairs of the day were generally informal, and a considerable part of society contented itself simply with repairing to the country clubs. Others were beguiled by week-end parties, rural outings or simliar diversions.

More pretentious among the set programs was that at the Bellerive Country Club, including, as it did, patriotic speeches, flag exercises and fireworks. Former Senator X. P. Wilfley was the principal speaker.

"A Patriotic Party" was the style of the day's merrymaking at the Riverview Country Club, and the festivities included fireworks and a tennis match.

Other clubs scheduled golf and tennis matches, as well as other athletic events which attracted the competition of the strong and the admiration of the fair.

A WEDDING of unusual interest which took place yesterday was that of Miss Lorraine Livingston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Livingston, 40 Kingsbury place, and Donald Hudson, who were married at 8:30 at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips performed the ceremony, in the presence of relatives and intimate friends. A large reception and garden party followed, at which about 300 guests were present. Miss Marjorie Livingston, who attended her sister as maid of honor, wore a frock of peach organdie and carried a shower bouquet of sunburst roses and blue delphenia. Another sister, Mrs. Norton Schuyler, was matron of honor, and Miss Helen Marie Hudson of New York and Mrs. Scott Porter were bridesmaids. They wore frocks of white organdie over slips of pastell shades, with rainbow sashes. Their bouquets were of Killarney roses, blue delphenia and lavender larkspur. Norton Schuyler acted as best man and Lawrence [illegible], Glenn Russell and Spencer [illegible] were groomsmen. The bride's gown was of creamy bridal satin, made with a long court train. The skirt was draped in rose point lace, with yoke and long sleeves of same lace. Her veil was made from an heirloom of old point lace which had belonged to her maternal grandmother. She carried a white prayer book with markers of lilies of the valley.

Mr. Hudson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hudson of Washington, D. C. He served a year abroad as First Lieutenant of aviation and has the honor of being the fifth American ace. Mr. and Mrs. Hudson will depart today for Bolivia, South America, to reside.

A WEDDING of last Wednesday was that of Miss Eva Lewis Higson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Higson of 3864 Humphrey street, and Arthur Lewton Fath, who were married in a church ceremony at Bonfinger Chapel, Christ Church Cathedral, with Dean Davis officiating.

The bride was attended by four bridesmaids, who were Misses Martha Meyer, Isabelle Weir, Sara Ange and Helen Fishell.

Irwin Sleyer was best man and Messrs. John Has, Charles Doersig and Arthur Hubell were the groomsmen. A small reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

The couple will pass their honeymoon in the North, and will be home after July 21 at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. Fath is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fath of Arlington avenue.

AN engagement of importance announced last week is that of Miss Cornelia McNair, daughter of Lilburn G. McNair of the Buckingham Hotel, and Alfred H. Murphy, son of Jesse A. Murphy of De Soto, Mo. Miss McNair made her debut after her return from Switzerland in the fall of 1915 and has been very popular in society. She is a member of the Imperial Club and of the Junior League. Mr. Murphy was a lieutenant in the Field Artillery, stationed at Camp Jackson, S. C. The wedding will take place some time in October.

AN out-of-town wedding of which took place last Wednesday at Sikeston, Mo., was that of Miss Mary E. Rodes, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. O. L. Rodes of Sikeston, and Arnold Roth, son of Mrs. John H. Roth of St. Louis. The ceremony was performed at 3 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Irma Wilson attended the bride as maid of honor and Paul A. Roth, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

Mr. Roth will take his bride north on a wedding trip and they will be at home after July 20 at Sikeston.

Mrs. John H. Roth, her daughter, [illegible], and sons, Paul and Lewis, Mrs. W. K. Roth and daughter, Eleanor, Mmes. George A. Roth and T. A. Roth, Mr. Alfred A. Roth, Miss Lucy Wilcox and Mr. Anson Keller of St. Louis attended the wedding.

AN engagement announced yesterday is that of Miss Mabel Lowry Harris, daughter of Mrs. George A. Hickok of 4549 Washington avenue, to Donald J. Henry of Chicago. The announcement was made at a luncheon given by Miss Harris. Miss Harris is a graduate of the 1917 class of Lenox Hall. Mr. Henry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Henry of Circleville, O., and resided in St. Louis for a number of years. He was graduated in 1911 from Kenyon College and took quite an active part in athletics while in college, and is also well known in athletic circles here. The guests were Mmes. H. Caryle Pollock, E. R. Meyer, J. Lawrence de Nefle, Lynden Bagley and Misses Gladys Blevins, Julia and Catherine Nichols, Mary Bemis and Elizabeth Moore. The wedding will take place some time in October.

THE marriage of Miss Florence Underwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Underwood of Tuxedo Park, and J. J. Crehan of Detroit, Mich., took place on June 28 at the Henrietta Avenue Christian Church. Miss Florence Tate was the maid of honor and Evelyn Underwood, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Irving Bastig was best man and ushers included Messrs. Ruebling and Underwood.

There was a reception after the ceremony and Mr. Crehan and his bride departed for the Northern lakes for their honeymoon. They will be at home in the Phipps Apartments in Detroit, Mich., after July 21.

The marriage of Miss Vera Falkenhainer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Falkenhainer of 3628 Lierman avenue, and Herbert A. Schnieder took place Wednesday, the Rev. Jerrie Johnson officiating. Mrs. G. C. Rathman was matron of honor and Mr. G. C. Rathman acted as best man.

Miss Irma Filsinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Filsinger, 3128 Lafayette avenue, was married Tuesday morning in the Church of the Unity to Ernest F. Wetteroth. The wedding, originally planned for September, was hastened because Mr. Wetteroth must spend three months in New York.

Mrs. Wetteroth, a graduate of Washington University, has been a teacher in a St. Louis high school. She also attended the University of Wisconsin. She is a member of the St. Louis College Club and the Association of Collegiate Alumnae. Wetteroth was graduated from St. Louis University.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Mrs. Gladys Stevenson Champion of Little Rock, Ark., formerly of St. Louis, to William H. Sell. Mrs. Champion is the sister of Mrs. Gilbert Penfield Strelinger of the Usona Hotel, and Mr. Sell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sell of 3104 Cambridge avenue. The wedding will take place within the next two weeks.

Mrs. Halsey E. Yates, wife of Col. Yates of the regular army, now Military Attache to Rumania, has left St. Louis after a visit of several weeks spent with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Nichols of 5638 Kingsbury boulevard. Mrs. Yates was extensively entertained while here and is now at Plattsburg Barracks where she has gone preparatory to joining her husband in Rumania, the government having granted her permission to do so. Col. Yates is a West Point graduate and has received a number of decorations for military service in Rumania during the last three years. Col. and Mrs. Yates will probably be there for a year and a half.

The marriage of Miss Jean Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Baker, formerly of 5586 Maple avenue, to Lieut. After the ceremony the couple departed for Memphis, where they will reside.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Ledbetter of 5222 Waterman avenue entertained last Thursday evening with an informal dinner party in honor of Maj. R. J. Payne and Lieuts. Walker Brotherton and George Fisher, who have recently returned from France. Covers were laid for ten guests.

Miss Florence Markam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Markam of Clayton, has as her guest Miss Ruth Beall of Rogers, Ark. Miss Beall formerly lived in St. Louis and has been entertained a great deal during her stay. She will return to her home tomorrow.

Miss Florence McTague, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. McTague of 5290 Westminster place, entertained last evening with an informal dinner party at Sunset Hill Country Club. Covers were laid for 10 guests.

Mrs. Charles W. Freeman of 315 Westgate avenue departed last Wednesday for Boston and other Eastern points.

LOVELY
Forest Hill Cemetery
Located Between Valhalla Mausoleum and St. Charles Rock Road.

This is a day of progress—applicable to Cemeteries as well as business institutions. Keeping step with the progressive spirit of the present age, Forest Hill has been established on sound, business principles—principles that appeal immediately to the good sense of every family.

The place where one's loved ones are laid to rest is a very sacred spot. When making this selection, the first question you should ask today is—

"Does this Cemetery provide an endowment fund which guarantees that not only my lot, but all the property surrounding it, will be kept for all time in beautiful condition without the responsibility of personal attention or the necessity of further expense on my part?"

That is what you secure when you purchase a lot in Forest Hill, and that condition is fully as important a feature as the purchasing of the lot itself.

Forest Hill Cemetery is now thoroughly improved and the lots are selling rapidly. Come out and see them while the prices are right.

$6,500,000 FOR LAND BANK HERE AMOUNT OF LOANS UP TO DEC. 1

Local Institution Showing Increasing Monthly Profit Shift From Deficit Taking Place in April.

From an issue of $54,000,000 in 4½ per cent bonds for the 12 Federal Land Banks, $6,500,000 comes to the bank in St. Louis, and President H. W. Danforth is engaged in writing his name 6500 times, or on each of the $1000 bonds. Proceeds of the sale of these securities, which was completed within two or three days by five of the larger banks in the country, at New York and Chicago, will be all that the bank here will have to loan to farmers until Dec. 1.

This was the first bond issue for the land banks marketed in the usual manner, former ones having been taken by the Government to tide the institutions over the first two years of their existence.

For several months loans by the St. Louis Land Bank have averaged more than $1,000,000 a month, but President Danforth believes that the $6,500,000 will be ample for the ensuing five months. July 1, last year, the aggregate of loans was $7,810,290, and at the end of June, 1919, the total was $18,226,145.

The bank here is now showing an increasing monthly profit, the shift from a deficit having taken place in April last, when the figures were $1243, while at the end of June the total was $22,645.99. At the end of July, 1918, the deficit was $50,191.54, and at the close of March, 1919, it was $4595.44, this being the final entry on that side of the ledger.

The Community Service League has a membership of almost 1000 girls, and the 22 clubs to which they belong are rotating for the Saturday night dances on the Francis lawn, when returned soldiers, sailors and marines are invited by the club members.

A field day for the club girls will be held at Forest Park in September, with contests in tennis, basket ball, baseball and volley ball.

MISS FANNY M. BACON QUITS TEACHING AFTER 56 YEARS

Principal for Last Forty-Seven Years, She Has Record for Continuous Service in Schools.

When the Board of Education meets next Tuesday it will take formal action on the resignation of Miss Fannie M. Bacon, who has been in the service of the St. Louis public schools for the past 56 years, nine years as a teacher and 47 years as a principal. Miss Bacon submitted her resignation recently, to take effect with the end of this school year. She has been living at 5200 Waterman avenue, but at the present time she is in Salt Lake City, Utah.

According to school officials, Miss Bacon has established a record for continuous service in the city schools.

Miss Mary C. Lackay, who resigned five years ago, completed a 50-year term of service.

For the past 24 years Miss Bacon has served as principal of the Marquette School, 4015 McPherson avenue. She was first appointed as a teacher in September, 1863, after graduating from the Normal School. Her first assignment was the old Madison School, then located at 209 Chouteau avenue. She served there as a teacher for nine years, and was then promoted to a principalship at the Eliot School. She was transferred to the Franklin School in 1890, where she remained until September, 1895, going from that school to the Marquette.

When she began her work there were 22 schools with an enrollment of 12,349, and an average daily attendance of 7715. There were 162 teachers. At the present time there are 105,795 pupils enrolled, with an average daily attendance of 80,000 and 2554 teachers are employed.

MOUNT ST. ROSE HOSPITAL CARED FOR 471 PATIENTS IN YEAR

The annual report of Mount St. Rose Sanatorium, under the management of the Sisters of St. Mary, shows that 471 patients were cared for during the year of 1918. Of this number 108 were pay patients, 174 part-paying patients and 189 charity patients.

While Mount St. Rose is a private institution without endowment fund, the Sisters of St. Mary care for more than twice as many charity wards as pay patients.

Mount St. Rose was the first hospittal established exclusively for the treatment of tubercular patients, and is the largest institution of its kind in the Middle West.

There will be a meeting today at the hospital, 9101 South Broadway, to arrange for the annual bazar, which will take place on Sept. 1. This is the only source of revenue the Sisters of St. Mary has for the caring of charity wards.

SPANISH NOVELIST SAYS AMERICAN VALOR WON VICTORY

ve that all of them were mad- ened by ether. Only those who re accustomed to it before the ar used it, and those who might ave become addicts to it during the rst weeks of the campaign in or- er to forget their danger. The thers had the stimulus of enthusi- sm, of the need to triumph at all osts, of the national pride that made hem commit the maddest follies. In he battle of the Yser, late in 1914, he German Generals ordered all he battalions of volunteers, made up of young men of Berlin and other cities who had enlisted, after listening to the speeches of the Pan-Germans, to pass through the marshes under the Belgian artillery fire. It was the greatest slaughter of the war. The cannon swept down the men in masses. Yet they did not retreat. As long as there was a man left they advanced, all singing, with an inexplicable intoxication. Many of them, imitating the barbarians of old, tied themselves together so that in this way one who became frightened could not retreat, as the others dragged him forward.

The British in the first year of the war showed themselves equally indifferent to danger and death. At first they could not make the English soldier dig trenches. They considered it a dishonor to their national pride to take a spade and dig out the ground like a day laborer. They preferred being shot down and dying in the field, victims of a shrewder enemy who knew how to hide in the ground. In their offensive the English advanced in a straight line, seeing only the enemy ahead of them, and pursuing them without taking the trouble to explore the towns and the farms on both sides of their march, nests in which the Germans were ambushed. Then when they had to retreat found themselves cut off completely and flanked by an enemy they had left behind.

But the war modified this blind, heroic daring, this bold indifference. Not that the old soldier was less brave after his brilliant debut; he was simply more cautious, more astute and more appreciative of life, and learned how to defend it with greater precautions.

In a word, the young, inexperienced soldier was carried away by his enthusiasm. The veteran of three long, monotonous years of war had lost this, but he had, on the contrary, acquired something more solid, more lasting—the sense of his duty and the firm determination to do it.

Fought Like Playing a Game.

This also occurs in ordinary life. Great things of rapid execution we accomplish with enthusiasm. But enthusiasm is a flood tide that lasts a certain length of time, hours, days, even weeks; but not years. Nobody can spend his life in a perpetual state of enthusiasm. The more solid, enduring achievements we accomplish with a quiet faith, with silent, persistent labor, with an unimpassioned, sad, assiduous determination.

The American army began like the others, showing from the first a maximum of daring heroism. Before going to the war the men saw its most brilliant, daring aspect; the bayonet charges, the advances through the rain of machine-gun fire, the hand-to-hand combat. And so when they meet these things in reality they are not surprised. What does surprise and break even the firmest will is the other pale, melancholy side of war; the filth and the boredom of the trenches; the long monotonous operations without visible results; the torture of the rain, the cold, the mud, the snow, the bad food, the vermin, without a sight of the enemy, without understanding what it is all about.

The Americans attacked with the fervor and enthusiasm of youth. They brought in something new with their good humor and their healthy fun. They went to death as though they were playing a new game, and ran toward the enemy as though there were a bet on to see which one could get there first.

The soldiers of Mangin had once felt this same heroic confidence, this indifference to death, but it had long since been forgotten. Three years of this war were equal to 30 or 40 ordinary life.

And this was why the heroic "poilus" of Gen. "Butcher," the professional warriors of Africa, the adventurers of the Foreign Legion, the heroes of the bloodiest combats, those fighters, young in age but old in experience and exploits, felt a twinge of envy when they saw the American divisions advance, calm, irresistible, bearing the enemy before them. It was the emotion old heroes feel when they see lads repeating with the fresh vigor of youth the exploits that in other days were their own pride.

All the world knows what the American army did when it was finally organized as a separate unit. Their swift action in the Meuse-Argonne battle was a fitting climax to the exploits of the single divisions at Chateau-Thierry and in Mangin's counter offensive.

Pershing's General Attack.

Sept. 26 Pershing began his attack. He was on difficult ground, thickly covered with woods and broken by declevities, where the Germans had taken advantage of the lay of the land to fortify their positions strongly. On the following day the Americans had gained over four miles, capturing 8000 prisoners and 700 cannon. Six days later they had driven the Germans out of their first two lines of defense and were attacking their third position. On Oct. 21 they took the fourth line of the German defenses; on Nov. 5 they passed the Meuse and on Nov. 10 then entered Sedan and the road to Metz was open to the allies. The Germans could hold out no longer. The great road from Lille to Metz, which supplied all their extensive front, was cut.

The same German General Staff that had from the first so carefully garbled their reports from the front had to admit in a communique the defeat which Pershing had inflicted on them.

This army, raised in a few months, arrived in time to participate, not as an auxiliary force of the allies, but on its own responsibility in a long and difficult battle, that of the Meuse-Argonne.

The Germans threw 22 divisions into this battle against the Americans. Gen. Pershing had 580,000 men on the firing line, and 140,000 casualties, which shows the importance of this decisive victory and the boldness with which the Americans defied death.

I have talked with French soldiers who fought with the Americans. They are men of letters, careful observers, capable of expressing their impressions with exactitude.

They all admired the joy, the self-confidence, the good humor with which these sturdy lads, so recently arrived from America, advanced under fire. The Crusaders of Liberty attacked as though they were invulnerable, and when they fell never to rise again, there was something about them that distinguished them from the other dying.

"I don't mean to say that they died in a different manner," said one of these writer-soldiers. "All soldiers die alike, and all the allies fought for the same just cause. But in those American heroes there was a sort of amazement and shock at dying, as though they felt it a great injustice, and this astonishment was reflected in their kindly, child-like eyes. Perhaps it was surprise at realizing that a citizen of a free country could die at the hands of a despotic monarchy's automaton soldier. Perhaps in his last gleams of consciousness he caught a glimpse of the absurdity of this old world in which the soldier of a republic that has no desire to conquer or enslave, and aspires only to the establishment of peace, must lose his life to bring liberty to the very ones that kill him."

IRISH ALLIANCE FOR REPUBLIC

Terms Dominion League Prosal "Imperial Danger of First Magnitude."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 5.—The Irish Unionist Alliance, replying to a manifesto issued recently by the "Irish Dominion League," asserts that the first act of any freely elected Parliament in full control of Irish economic and military resources would be to proclaim an Irish republic.

"The Alliance trusts and believes that those concerned for the peace, order and progress of Ireland,' the reply says, "will resolutely decline to support a policy which, if successful, would constitute an imperial danger of the first magnitude."

A manifesto issued June 27 by the "Irish Dominion League' proposed the establishment of self-government in Ireland, but with Ireland remaining within the British Empire.

Famous Actress Tells How She Uses Derwillo to Beautify Her Complexion

MISS ETHEL CLAYTON

New York—Miss Ethel Clayton, the clever young actress now successfully starring under the Paramount banner, is famous for her beautiful complexion. When her friends inquired about it she said: "It's all due to a toilet preparation called derwillo, which I use twice daily. The experience I have had prompts me to make my secret public. This wonderful derwillo instantly beautified my skin, and its continued use has made the results permanent." When Miss Edna Wilder, the well-known beauty specialist, was interviewed in reference to Miss Clayton's remarkable complexion, stated: "Anyone can have a beautiful complexion when they know how. It's a very simple process. I use the same article in my work, and until you try it you have no idea of the marvelous results. The very first application will astonish you. Go to the toilet counter of any drug or department store and get a bottle of derwillo, then make the following test: Examine your skin critically before your mirror, note carefully its appearance, then apply derwillo as directed. After you have made the first application look in your mirror again and note the surprising change. A peach-like color mounts the cheeks; a baby softness comes to the skin; it [illegible] radiantly beautiful. It is wonderful for a dark, sallow skin, shiny nose freckles, tan, oily skin, sun spots, coarse pores, pimples, blackheads, chapped, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles and many other facial blemishes. Derwillo method is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. It is superior to face powder, as perspiration does not effect it, therefore it stays on better. Thousands who have used it have had the same results as Miss Clayton, and I am sure if you will give it a fair trial you will become just as enthusiastic as I am and always use it in preference to any other powder or beautifier."

NOTE—When asked about Derwillo one of our leading druggists said: 'It is truly a wonderful beautifier, away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to anyone who is dissatisfied, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the product possessed unusual merit." It is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all department stores and up-to-date druggists, including Wolff-Wilson the Judge & Dolph, the Johnson Bros. and the Enderle Stores.—ADVERTISEMENT.

MRS. KIMMEL TO SING FOR THE MILK FUND

Col. Stuever Will Donate Entire Proceeds of Theatrical Performance Friday for the Babies.

The appearance of Mrs. Karl Kimmel at Forest Park Highlands Theater between vaudeville acts July 10, for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund will be a notable event. She will sing three new songs, "The Americans Come," "A Little Bit of Honey," and "Somewhere Someone Is Waiting for Me."

Her voice is excellent and easily ranks her among the foremost of St. Louis' artists.

The usual admission will be charged, and the entire receipts of both the afternoon and evening performances, by arrangement with Col. A. C. Stuever, president of the Forest Park Highlands Co., will be donated to the Milk and Ice Fund.

SHE WILL SING THURSDAY AT HIGHLANDS FOR BABIES

MRS. KARL KIMMEL.

"MIKADO" IS THIS WEEK'S OPERA BILL

Gilbert and Sullivan Classic Fourth Work Given in Outdoor Cycle.

This week's offering of the open-air opera season at the Municipal Theater, in Forest Park, beginning tomorrow night, will be "The Mikado, or, the Town of Titipu," which, since its production in 1885, has come to be recognized as the greatest of the comic opera classics created by W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan.

It will offer the best vehicle the season has yet afforded for the talents of Frank Moulan, who is cast as Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner. The principals in the production will be as follows:

Nanki-Poo.......Craig Campbell.
Pish-Tush........Carl Gantvoort.
Pooh-Bah...Charles E. Gallagher
Milado of Japan—
William Danforth.
Ko-Ko............Frank Moulan.
Yum-Yum......Blanche Duffield.
Pitti-Sing......Carolyn Andrews.
Beep-Bo............Cereta Ross.
Katisha..........Mildred Rogers.

The scenes of this work are especially adapted to outdoor settings, and it is promised that the natural beauties of the theater will be utilized to the full in picturing the exotic gardens of the land of the cherry blossom and crysanthemum.

CASSIDY ASSAILS COMPENSATION LAW

Replies to Letter Questioning Arguments as to Moentmann Case.

The Workmen's Compensation law, passed at the last session of the Legislature, did not have the united support of the labor unions, and the St. Louis Building Trades Council is circulating a petition to refer the law to the voters. On June 22 the Post-Dispatch published a letter from Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council, attacking the law, on the ground that the Moentmann case proved that an injured employe might get far better compensation by legal process.

On July 1, in the Letters From the People column, an employer signing himself "O. J. L." took issue with Cassidy, claiming that the Moentmann case was not a typical one and that it would be well for workmen to wait and see how the compensation law worked out in practice.

Cassidy Makes Reply.

Following is Cassidy's reply to "O. J. L.":

"Editor, Post-Dispatch:

"I regretted very much to read the veiled attack by some man or woman on my motives in declaring the present workmen's compensation law of no benefit to the working people of Missouri. This person who signs the attack as 'O. J. L.' is perfectly entitled to his or her opinion and ought to express it freely without fear of becoming involved in a controversy with labor unions or their leaders, but I will venture the opinion that 'O. J. L.' is an employer of nonunion labor, who does not believe that the working people have a right to think for themselves, or if they have, he does not believe in permitting them to do so. I don't care if 'O. J. L.' does resent what he terms as my 'unfair and unreasonable attitude.' No doubt every one who does not agree with 'O. J. L.' is in the same class as myself. Personalities should be cast aside and insinuations that I am spreading propaganda against some labor men who supported this bill should be omitted. It has no place here. I am not a labor leader; I am their hired man. They pay me a salary and I do as I am instructed. My position in the compensation law discussion is to show good and sufficient reason why our organizations are opposed to it, and I am going to do that to the best of my ability. When I can no longer defend the position of organized labor I will be relegated to the ranks and another and more capable man will take up the burden where I left off or failed, and I will be only too glad to aid him in making a success of his new duties. I have no selfish purposes. The backing I have received from the members of organized labor are responsible for me being where I am today, when they feel that I have outlived my usefulness they will act to suit their judgment, and I will obey. But while I have a duty to perform for them they need have no fear that I will not do it without hope for reward.

"Every labor union member, and, in fact, every workingman and woman who knows anything about compensation laws, knows perfectly well that a just compensation law is a real benefit to them. But this Missouri law is not. It is of no benefit to any person earning more than $22.50 a week, and of little benefit to anyone earning less, as you will see from the following:

"Contrary to the belief of 'O. J. L.,' I do not 'rush into print.' I have many requests for articles on compensation, but as it is a matter our people are interested in I am glad to give them, and I appreciate the courtesy of the press in publishing them.

"Now, for the Moentmann case. 'O. J. L.' says it is 'unfair to take the case of a person earning $6 a week as a comparison.' Why is it? I could not help that this girl did not get more money. A lot of people earning small pay get injured. They are entitled to as much consideration as those getting larger salaries. It doesn't make any difference in the figures, in fact I was figuring her case at full wages. If she had been earning more pay the judgment would have been increased proportionately, and at the end of 50 years she would have had more money than was shown in my letter of June 22. 'O. J. L.' said that under the bill presented by the State Federation of Labor (which is referred to as 'my' bill) Miss Moentmann would have received only $180 more than she would have received under the present law. According to 'O. J. L.,' she would have received $6 a week under the Federation bill. He is not well posted; according to Section 17, she would have received not less than $8 during the continuance of the disability. Figuring 50 years, or 2600 weeks, at $8 she would have received $20,800 in addition to compensation for the loss of her arms and $200 doctor bill, but by the way the bill was amended by the Legislature she would have received $6 a week for the same period or $15,600 in addition to the compensation for the loss of her arms and $200 for the doctor. Under the Federation bill 'O. J. L.' said she would have received compensation for the loss of her arms for 30 weeks more than under the present law, which, at $6 is $180, while the fact is she would have been entitled to the 30 weeks at $8 or a total of $240 more. The total difference would be about $5400. Of course, this is no small item. But as it is now the interest she is receiving on her investment in Loan Bonds will exceed the total amount she would have received under the present compensation law, then she will have the principal to fall back on if pinched. This amounts to more than $16,500 with attorney's fees paid. Not half bad.

Under Section 22 part (C) of the Federation bill a person under 21 is allowed additional compensation in proportion to the increase in wages he would have reasonably received if he had not been injured, but the present law makes no such provision. This is another thing worth crying about.

"'O. J. L.' cites figures for a man 25 years, earning $30 a week, and shows he would have received in 40 years, if injured like Miss Moentmann, the sum of $31,580. Under the Federation bill he would have received 66 2-3 per cent of his wages which would have been $20 a week.

Loss of right arm
200 weeks at $20	$4000
Loss of left arm
180 weeks at $20	3600
Medical fee	200
Additional Compensation for 40 years, 2080 weeks at $20	41,600
Total	$49,400

"Under the Federation bill as amended he would have received $18 a week which would be.

Right arm	$3600
Medical fee	200
2080 weeks	37,440
Total	$44,440

"Of course the Federation bill would have been the best, but the amended bill was not so bad—the difference in a case of this kind would be $12,860, but then the workingman is not entitled to that much according to the advocates of this law. Now let us see how the man in this case would fare. In 40 years he would have to meet these bills:

Room $3 a wk. for 2080 wks.	$ 6040
Board $5 a wk. for 2080 wks	10,400
Attendant $10 wk for 2080 wks	20,800
Laundry, shave, hair cut at 50 cents	1,040
Clothes and shoes and amusements	1,500
	$39,780

"Under the present law, at the end of 40 years he would be short $8200 and would be an object of charity—just the thing compensation is supposed to avoid.

"If this same man was not injured and had worked the 40 years at $30 a week, he would have earned $60,400; his injury under the present law would have meant a loss of $28,820. Is there any good reason why an injured person should not be reimbursed an amount equal to the loss of his earning capacity, and that money paid to him in a lump sum so he can invest it? If there is, what is the reason. I do not want the workingman to get any more than he is entitled to, but I do want to see him get that.

"'O. J. L.' doesn't understand much about this law. He doesn't need to take offense at what is said about the employer. The employer has nothing to do with making settlements—even if he thinks the employe is not getting enough he cannot give more—that is all paid by the insurance company. If the employer pays the injured man or woman anything it is deducted from the amount to be paid by the insurance company, and according to section 3, I say the insurance companies will claim all injuries were caused by negligence of the injured employe or a fellow employe. If 'O. J. L.' does not believe that, let him read some of the appeals taken in other states. They pay no claims that they can avoid paying.

"I don't care who said that was the third best law in the country; the other two better than this are of no benefit to the workingman and his family. For example, write to the Iowa commission about the accident at the starch factory recently, or to the Pennsylvania commission, and inquire about the Wilkes-Barre mine disaster, or to Oklahoma about the mine accident there. You will get the facts then. Don't take anybody's word for it; get the real facts. If this is a good law, I pity those fellows in other states that have bad laws.

"Our council has decided we want this law left to the voters of Missouri to say whether they want it or not, and we will see that they get a chance to express their opinion at the polls. When that is done, good-by compensation law. We will be at the next Legislature and the following one until we get a law that is worth while. I hope 'O. J. L.' will tell us who he is, so we can place him on our mailing list.

"MAURICE J. CASSIDY, Secretary Building Trades Council."

Buttermilk Creates Beauty Overnight

Delightful New Vanishing Cream Containing True Buttermilk Makes You Look Years Younger or Money Back.

The first application of Howard's Buttermilk Cream will astonish you. It creates beauty almost like magic, but the most wonderful thing about it is the fact that whilst it turns the dullest and most lifeless complexion to radiant beauty and makes red or rough arms snowy white, yet there is not the slightest sign of its use after application. It actually vanishes from sight, and the most heated atmosphere will not produce the least shininess or greasiness of the skin.

There is no secret about it, nor is there any doubt about the result—it's just common ordinary Buttermilk in the form of a wonderful cream gently massaged with the finger tips around the corners of the eyes and mouth.

To prove this to your complete satisfaction obtain a small quantity of Howard's Buttermilk Cream from your druggist and all toilet goods counters on the money back if dissatisfied plan. The directions are simple and it costs so little that any girl or woman can afford it.—ADV.

SALOON CORNERS SAID TO BE IN GOOD DEMAND

Brewing Secretary Discusses Possibilities of Present Occupants Retaining Them.

That saloons cannot exist profitably under wartime prohibition unless 2.75 per cent beer is declared to be nonintoxicating and other soft drinks and ice cream are added to their offerings, is the opinion of C. Norman Jones, secretary of the St. Lewis Brewing Association.

If 2.75 per cent beer is declared to be intoxicating, saloons cannot continue to pay state license and rents such as they now pay as dispensaries of liquors, even if ice cream and soft drinks are added, is the further opinion of Jones.

Further, if such beer as now is obtainable is declared to be a soft drink, requiring no state license, and saloons cease to be saloons but commercial enterprises paying rents in proportion to other commercial enterprises, the question of profitable operation of saloons as soft drink establishments will still be an experiment, though one which many saloon keepers are willing to make, Jones says.

Saloons commonly pay 10 to 25 per cent higher rents than other lines of business on no less desirable corners. Saloons having leases taken out in the last 12 years—and that includes the larger number of the 1600 that formerly existed here—are protected against loss in this emergency. Breweries were foresighted enough to recognize that prohibition was not impossible and advised and caused clauses in saloon leases which permit the leases to be abrogated at such time as statute prevents the uses of the buildings for saloon purposes. Thus most are in position to continue occupancy, but demand lower rents if their saloons cease to be saloons and become soft drink places.

Those saloonkeepers who do not have such lease clauses are being buoyed up by the hope that they will be permitted to reopen in autumn.

Real estate men show no symptoms of distress over the possibility of losing a large number of saloon leases. Many of them believe that any depression will be only temporary and that desirable corners, such as saloons invariably occupy, will be seized for some other line of business. In fact there already is a brisk demand for saloon buildings for use in the soft drink and confectionery business. Several buildings which a brief period ago, were saloons are being overhauled and equipped for new lines. Most of this work is the result of actual renting, not a rehabilitation to attract renters.

FORMER KAISER WORST ENEMY OF GERMANY, SAYS VICE-ADMIRA

Naval Officers Accused of "Undeniable Cowardice" in "Disclosures About the Breakdown" by Foss.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 15.—The former German Emperor is termed superficial, a gambler, "a dilettante of the worst kind, and the worst enemy Germany has had since 1902," by Vice Admiral Foss in his revelations entitled, "Disclosures about the Breakdown." The Vice Admiral charges that the Emperor let things drop that he espoued passionately, after he had lost interest in them. In his conviction that he understood everything the former Emperor, he says, went so far as to participate in a contest arranged by the Navy Department for plans to construct an armored cruiser.

The Vice Admiral ascribes the breakdown of the fleet to lack of decision and civilian courage among the officers, lack of discipline and forgetfulness of duty, even undeniable cowardice.

Foss gives as the causes of war, first, the "peculiarity of the German people;" second, that of the Emperor, and, third, the huge power in the hands of the Emperor. He takes the leaders to task, and says, Admiral von Tirpitz was not a proper leader; that Von Scheer carried out the Skagerak fight with faulty tactics; that Von Hoetzendorff was incompetent but was made chief of staff because of his relationship and friendship with Admiral con Mueller and Herr Ballin.

$3,300,000 IRRIGATION SYSTEM TO BE CONSTRUCTED IN TEXAS

110,000 Acres of Land to Be Affected by System Near Wichita, Falls.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WICHITA FALLS, Texas.—At an estimated cost of $3,300 000 an irrigation system is to be constructed near here for the purpose of watering approximately 110,000 acres of land. An irrigation district will be formed to embrace the proposed acreage and under the state law bonds will be issued to the amount of $30 per acre for the purpose of financing the project. Surveys have already been made for the proposed dams and main canals and the formal organization of the district will be accomplished soon. Vernon L. Sullivan of El Paso is consulting engineer in charge of designing, financing and constructing the works. The plans provide for building a dam across the Big Wichita River, creating a water storage reservoir of a capacity of 500,000 acre feet of water, and covering an area of 14.000 acres. Besides the main dam a diversion dam will be built.

ed within me, I endeavor to call my nerves by appraising the dimensions of the assemblage. I figure it to be disappointingly small considering the earlier estimates of the promoter. The relatively cheaper seats, those at the far upper circles of the bowl, are not more than one-third filled, proving that the proletariat did not see their way clear to giving up $10 apiece for the privilege of perching on hard boards an eighth of a mile away from the ring. Moreover, the holders of the lesser priced spaces are now edging down into the forty and fifty dollar sections, where they find plenty of room. Tex Rickard will make some money, but he won't make all the money there is. Likewise, there are not as many women among those present as were expected. We while away the next few minutes observing two featherweights as they brush the adolescent down off each other.

3:18.—Willard is now reliably reported to be in his dressing room and all right with the world up to now.

What, with one thing and another, including a bayonet drill by a squad of United States Marines, it's 4 o'clock, and still hot weather when the main attractions push their respective gross tonnage through the ropes. To me the cheering which greets them seems tepid, not to say, lukewarm, but when one is already grilling on his own account it takes considerable warmth on the part of others deeply to impress him. For the time being the ring abounds in promoters, seconds, photographers, announcers and others, but eventually the congestion abates and we have a chance to appraise the appearance of the two most conspicuous individuals on earth at present writing.

For accurate descriptions of the men, their conditions and their demeanor see accounts by the experts. No two accounts will agree, so you are sure of that variety which is the spice of prize fight stories by experts.

Bell Has Jangled Sound.

The bell rings. The bell is cracked or else a defective clapper and gives off a jangled sound. The men stand up, advance upon each other, measure each other with their eyes, fence with their gloved fists, fiddle with their sandled feet, then lash out with their arms.

The comedy overture is over, although we don't sense it yet and the tragedy is starting. I am aware that Willard's huge right arm which looks like the mid section of a brown python's body, with a hand which moves almost as slowly as a gorged python might, has slid harmless over the bouncing bulletin head of his opponent.

I am aware that Dempsey, who bulks almost dwarfish against the outline of the ponderous Kansan, has shot in a blow which lands on Willard's jaw with a thud which must be plainly audible to spectators sitting 15 rows behind the second row where I sit. A great sound, part howl of joy, part gasp of astonishment, rises from all about me. Willard's massive legs are giving way under him. He is sinking down upon his haunches with one mitted paw grasping the ropes and the thumb of that paw opening and closing like a lobster's claw. The referee hovers over him counting. Dempsey poises five feet away, ready to renew the assault so suddenly undertaken and so nearly successful. Why, the first knockdown has been scored and the fight not yet twenty seconds old.

Posture of Tired Wrestler.

Willard sits there quite calmly. His posture is that of a tired Greek wrestler. You have seen the like of the posture in ancient marbles and bronze. In the nick of time he lifts his vast shape, gets upon all fours and finally rears himself erect.

A human catapault, a living slungshot, descends upon him, and again Goliath of Gath is overthrown before he has put the weight of his glancing glove upon the contender.

I see a vast tottering shape of a man—tottering, teetering, wabbling, falling, rising again, falling again. I see a foolish grin become fixed and set upon a dazed, stunned, broad face. I see a cut open and widen upon the brow of that face and I see blood begin to trickle down across the cheek. I see a defense presented but it is do defense at all, a counter-offensive undertaken which is a mockery upon the name of counter offensive. In contemplation of this spectacle, I almost lose sight of Dempsey, who greedy for victory and disdaining all pretense of protecting himself from the slow, feeble strokes of the giant, goes boring in, slashing, chopping, flailing, mauling at the feeble yet obstinate mass of brawn which he means to put down and keep down.

I lose count of the knockdowns now so fast they come, have eyes only for that great face from which every vestige of expression has been abolished, from which all sense has fled, but which still wears through the blood and sweat that frozen, meaningless grin, the grin which a man who had died laughing at some grim joke might continue to wear even in death.

Eye Entirely Closed.

The right eye is entirely closed now, and the left one glaring out of the mask seems three times its normal size. The round ends, the statisticians must tell. I only know that it ended with Willard sitting down battered past the power to lift himself. The crowd thinks the fight is over, so evidently does Dempsey. A score of men leap into the ring. They are driven out of it in a babble of meaningless confusion, out of the chaos emerges the realization that the merciful bell has saved Willard from the ignominy of a one-round beating. It saved him, but only for the moment; saves him from something worse.

To me the second round is a sort of nightmare, most unpleasant to look upon. The beaten man hangs with his punisher literally holding himself upright by using the other as his prop. He is like a poled ox, this poor, stubborn, dumbly courageous leviathan.

Blows rain upon him—belly, face, face again, belly again—until his tortured abdomen flinches and heaves, until the entire right side of his face where that relentless left fist keeps landing has turned too a pulp, until his jaw lolls down almost on his chest, until streams of blood streak with long, thick crimson lacings. The retaliatory blows he offers are delivered mechanically. They have no power in them. They do no harm. Dempsey shakes them off as a man might shake off raindrops, and that to me, is round two.

Like a Great Hooked Fish.

Have you ever seen a great fish hooked and played until it is dragged ashore still feebly threshing about with its stomach swollen, its eye goggling, its jaw torn wide open by the weight of the barb. Well, I have seen this sight before and when next I see it again I shall think of Jess Willard as he looks in round three of this fight which is no fight at all but a massacre.

The bell sounds for round four, but there is to be no round four. From the seats upon which he lies all slumped down Willard cannot lift himself to meet the dancing, slighter figure of Dempsey waiting there to deliver the inevitable finishing blow.

One of his seconds flings a bloody towel aloft in token of defeat. My head where I sit goes rushing around as excited men leap upon the stage and cheer the unbruised victor. They lift him upon their shoulders and bear him away. But a few of us are watching rather the groggy, broken shape with its lolled jaw, its closed eye and its silly grin on a swollen face which lies in the loser's corner with only two or three sympathizing friends about it. You can't be blithesome and gay writing about a thing like that, now can you?

The Pianola is a Companionable Sort of a Home Mate

Of course you love music; we all do. We may not all love the same kind of music; but we all love some kind of music. And we every one of us miss it if there isn't music in our home.

You would get a world of enjoyment out of a Pianola. You don't have to know music to enjoy a Pianola—all you have to do is to love music.

The Pianola plays the kind of music you like best and plays that music at its best. And you can make yourself a part of Pianola music. This player-piano gives you such full and complete control of the fingers of air that it is just like playing the piano by hand.

Another reason—
EFFICIENCY

Retailers have been forced to adopt the methods of Big Business. To keep costs of operation at the minimum is the aim of every progressive merchant. Unnecessary work and unnecessary steps play their parts in high costs. Hundreds of up-to-date meat merchants have found that they can have real efficiency in their markets with a

HUSSMANN DISPLAY CASE [PATENTED.]

The Missouri Packing Company was one of the very first concerns to realize this. For over three years it has been profiting by the elimination of all the little leaks that increase costs. Read what Mr. Schmidt says below. He is a successful man of broad experience. He tells how HUSSMANNS are serving him.

You, too, can make your store more efficient. You can save steps, cut your ice bill in half, keep your meats from spoiling and increase your sales. A HUSSMANN will do these things for you. Why delay? Why not be enjoying the larger business a HUSSMANN always brings. Call, write, phone or wire. We'll be glad to give you complete information.

Over three years' use

"Before we installed HUSSMANNS, over three years ago, we were compelled to use three or four men to carry the meats back into the large cooler in the rear of our store in the evenings after the shop was closed. The next morning these men were obliged to come down to the shop about 15 or 20 minutes before opening time and get the meats out again from the big cooler to put on display again. Now this is all a nightmare of the past. In the evenings, we now leave the meat in your display cases overnight and in the morning they are in perfect condition and ready for the first customer, so you can readily see what a saving this case has accomplished." Yours very truly,

CHINA REMOVING DUST OF CENTURIES WITH EDUCATION

Heritage of Dead Civilizations Being Discarded as Dawn of New Ideas Turn Country Upside Down.

PEKIN (By Mail).—Chine is being turned upside down. The dust of centuries is being removed. The heritage of dead civilizations is being discarded. Men are raising their eyes to the dawn of new things. Women are drinking deep from the chalice of equality. Old gods are being confounded. Old superstitions are falling away.

China is being turned upside down. The old order changeth. The heathen has prayed to idols and has prayed in vain. Scholarship is no longer confined to the robed priests of Buddha and Confucius. Schools and colleges are changing that. The diseased no longer die unheeded. Hospitals and dispensaries are changing that.

China is being turned upside down and the ambassadors of the New Freedom are the missionaries of the church. China knows it and is glad of it.

And not the least of this work is the work being done by the Episcopal Church. Her ambassadors are giving to China a service of education and inspiration. And it is to improve this service that the church looks to its nation-wide campaign.

Show Deep Impression.

Two incidents show how deep an impression the church has made on the minds of the people.

The Governor of a certain province had been shot by an assassin. Instantly the street was a turmoil. Men ran here and there in confusion. One alone acted, and he, a horseman galloped through the streets to the Episcopal Mission Hospital. In the hour of need their thoughts turned to the church.

Again, when the revolution carried all before it a certain other Governor fled for protection, not to the power behind his office, not to the bayonets of foreign powers, but to the house of an Episcopal missionary.

It is among the women of China that the most striking work has been done. Before, they were downtrodden slatterns. Today they are of an equality with men.

Under the old conditions woman was a pitiable creature in a degraded position. Confucius said: "Women are human beings, but they are of a lower state than men, and can never attain to an equality with men."

Under the old order a man and his wife never walked together on the street; they never went together to the house of their friends; they never went together to places of amusement. In the household, except in cases of extreme poverty, the wife never sat down with her husband to a meal. By the custom of centuries through the teaching of the false, the father and his sons ate first, the wife and her daughters ate afterwards.

Women at Same Table.

Today in the homes of Chinese Christians one finds the wife at the table with her husband and her daughters there, also, for daughters no longer are regarded as burdens, but are sent to school and cared for equally with boys. Nor may a man keep concubines and divorce his wife at will. All that is past and forbidden, and cast down.

Not long ago in China suffering and distress were everywhere and the lame and the blind were seen helpless, often dying, in the streets. Now hospitals have been established, dispensaries are in operation and orphanages have been erected. At first these Chinese thought the missionary doctors were sorcerers; then they thought they were incomprehensible mysteries; now, though they still cannot understand why they do so much good for nothing, they see that good being done and are forced into a position of continuous inquiry. And thus are they brought into touch with the priciples of Christianity.

Of a similar nature is the impression made upon them by the education only to turn to the work of the two Episcopal universities, St. John's and Boone, to understand why this is so. From these universities have come such men as Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to the United States; Alfred Sze Sao-Ke, Ambassador to Great Britain; W. W. Yen, Minister to Germany at the time of the outbreak of the war; I. C. Suez, of the board of foreign affairs in the central Government; Philip Tyau, in the Chinese Legation at London; T. T. Wong, director of Chinese Government students, who was recently assassinated at Washington; T. Z. Sung, secretary of Chinese Government students at Washington; Y. T. Tsur, president of the Tsinghua Government College for U. S. A. indemnity students at Pekin, and C. T. Chao, vice president of that college; L. N. Chang, the only Chinese lawyer admitted to the Western Legal Association at Hangkow; Y. J. Soo, founder and president of the Shanghai High School, a private school with 500 pupils; T. H. Wu, head physician of the Nanzing municipal dispensary; Y. N. Zung, head physician of the Sungkiang City Hospital, a private institution, and a host of others in the Government and in educational and hospital work.

Advocates Less Beer for Germany.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, July 3.—A Mulhausen newspaper published recently an article stating that 5,000,000,000 pounds of barley were used in Germany during the war for making beer, although 500,000 persons died in that time owing to lack of proper food. The newspaper advocates reduction of beer production as a patriotic duty.

Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco

Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York: Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, says: Many men who smoke, chew or snuff incessantly and who are seemingly healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco, and thousands would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco. The chief habit-forming principle of tobacco, is nicotine, a deadly poison which, when absorbed by the system, slowly affects the nerves, membranes, tissues and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, others with catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, mental confusion, etc. Others may suffer from heart disease, bronchial trouble, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness or even cancer or the common affliction known as tobacco heart. If you use tobacco in any form you can easily detect the harmful effects by making the following simple tests: Read aloud one full page of a book. If, in the course of reading your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct, and you must frequently clear your throat, the chances are that your throat is affected by catarrh and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble. Next, in the morning before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be a victim of functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke, chew or snuff to quiet your nerves, you are a slave to the tobacco habit, and are positively poisoning yourself with the deadly drug, nicotine. In either case you have just two alternatives—keep on with the self-poisoning process irrespective of the dangers and suffer the consequences, or give up the habit and escape the dangers. You can overcome the craving and stop the habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula. Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol tablets, take one tablet after each meal, and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco, the craving will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system your general health will quickly improve.

Note—When asked about Nicotol tablets, one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit; away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol tablets are sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists, including the Judge-Dolph, the Wolff-Wilson and the Enderle stores.—ADVERTISEMENT.

ENGINEERS TAMING MISSOURI RIVER

Practice of Stream Biting off Large Chunks of Land is Being Stopped.

LINCOLN, Neb.—The taming of the Missouri River is in progress at several points along the Nebraska-Iowa boundary. It consists in the use of engineering device that has been tried out for months at two different places with so much success that it is being adopted by a number of land owners. Its immediate result is to prevent the river from following its ancient practice of biting off a 20 or 30 foot piece of adjoining land whenever it shifted its channel.

A Lincoln firm, one of the largest real estate operators in this section, has invested heavily in these river lands, buying at spots where the river was menacing farms, on nominal terms, and expects to double or treble its value by this new method of protection. Other land owners are following this example. In fact, an era of speculation in these lands long shunned by the quick-turn fraternity of real estate men has set in along the valley.

The device used consists in the main of reinforced concrete piling, the invention of Supt. Bignell of the Burlington, and grew out of the necessity of finding something besides a wooden piling to protect the company's trackage along the Missouri and Platte Rivers. Through the center of the piling run two iron pipes unconnected. Hydraulic pressure applied from the steam-driven barge from which the piles are swung through the two-inch pipe bores a hole in the subsoil, the weight of the pile pushing it down as far as desired. Through the larger pipe, a four-inch one, another hydraulic pressure stream throws jets through vents in the sides of the piling, which suck up the sediment coming from the bottom boring and reduces the friction. When the pressure is withdrawn the pressure of the surrounding sand holds the pile immovable.

Before the pile is put in place, heavy steel cables are attached and after it is set obstructions in the nature of trees or gates are fastened to the cables. These swing in the current, and as the water flows through them the current is retarded sufficiently to quickly build up a sandbar and this confines the river into a narrow channel and prevents it from cutting into the bank. In flood time another gate is attached and the sandbar piled higher. If the river cuts in above the bar, piling and its appurtenances placed at strategic points quickly build another bar.

KENTUCKY IS SHORT OVER 1000 TEACHERS

Ten Per Cent of High School Teachers Have Left Posts in Last Year.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Attempts to fill vacancies, created when 141 Louisville teachers resigned, by appeal for material, competent or incompetent, from other states have left the city schools still lacking 34 teachers.

Rural schools in the State are 1000 short in comparison with the force of last year.

Teachers, finding that washerwomen, porters and unskilled day laborers received more pay, have sought other employment, according to State officials last night. The high cost of living and low salaries have caused most vacancies, and those teachers who remained in the fold are staying because of their love of the profession despite the poor wage, officials say.

Although it is probable many teachers who left their profession to enter the army will return, J. Virgil Chapman, State Supervisor of Rural Schools, is of the opinion it will be impossible to obtain anything near the number of teachers employed last year unless a substantial increase in salaries is granted. Mr. Chapman estimated the present enrollment of teachers for the coming school year as 1000 short of last year.

V. O. Gilbert, State Supervisor of Instruction, placed a like estimate. He said most of the teachers who had entered the army had returned. Some, he said, are returning daily, but he did not look for sufficient aid from this source.

In the city 34 vacancies remain in the teaching roster and nearly every source of obtaining teachers has been exhausted. An appeal to those in charge of instruction in Indiana brought a few more teachers to Louisville. The Board of Education, it was said, was forced to accept incompetent teachers because of the low salary scale.

It is estimated that 10 per cent of high school teachers in Kentucky have left their positions the last year.

Rural teachers receive between $55 and $60 a month for six months' work, which salary, they say, is insufficient for their needs.

As a last effort, July 5 has been set aside as "Second Hiring day" by State officials in order to offer an opportunity for more teachers to apply for positions.

WORK BEGUN ON REFERENDUM

A movement to have the recently enacted workmen's compensation law referred to a vote of the people of the State has been started, and copies of a circular letter sent over the State by W. H. Douglass, a lawyer with offices in the Federal Reserve Bank Building, state that canvassers who circulate the referendum petitions will be paid at the rate of 10 cents for each bona fide signature.

Douglas said he had been retained by labor organizations to counsel them in obtaining the repeal of the law, which has been denounced as very unsatisfactory by many labor leaders.

NEW OIL REFINERIES MAY COME HERE

Chamber of Commerce Negotiating With Additional Companies to Build Plants in St. Louis.

Negotiations are under way by the Chahmber of Commerce for the location of additional oil refineries in or near St. Louis and members of the Chamber who are familiar with the situation say there is good reason to believe that St. Louis is approaching a period of extensive development as an oil center. At present six refineries are located in the city's industrial district.

The reasons for the expected development are set forth in the following statement from the Chamber of Commerce:

"The reasons St. Louis will grow continuously as an oil refining and distributing center are fundamental, basic and geographical reasons.

"Oil production started in the Pennsylvania fields and developed around that production an enormous industry. The entire Western market was principally supplied by pipe lines, originally laid from Eastern oil fields, and the movement of the oil was from the East to the West.

"With the development of Oklahoma, indications of oil were soon followed by enormous discoveries, the last important discovery in Oklahoma being the Cushing field, which developed suddenly into a production of 300,000 barrels of 55 gallons each per day. Never before in the history of the world, and not even the experiences in India or Russia, have fields of such richness been discovered. Not only was the oil in very large quantity, but it had a high percentage of gasoline content, and was found to contain a large percentage of paraffin, which made the residue highly adapted to the very finest grades of lubricating oils.

Distributing Point Here.

"The ability to manufacture a great many varieties of lubricating oils, in addition to the extraction of benzine, gasoline, naptha and kerosene, is primarily the reason for the establishment of large refineries that could make a veriety of products for the wider distribution, and the ability to serve a wide population with a diversity of products is the principal reason for the selection of St. Louis as the central refining point.

"Following the Cushing development, in 1915, the next year saw an enormous development in the Augusta field in Kansas, developing a production almost equal to that of the Cushing field.

"The year following saw the beginning of the development of the fields in lower Oklahoma and Texas, which are showing a production today far in excess of either of the two former fields.

"The movement of oil has changed in the United States, and it is now moving from the west to the east.

"Modern manufacturing practice always seeks to locate the place of manufacture at a point midway between raw materials and ultimate market, transporting the raw materials as far as economically possible in the direction of the ultimate market, and then stopping at some point where the raw materials can be refined and manufactured and distributed with the best home conditions of labor, railroads and market possible to be found. It is with respect to this point in transit that St. Louis has made the best showing, and following which two large pipe lines have been built into St. Louis, and four new refineries erected here, together with the very material expansion of those already here, which is to be followed, in our judgment, by several other refineries, negotiations with which are at present under way by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

"These refineries are the Roxana Petroleum Co. of Tulsa, Ok.; the Lubrite Oil Co. of Kansas City; the White Star Refining Co. of Detroit, and the Tidewater Oil Co. of New York.

Between Two Fields.

"Coincident with the development immediately to the southwest has come the discovery of oil in enormous quantities in Kentucky. This places St. Louis, therefore, midway between two large and growing fields, and it can draw from either direction, refine and distribute in all directions.

"The oil business is divided into four principal activities: The one is the producer who obtains and leases the acreage, and develops the well. The second factor is the pipe line and the tank car lines and other transportation agencies. The third factor is the refiner, who takes the crude oil and refines it into its various commercial uses. The fourth factor is the marketer and distributor.

"The growth of St. Louis is in the location here of refiners, marketers and distributers, and the location of St. Louis yields the best service to both the producer on one end and the consumer on the other, through the agency of the centrally located refiner.

"Ten years ago St. Louis had two refineries, both of which were relatively small. Both have since expanded and multiplied a good many times over their original size, together with the addition of four large new concerns."

ARMY DISCHARGING 15,000 A DAY

Expected That U. S. Force Will Be Down to Peace Strength Aug. 19.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Army men are now being discharged at an average rate of 15,000 a day, a War Department statement today says. The grand total of discharges to date was given as 2,611,416. If the rate were continued the army will be down to the national defense act strength of 233,000 men by Aug. 19.

The Whole Secret of A Better Tire

Simply a Matter of the Maker's Policies

This you will realize—once you try a Brunswick—that a super-tire is possible only when the name certifies that the maker is following the highest standards.

For tire making is chiefly a matter of standards and policies—cost plus care. Any maker can build a good tire if he cares to pay perfection's price.

All men know Brunswick standards, for Brunswick products have been famous for 74 years.

Formulas, fabrics and standards vary vastly in cost. Reinforcements, plies and thickness are a matter of expense. And these variations affect endurance. It rests with the maker how far he wishes to go—how much he can afford to give.

For there are no secrets nor patents to hold one back.

To ascertain what each maker offers one must analyze and test some 200 tires—as our laboratories have done.

Then it is a matter of combining the best features and building according to the highest standards.

Once you try a Brunswick you will understand how we have built model tires, regardless of factory expense.

Yet Brunswick Tires cost you the same as other like-type tires. Our saving is on selling cost, through our nation-wide organization.

We realize that you expect more from Brunswicks, and we assure you that you get it. ONE Brunswick will tell you the story.

And then you'll want ALL Brunswicks. No other tire, you'll agree, gives so much for your money.

Uniform Tires
Mean Long-Distance Millers
They Look Alike and Wear Alike

MILLER TIRES are built by men who are trained to a championship standard. Only by uniform workmanship, can tires ever be uniform in mileage like the Miller. To train men to our perfection takes much time. We cannot supply all dealers with Miller Tires.

So our policy is to concentrate, as a rule, on the dealer in each locality who will give Miller Tire users exceptional attention. That governed our choice in this city.

We chose a concern that knows that to give real service it must first of all carry a full stock of sizes, so that when you want a Miller Tire in a hurry, you can get it without waiting.

We are impressed especially with their ability to give motorists an expert repair service, and by their reasonable charges.

Before making this selection we canvassed the local field thoroughly. And the Miller agents here are making good with us by making good with you. Are you getting the benefit of what they have to offer?

FORM NORWEGIAN FISHERY

JAPAN SEEKS COTTON DIRECT FROM TEXAS

Banker Studies Prospects of Shipping From Galveston Without Rail Haul.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GALVESTON, Tex.—Tadashi Mukai of New York, representing large banking interests of Japan, is making a tour of Texas with the view of obtaining first-hand information in regard to the cotton crop and the methods of handling the staple. During his visit to Galveston he made an inspection of the port facilities and conferred with W. A. Johnson, vice president of the Galveston Commercial Association.

Mukai said the large Japanese cotton importers preferred having the cotton shipped by boat direct from Galveston to Japanese ports instead of being sent by rail from Texas and the other Southern states to San Francisco and Seattle and thence by boat across the Pacific. The rail rate from Texas to the Pacific Coast is $1.20 for each 100 pounds and the water rate from San Francisco to the Orient an equal amount, he said. Provided a market can be found in Texas for Japanese products, direct shipments will increase in the future and additional Japanese steamship lines will establish regular sailings between Galveston and Nipponese ports, he said.

"Japan is anxious to import more and more Texas cotton," Mukai said. "The spinning industry is growing constantly in Japan and the mill owners prefer American cotton to that from India, as the cotton raised in this country is of the long-staple variety, while that grown in India is of the short-staple variety. Last year Japan imported 1,200,000 bales from India and 600,000 bales from the United States. About 70 per cent of the cotton imports from America were exported from Seattle. Delays and inconveniences in shipping the staple from the Puget Sound port were many and the Japanese importers are desirous of eliminating them by establishing direct shipments from gulf ports.

"If it can be ascertained what Japanese manufactured articles are desired in Texas and a market for them established the shipping business from Galveston to Japan will progress immensely, to the mutual benefit of Texas and Japanese. There are many products used by Americans which can be manufactured at an extremely low cost in Japan. Common laborers there receive about 20 yen or 40 cents a day, while the average common laborer in the United States brings well over $2 a day.

"China, wearing apparel and fabrics of many kinds, leather, matches and toys are a few of the articles manufactured in Japan which could be imported into the United States and sold at a cheaper price than if they were manufactured here or in any European country."

"PROFESSOR" CONVICTED IN SPITE OF HIS EXHIBITION

Jury Likes Fantastic Steps but Believes Story of Young Girl Pupil.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—"One, two, three, four, then you turn thus."

Prof. Calvin Thompson, tall and active, swung around until the tail of his Prince Albert coat stood out behind as he stepped and side-stepped before a jury in Judge F. D. Hutching's division of the Wyandotte County District Court. It was Prof. Thompson's "defense."

Judge and jury gazed admiringly at the pedal defense as the dancing master with here and there a verbal interjection, demonstrated how he taught the "buck and wing dance."

The professor was in court because of a charge sworn to by Ada Bashan, 17 years old, who went to learn the fancy steps at his dancing school, 220 Kansas avenue. To show the jury just what was going on when James Loew, a Police Sergeant, broke into the room, the instructor in the art of "buck and wing dancing," asked permission of Judge Hutchings to "give a few steps" before the jury.

"Well, if you are not too crowded for room," the Judge said.

The dancing teacher then marked off the narrow space before the jury, and proceeded to show just how he gave instructions. The prosecution, however, had produced quite another story by its witnesses and after the jury retired and deliberated, it returned a verdict of "guilty."

BOULDER WILL MARK VISIT OF LAFAYETTE TO MACON

Daughters of American Revolution Will Unveil Memorial on Anniversary.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MACON, Ga.—A huge boulder carved to commemorate the visit of Lafayette to Macon on March 29, 1825, will be unveiled on the next anniversary of the visit through the efforts of the Mary Hammond Washington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. This announcement has just been made by Mrs. J. N. Talley, regent of the chapter.

"Gen. Lafayette stopped at the Wayside Inn," said Mrs. Talley. "Unfortunately, the county jail occupies the site of the old Wayside Inn, but we hope to obtain a desirable location in sight of the new terminal station which will still be close to the site of the inn where the distinguished Frenchman was entertained."

LEATHER PRICES WILD.

BOSTON.—In the leather industry prices are running wild in all markets from raw materials to shoes, according to the Shoe and Leather Reporter. "All brances of the trade," says this authority, "are affected without regard to whether the leather is made from hides or skins, or whether they are imported or of domestic origin.

"Experience seemingly counts for naught in this situation, and no one as yet has been able to devise a practical plan for stabilizing the industry."

BRITISH RESTRICTIONS ON U. S. GOODS WILL STAND

No Change Is Expected Before Next September and Little Is Looked for Then.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 5.—In its review of commercial and economic conditions in Great Britain during June, the American Chamber of Commerce in London says that with the disbandment of the imports consultative council little change may be expected in import restrictions on American goods before September.

Sir Auckland Geddes, Minister of Reconstruction, the report says, has informed Parliament that the Government has a draft of a trade policy prepared in every detail and covering all trades, but it cannot yet be divulged. Sir Auckland claims, it is added, that the policy of restricting imports is justified because it protects British manufacturers and supports sterling exchange and, therefore, he cannot guarantee that the restrictions will be entirely removed after September.

It is increasingly certain, the report continues, that American exports to Europe must suffer eventually "unless America, by buying more foreign goods and securities, enables foreign countries to pay for imports."

In discussing the shipping and coal situation, the chamber's report says: "The Ministry of Shipping estimates that because of strikes and the coal shortage, only 1,000,000 tons of British shipping will be launched in 1919, instead of 2,000,000 tons, as anticipated. British ships carried only 33.6 per cent of United States exports in April, compared with 50.9 per cent in April, 1918. Great Britain's surplus of coal for 1919 for export is estimated officially at 20,000,000 tons. The pre-war surplus for export was 77,000,000 tons. This complicates Great Britain's ability to pay for imports. Strong opposition is developing in business circles and Parliament to nationalization. The Government declares itself as not committed to any policy on coal and says that it has virtually agreed to exclude roads, docks and harbors from the transport bill."

FRENCH OFFICERS WRITE ON ACHIEVEMENTS OF AMERICANS

Published in Their Own Language, Book Is a Complete Record of Feats of A. E. F.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, July 5.—The first book that deals comprehensively with every phase of the American military activities in the war has just been published in their own language by two French officers, whose knowledge of the achievements and methods of the American Expeditionary Force to the Western front surpasses that of all save a very few of their American comrades. They are Lieutenant-Colonel Count de Chambrum and Capt. de Mareches.

These two officers, ever since the arrival two years ago of Gen. Pershing at Boulogne, have been continuously attached to his staff. Capt. de Marches, in fact, met the General in England before Pershing reached France, and crossed the English channel with him. De Chambrun, whose wife is a sister of Representative Nicholas Nongworth of Ohio, was at one time the military attache of the French embassy in Washington.

As a tribute to the A. E. F. the book may well be used, and will be, by order of the French Ministry of Education, as a text book in all the universities and schools of France.

POLICE CATCH ONE OF FOUR AUTO BANDITS AFTER CHASE

Four men walked into the Owl Garage of Harry Bierkes, Fourteenth street and Cass avenue, at 1 o'clock yesterday morning, covered Henry Brockman, a nightwatchman, with revolvers, selected a coupe and drove away. Fifteen minutes later the quartet appeared at Eleventh and O'Fallon streets and held up Kasmi Chasmleski, 1442 North Eleventh street, and Miss Eryenia Belous, who was with him. They took $4.75 and a watch from Chasmleski and a vanity case containing 75 cents from the girl.

Patrolmen from the Carr Street Police Station gave pursuit. One of the robbers escaped in the car. Another was captured after a short chase. The other two got away. He gave his name as Leo Peskie, 27 years old, 1439 North Tenth street. The police later found the car at Thirteenth and Chambers streets.

FRENCH LOSSES HEAVIEST OF ALL IN THE WORLD WAR

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, July 4.—The total losses of the various belligerents during the world war, made public by Deputy Louis Marin, had a staggering effect upon French public opinion. France, in four and one-half years of war, lost one man in every 26 inhabitants; Great Britain, exclusive of dominions, lost one in every 66 of population; Italy, one in every 90 inhabitants.

Germany's losses work out as one man in every 35 inhabitants; Austria-Hungary, one in every 50; Russia, one in every 107 inhabitants.

These figures have been drawn up according to the most recent census, which in the case of France was 1910, since the populations have decreased as shown by official statistics.

FRENCH SOCIETY WILL PROMOTE CLOSER RELATIONS WITH U. S.

Alliance Americaine, Composed of Descendants of Men Who Fought in Revolution, Plans Lectures.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 5.—The Alliance Americaine, an association of descendants of Frenchmen who fought in the Revolutionary War, at its second annual meeting yesterday, decided to enter into close relations with similar American associations in the 48 states of the American union and organize in Paris next winter a series of lectures to bring about development of the friendship of the two countries. The proceeds of these lectures will be devoted to the foundation of traveling scholarships for young Frenchmen desiring to complete their general education in the United States.

The association elected Duke de Broglie, president, and Marquis Pierre de Chambrun, Baron de Contenson, Countess de Warren and Baron de Moniescuieu, vice presidents.

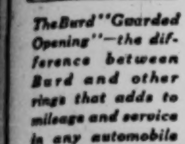
BURD
High Compression PISTON RINGS



The Burd "Guarded Opening"—the difference between Burd and other rings that adds to mileage and service in any automobile motor.

BURD Rings have only recently won the red chevron and returned to commercial life.

Burd Rings mean Power because the "Guarded Opening" seals the combustion chamber against Compression Leaks or oil seeping up on the piston heads.

The "Light Tight" fit obtainable only by the Burd method of casting each ring separately in an individual mould keeps the power of the fuel where it should be—driving against the piston head—giving life to the motor—flexibility to the car—adding to economy and service. Your mechanic knows.

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Deep Seated Uric Acid Deposits Are Dissolved and the Rheumatic Poison Starts to Leave the System Within 24 Hours.

Every druggist in this county is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer in this vicinity that if two bottles of Allenrhu, the sure conqueror of rheumatism, does not stop all agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years and really marvelous results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous and where the patient was helpless.

Allenrhu relieves at once. Immediately after you start to take it the good work begins. It searches out the uric acid deposits, dissolves the secretions and drives rheumatic poison out of the body through the kidneys and bowels.

It's marvelous how quickly it acts. Blessed relief often comes in two days, and even in cases where the suffering is most painful all traces disappear in a few days.

Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenrhu, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenrhu decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed your druggist to guarantee it in every instance.—ADV.

KAPPA ALPHA THETAS END CONCLAVE HERE

Women's Greek Letter Organization Granted Charter to Two Petitioning Groups During Convention.

The fiftieth anniversary convention of the Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity at Washington University closed yesterday. The goal toward which the convention worked was to increase the scholarship fund to $15,000. At present it is about $12,000. By means of this scholarship fund any member who might be forced to quit her college course because of financial need, may obtain aid up to the sum of $350 with which to continue in school. The member then has two years after the college course is completed in which to repay the money.

This is the only girls' and women's fraternal organization that goes by the name of fraternity, the usual name being sorority. But some years ago it was decided among the members that, while "sorority" merely signified a women's Greek letter organization, the word "fraternity" standing for fellowship, brotherhood and mutual feeling, was as applicable to girls as to boys.

The officers of the fraternity are: Hope Davis Mecklin, Pittsburg, Pa., grand president; Mary Ashby, Indianapolis, Ind., grand vice president, and Martha Chine Huffman, Omaha, Neb., grand treaurer. Mrs. Anna Fitch Shaw, one of the founders, attended. She is a graduate of DePauw University, where, with three other girls to help her, the Thetas were first organized.

At this convention two new charters were granted to petitioning groups at Pennsylvania Institute and Oklahoma Agricultural College. Other subjects discussed were the choosing of college courses and the object of the grand fraternity council.

The local chapter, with the permission of the college authorities, arranged a temporary hotel in one of the buildings. The entertainment for the visiting delegates consisted of a pageant, picnic supper, swimming, golfing and attending the opera "El Capitan" yesterday evening.

JUDGE KLENE TAKES COURT RECORD FROM JUDGE KIMMEL

Disposed of 1096 Circuit Cases for Year Ending June 30, to Colleague's 990.

A publication in last Wednesday's Post-Dispatch quoting Circuit Clerk Goldstein as saying that a report showed Circuit Judge Kimmel had disposed of more cases than any other Circuit Judge for the year ending June 30 is slightly at variance with the facts, according to a report on Judge Klene's work for the same period. The reports were prepared by courtroom clerks of the two Judges. Judge Kimmel's record was 990 cases disposed of, while the report of Judge Klene's division shows that he disposed of 1096 cases.

It also was pointed out yesterday that Judge Klene sat in the assignment division in the absence of the regular Judge of that division, during which time he disposed of a number of cases which are not included in his total of 1096. Judge Klene and other Judges, it was stated, also sat for Judge Kimmel while the latter was sick last winter and disposed of cases, which appear in Judge Kimmel's record as having been handled by him.

Clerk Henry Schewe of Judge Kimmel's court said there were about 20 cases other Judges handled and for which Judge Kimmel was given credit. When the attention of Judge Kimmel was called to this by Schewe he explained that as he had tried an equal number of cases for other Judges without including them in the record of his division it was an offset to the work they did for him.

POLICEMAN IS EXONERATED IN KILLING OF FORMER SOLDIER

Coroner's Jury Absolves Patrolman Who Said His Hand Was Pulled Down by Bystander.

A Coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Patrolman Fred Wildberger of the Deer Street District of responsibility for the death of Peter Birmingham, 19 years old, a former soldier, of 4242 Easton avenue, who was shot and killed in a chase following an attempt by the policeman to arrest him Wednesday night.

The jury's verdict was accident. Wildberger testified that his arm was pulled down by a bystander as he fired a shot in the air to stop Birmingham. The shooting occurred near Sarah street and Easton avenue.

Wildberger told of meeting Birmingham, with two companions, Robert Gordon and Daniel Hough, and said that Birmingham left his two friends to cross the street and abuse him, declaring he could not arrest him. Wildberger said that when he arrested Birmingham, the latter cursed him and took his night stick from him and started to run, and he fired two shots in the air to stop him. He was about to fire a third, he said, when John Groark pulled his arm down, resulting in the wounding of Birmingham.

Girl Found Dazed on Street.

Anna White, 21, of 2854 Accomac street, was found by police at 1:30 a. m., yesterday at Broadway and Chouteau avenue in a dazed condition. She said she spent the Fourth with friends in Maplewood and had lost consciousness when she left a street car at Nineteenth street on the Manchester line. She was taken to the city hospital.

Mayor to Speak at Picnic.

The annual picnic of the St. Stephen's Evangelical Sunday school will take place on the church grounds, Hall's Ferry and Gimblin roads, Baden, Thursday. There will be a parade through the business district at 9 o'clock, with William Burgomaster Sr. as marshal. Music will be furnished by Falkheimer's band. Mayor Kiel will be the principal speaker in the evening.

Doctor Says Heat and Glare of Sun Weaken and Injure the Eyes

Tells How to Strengthen the Eyes and Protect Them

Dr. Smith, a well-known eye specialist, says that exposure to heat, sun-glare, smoke, dust or wind often weakens the eyes and causes eyestrain and wrinkles due to squinting. He tells how to avoid this and strengthen the eyes. Many whose eyes were failing gratefully say that they have had their eyes restored by the simple process he advises. One man says: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain me dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after fifteen days' use everything seemed clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." Eye troubles of many kinds may be wonderfully benefited in the following simple manner: Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and use two to four times a day. Your eyes will clear up noticeably right from the start. Inflammation will quickly disappear, along with your tendency to squint. If your eyes are bothering you even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent physician to whom the above was submitted, said: "Yes, Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in every family." Bon-Opto is not a patent medicine or secret remedy.—The formula is printed on every package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight or refund the money. It is sold under guaranty by all druggists, including the Enderle, the Johnson Bros., the Judge & Dolph and the Wolff-Wilson Stores.

¶ The Vandervoort Annual Sale of Furniture this year more than ever before is an event of special importance. During the war the manufacture of furniture was very small because the materials and labor were needed for war-time necessities and furniture was at a premium.

¶ With the signing of the armistice came the opening of the furniture manufacturing plants. We are now receiving new Furniture and to make room in our Furniture Salons for these new arrivals we have greatly reduced the articles mentioned below and others which we have not the space to list. They are all standard Vandervoort quality and it will be to your advantage to buy now.

86TH AERO SQUADRON SALVAGED 1000 PLANES

Unit Which Contained Many St. Louisans Made Good Record in Training Camps and at Front.

The Eighty-sixth Aero Squadron, A. E. F., which included many St. Louisans, recently demobilized, was pronounced by high officers to be 100 per cent efficient at the end of its training period, and the service record it made shows that its operations were highly satisfactory until the end. Through all the time it participated in the war it acted as an advanced air service depot, in other words, was a gas and supply depot close to the front, but one of its chief duties was to act as a salvage unit for planes of all armies, including enemy planes, within its sectors.

In the three months it was at the front the Eighty-sixth salvaged more than 1000 planes of all makes and nationalities, over a large sector in France. Salvage crews were sent out whenever word was received of the fall of a plane, the wreckage was picked up and rushed back to the depot. From the depot the salvaged parts were shipped by rail back to the Service of Supply, where they were refitted for use.

The Eighty-sixth was recruited in the summer of 1917, a few months after this country entered the war. The regular strength of such a squadron, which is entirely a ground service unit, is 150 men. This squadron began its training at Kelly Field, Tex., but moved to Scott Field in September, 1917. About half of the personnel was made up of Californians, but about 50 members came from St. Louis, and about 20 from Belleville, which is a few miles from Scott Field.

Member Tells of Unit's Work.

Private Edward T. Robinson Jr., who enlisted in the squadron in November, 1917, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Robinson, 5806 Clemens avenue, has given the Post-Dispatch a brief sketch of the travels and work of the unit. Robinson formerly was employed as a "trouble shooter" in the automobile starter service department of the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co. His mother is president of the St. Louis Relatives' Auxiliary, Eighty-sixth Aero Squadron.

Robinson said that the squadron left Scott Field on its eastward journey Feb. 28, 1918, entraining for Halifax, N. S., where the English transport Scotia took them across with 2000 other members of the American air service. They landed at Liverpool March 18, going to a rest camp at Romsey, England, for eight days, later going into training with the British for five months at Shoreham-by-the-Sea, eight miles from the famous resort of Brighton, Sussex.

A stop of about a week was made at the English headquarters of the Aviation Service, A. E. F., Camp Flourdown. It was here that an American general officer inspecting them said they formed the most efficient squadron he had ever seen, having an almost perfect record. It was this general efficiency which obtained the advanced air service depot assignment for the Eighty-sixth, as this work is recognized as exacting.

Arrived at Front Sept. 28, 1918.

Sept. 28, 1918, they arrived at the front, at Vavincourt, Meuse sector, where they were attached to the First American Army. A month later the depot was moved about 15 kilometers, to Gehonne, remaining there until after the armistice.

The squadron received and tested new planes, shipping them to pursuit and bombing squadrons. Parts, gasoline and other supplies were brought by rail to Bar-le-Duc, then hauled two kilometers by truck, occasionally under shell fire. The salvage crews which worked with trucks and trailers were under fire now and then, but the squadron escaped without casualties.

After a long and weary stay in the recreation area around Bordeaux, the squadron finally sailed from that port on May 11, arriving at Newport News, Va., May 23. The squadron was disbanded at Camp Lee, Va. Robinson and the other St. Louisans were sent to Camp Taylor, Ky., where they were discharged June 3. Those from Belleville were sent to Camp Grant, Ill., and the others to various other demobilization centers.

On June 13 the Relatives' Auxiliary celebrated the safe return with a dinner at the American Hotel Annex for the St. Louisans and those from Belleville. Four hundred guests were present.

RETAIL MERCHANTS TO MEET AT CONFERENCE IN CHICAGO

Retail merchants from Arkansas, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Idaho, Kansas, Mississippi, Missouri, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Ohio, Washington and Wisconsin have registered for the fourth "Business Builders' Conference" to be held in the Congress Hotel, Chicago, July 24, under the direction of the Dry Goods Reporter.

At the third conference last January, 375 merchants from 17 states spent the day at the conference.

This conference was organized in 1917 to afford merchants an opportunity to get together while in the Chicago market and devote one day twice each year to plans for building business.

The program is arranged to cover important subjects connected with retailing. Well known merchants volunteer their services on the program. The conference is confined strictly to business. No one connected with the meeting has anything to sell. No advertising matter except exhibits brought to the conference by the retailers is allowed in the conference room.

FRENCH DIPLOMATIST WARNS OF FUTURE

Must Guard Application of Treaty to Win Fruits of Victory.

(Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, July 5.—Jules Cambon, who is probably France's ablest diplomat, makes the following statement regarding the treaty of Versailles:

"The truth is that the value of all treaties depends on their application. Napoleon in 1807 thought he had placed Prussia at his mercy for all time, but Prussia found in the very treaty he imposed the beginnings of her rise, since under the pressure of necessity she found therein the idea of the military institutions which enabled her to re-enter the struggle in 1813, and which were the foundations of her greatness. It is therefore important, if we want to pluck the fruits of our victory, that we keep our hand on the application of the treaty which ends the war with Germany.

"This is essential. It requires that the country should take a realistic view of the conditions necessary for the maintenance of our power and should persevere in the effort to fulfill them. Our military institutions should not be weakened and our alliances should not be shaken. Albert Sorel, who was a master, remarked that treaties are expressions of the relations which exist at the moment they are concluded between the material and moral forces of the states and that the rights they stipulate never survive the conditions in which these rights have been established. This is a truth of experience and to imagine that once victory is won and a treaty concluded we need make no further efforts to gather its fruits would be to repay ourselves with empty words and be too self-indulgent.

"The peace just concluded can be compared only to that concluded in 1815, which ruled the world's fate during 50 years. The work of 1815 perished because the sovereigns and diplomats gathered in Vienna had calculated and equilibrated the material forces of the states, but had taken no account of the moral forces of revolution. What is original in the peace of 1919 is that for the first time the victors gathered to decide the fate of the world began by proclaiming that they desired to make a peace of justice, a peace of right and to repair past iniquities and to bind up the cruel wounds from which so many peoples have suffered throughout the ages.

"Then arose the theory of historical resurrections. The Poles, Czechs, Rumanians of Transylvania, Jugo-Slavs, Armenians, Arabs and even the Greeks of Asia Minor desired to make the dream of Mithridates live again. Undoubtedly nobody thinks that all the injustices of the past will be repaired, but the awakening of these oppressed nationalities and the spectacle of their resurrection are themselves a lesson in justice.

"Peace with Germany is first. Certainly it is the most important and the only one which interests public opinion, but it is not the whole peace. There remains to treat with Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey to settle the near-Eastern question and to give these young nations, already jealous of their independence and already ambitious, boundaries and statutes. The work still to be accomplished demands much light and good will from the allied and associated Governments."

8 CLINICS PROVIDED FOR CHILD WELFARE

Private Donations to Maintain Them Till April, When City Will Take Them Over.

By gift of a number of citizens, eight model child welfare clinics, costing in the neighborhood of $1000 each, is asured to St. Louis. The clinics will be opened about Sept. 1.

The donors are Benjamin Gratz, Mrs. Lily Busch, Benjamin and Marcus Harris, Mrs. J. Louis Swartz, William T. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. George Warren Brown, Mrs. Ames Cushman, Mrs. Lon O. Hocker and Mrs. A. Brueggemann. Under arrangements made with the endowers, they will be accorded the privilege of choosing locations for the clinics.

The clinics will be under supervision of the Municipal Nurses' Board, and at the end of the city fiscal year, April 1, 1920, will be taken over and maintained by the city. They will provide, without charge, medical and nursing care and, going beyond the really sick children, will attend to keeping fit all children under school age, through a department of proper feeding and weekly supervision that will be available to anxious mothers. A parental service is also among the plans of the promoters and will probably be organized as soon as the clinics are in operation.

The plan contemplates a system of work through the birth registration bureau of the Health Department. Supplied with birth lists, the clinic workers will get in touch with every new mother, through the visiting nurses service, and invite her to bring her child, ill or well, at stated intervals to the clinic for examination, advice and instruction.

The funds for establishment and equipment of the clinics already provided for will be turned over to the city tomorrow, where they will remain a separate fund available only for the purpose indicated. They will be administered under direction of Dr. B. S. Veeder, Director of Public Welfare Schmoll, Dr. Cleveland H. Shutt and Miss Lyda Anderson, head of the Municipal Nurses.

U. S. TROOPS IN ARCHANGEL PICK UP RUSSIAN WORDS

Americans Will Bring Home Strange Additions to Their Vocabularies.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

ARCHANGEL, June 5.—American soldiers withdrawn from Northern Russia will take back to Michigan and other Middle Western states, from which most of the troops on this front were drafted, a number of Russian words which have become a daily part of the soldier's vocabulary.

Chief of the words is "skolkea," of which the English equivalent is "how much?" The Yanks have been using this word on the Russian population ever since they landed, last September, in transactions of barter and sale. The soldiers have made a verb of it, and those who have made neat profits in selling cigarettes, old clothing, superfluous rations, etc., to the peasant and city civilians are spoken of as having "skolka'ed" something.

Other words the soldiers have adopted as their own include:

"Ponimiyu," meaning "I understand," and "Ne-ponimiyu," meaning "I don't understand."

"Da," meaning "yes."

"Nyet," meaning "no."

"Spasebo," meaning "Thank you."

And last, but not least, the eternal Russian "Nichevo," which means anything from "nothing," "never mind," to "What do I care about that."

OVERSEAS RECRUIT DRIVE ENDS

Army Obtained Approximately 3500 Men Here for Foreign Service.

The campaign for recruits for the regular army for overseas service, which was begun June 15, ended last midnight. Recruiting for domestic service, however, will be continued.

Maj. S. R. Goodwin, in charge of the local recruiting headquarters, said yesterday that the campaign was successful. The number of men recruited for foreign service, he said, was approximately 3500. This figure he took from the department bulletin. It includes the number of recruits accepted from all of the recruiting districts up to June 25. The department stated in its advertising campaign it wanted 50,000 men for overseas service.

CASE LOST WHEN MICE EAT EVIDENCE OF PROSECUTOR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—When the store of James Reynard on King Hill avenue was robbed, the only clew to the identity of the burglar was a loaf of bread, wrapped in an Armenian newspaper. Reynard said the bread had not been there when he locked up the night before. When the burglar was put on trial several months later it was discovered that mice had eaten most of the evidence.

The evidence was turned over to Police Detective Mike Walsh, who began his investigation by inquiring who in the South End was a subscriber to an Armenian newspaper, and finally traced it to a boarding house, 106 Arizona avenue, where a number of packing house laborers of assorted nationalities were domiciled.

The landlord remembered the bread distinctly. He said it had been brought to his house the night before by a negro, one James Flerry, who had asked him to wrap it for him, and he had used for the wrapper a back number of an Armenian journal. An hour later Walsh arrested Flerry, at a packing house, where he was working as a beef butcher.

Reynard's store was robbed early in the morning of New Year's day. The case of the State against Flerry first went to trial in the Criminal Division of the Circuit Court this week, the defendant represented by J. H. Kelley, the negro lawyer.

Stephen K. Owne, Prosecuting Attorney, displayed the evidence—or what remained of it—an Armenian newspaper, a piece of string and a handful of litter. The bread, he explained, when locked in the storage room had been eaten by mice.

Kelley scoffed the idea. He declared the bread to have been a bit of fanciful fiction. In any event, he said, the State had failed to make a case, and the jury apparently accepted his view, for it brought in a verdict of not guilty.

LUCCOCKS TO ATTEND CENTENARY

Three of Family of Late Bishop Going to Columbus.

Three members of the family of the late Bishop Naphtali Luccock, of the Methodist Church, who was for many years pastor of Union Church here, are to attend the Methodist Centenary Celebration in Columbus, O., this week. They are the Rev. Halford Luccock, a teacher in Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J.; Miss Natalie Luccock, a teacher in the Minneapolis High School, and Miss Ethel Luccock, teaching in Lakewood, O.

St. Louis Methodists who will be at Columbus this week, having timed their attendance on the celebration so as to meet the Luccocks, are Mrs. H. H. Wagoner, Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Long and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Roose.

SWAM RIVER TO ELOPE

Swain Drags Boat and Swims Out to Safety After Accident.

MACON, Ga., July 5.—George McKeehan, a returned overseas veteran, was escaping across the Connausauga River hotly pursued by the father of a girl he proposed making his bride, when the boat capsized. McKeehan swam back to shore with the girl, caught and righted the overturned boat and cleared it of water. Then putting the girl in the boat, he took the painter and swam across with it in tow. The couple, in a much bedraggled condition, made the residence of "Squire" John L. Henton and were married before the father arrived. The family of Judge Henton supplied dry clothing after the ceremony. The father of the bride decided there was no use opposing such a determined youngster and forgave the couple.

PRISONER SAYS HE IS DESERTER

Oscar Nordquist, 31, whose home, he says, is in Minneapolis, was trying to get his bearings as to trains, etc., at Union Station at 8 o'clock last night when a policeman took him in charge. Nordquist, the policeman reported, was suffering from the effects of liquor.

On the way to the city hospital the policeman asked Nordquist where he had obtained the liquor.

"I don't know that," Nordquist murmured, "but if you're looking for information I'll slip you this—I'm a deserter."

Nordquist, after arriving at the hospital, said he had deserted from C Company, Fifty-fifth Infantry at Camp Dodge, Io., two weeks ago.

He was ordered held a prisoner on the desertion charge, and will be questioned today by Government agents about the whisky.

"BOMBS WOULD AGE IN MAIL"

By the Associated Press.

NENANA, Alaska, May 5.—(By Mail.)—"Alaska should worry about the receipt of bombs in its mail," declares the Nenana News, referring to the bomb outrages in the States. "The postoffice department," the paper continues, "has made the country practically bomb-proof by injecting into our mail service a very generous portion of time between points of dispatch and points of delivery. An Alaska-bound bomb would age itself out of business long before reaching an intended victim in this country."

How You Can Remove Every Trace of Hair

(Toilet Talks)

A stiff paste made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on a hairy surface about 2 minutes will, when removed, take every trace of hair with it. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. No harm can result from this treatment, but be sure it is delatone you get and you will not be disappointed.—ADV.

Total	$974 40

Contributions to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund have not increased in proportion to the rise in temperature. If every mother whose boy has returned, every sister whose brother has come back safe and sound, every sweetheart who offers up prayers of thanksgiving for the safe return of her lover, every little family whose hearts are overflowing because of the return of a husband and fother thought of the little soldiers who are fighting misfortune and poverty and give just a small offering to the Milk and Ice Fund, the babies could be taken care of on the proceeds for years to come.

$2 Worth of Pleasure.

More persons should take the attitude of Herbert W. Cann of Hurst, Ill., who writes: "I want to buy myself $2 worth of real pleasure for the Fourth and that is most easily obtained by sending my usual contribution of $2, which is enclosed herewith."

Two little 7-year-old tots gave an entertainment at 449 Laurel street and sent the proceeds which amounted to 64c to the Milk and Ice Fund. They are Muriel Jonas and Ruth Rothschild.

Girls Get $3 at Stapd.

Alice Dougan, 3959 Botanical avenue, and Merle Holthaus, 3955 Botanical avenue, sold lemonade, popcorn and cakes at a stand on the corner of 3900 Botanical avenue and turned $3 into the fund for the babies.

Marcella Giol, 2601 Garrison avenue, assisted by nine other children, managed a show which netted $2.50 for the tenement children. Those assisting were: John and Lorenzo Giol, Ione Hanna, Verna McNorton, Frank Farrell, Mildred Beckmann, Helen Miller, and Agnes and Alice Hanly.

"Grandma" gave $3 to the Milk and Ice Fund, choosing to be recorded among the anonymous supporters of the work.

Through error the name of Willard Seifert, 2325A Hickory street, was unintentionally omitted from the list of the names of children who conducted teh lemonade stand at Jefferson and Park avenues.

ELEVEN AMERICANS MURDERED BY MEXICANS IN PAST 17 MONTHS

Record Held to Show Carranza Government Unable to Cope With Lawless Element.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Inability to cope with lawless Mexicans, or lack of effort on the part of the Carranzista Government to do so, apparently shown by reports of killings of Americans in the Tampico district announced in the last two days, which fix the total killed during the last 17 months at 11.

By the regulations in effect in the district, none but Carranza soldiers are permitted to carry arms, so Americans have no way of defending themselves. All the robberies have been committed by armed men, and many of them have been identified as Carranza soldiers and officers.

In the Tepetate district, where Leroy Moye, an American, was murdered last Tuesday, Carranza forces have been in control since Carranza first came into power. This district has been one of the most seriously affected parts of the oil fields.

The 11 men killed in the Tampico district during the last 17 months were: Paymaster House of the South Texas Oil Co., Feb. 21, 1918, the murderers getting about $7000 and wounding three men who came to the rescue of House; June 29, Alfred Esperola, L. R. Millard, L. A. Dunn and H. M. Cooper, all Americans, and Natividad Flores, a Mexican, were killed by five Mexicans four miles from Tampico; a Porto Rican, name unknown to the State Department, July 24, 1918; A. W. Stevenson, cashier of the Texas Oil Co., July 31, 1918; J. M. Franklin and W. M. Rose, Dec. 17, 1918; John W. Correll, June 17, 1919; Leroy Moye, July 1.

FRENCH HOTELS WANT BAN ON AMERICAN TOURISTS REMOVED

Two Governments Have Not Reached Decision on Question; Some Restrictions Relaxed.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, July 4.—Despite the clamor from French hotel keepers and business interests there is yet no decision to allow American tourists to come to France to visit the battlefields and buy French goods.

At the American embassy it was said, however, that restrictions in traveling to Europe probably would be modified rapidly, and it was said that even now certain restrictions had been relaxed considerably. This was partly revealed by the arrival of some 1500 Americans on the Chicago at Bordeaux. The movement of troops is taking place daily, while the cost of living in France is yet unchanged and the sudden rush of visitors might tend to create confusion in France, with her program of reconstruction.

At the headquarters of the American peace mission it was learned that Secretary Lansing, while lacking complete information of the State Department restrictions on traveling in Europe, thought that people in the liberated regions, where American visitors would flock, should first be asked their opinion. It is generally believed that though these people would be glad to welcome American friends, they fear it would be too difficult to house and feed them, for these districts are still suffering from want of food and houses.

WILL OPPOSES TITLE FOR SON

Briton Leaves $1,250,000 to Keep Heir From Baronetcy.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 15.—Under the will of the late C. W. Wallace, an Indian merchant, $1,250,000 is left to the British Government in the event of his son's failing to acquire "a baronetcy or superior title."

The testator's only surviving son, Capt. W. W. Wallace, has not received a baronetcy and the executors are seeking to set aside the clause in the will on the ground that it is opposed to public policy. Such wills, they contend, embarrass officers of the crown in the distribution of honors and induce other persons concerned to adopt improper means to obtain titles.

Wallace explained his conditional gift by saying in his will:

"I do this because I hold the view that, subject to the testator's right to make ample provision for his children, all possessions, great or small, if acquired from or through the people, as mine were, should return to the people. I am not acting fully up to this view in the case of my children, because the law does not enforce it upon all others."

UNITED ACTION TO AID FRANCE

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 5.—The Franco-British and Franco-American treaties, the Journal says, provide that the intervention of England and America, on behalf of France against Germany shall be interdependent. Great Britain and the United States, it is added, will only help France by combined action and not separately. The newspaper declares that their intervention must occur if the disarmament of the Rhine territory is not sufficient to protect France from German aggression.

The agreements between France and the United States and between France and Great Britain for the defense of France against attack by Germany, it is understood, will not become valid as far as Great Britain is concerned until the Franco-American convention is ratified by the United States Senate.

DENIES VIOLATION OF DRY LAW

Proprietor of Former Liquor Saloon Says He's Sold Only Soft Drinks.

J. H. Wehmueller, proprietor of a former liquor saloon at Eighteenth and Market streets, has written to the Post-Dispatch stating that he has sold only soft drinks since the prohibition law went into effect, and denying a statement made in a Post-Dispatch news item last Tuesday, to the effect that he was selling 2¾-per-cent beer on that day.

"I don't care to serve anything but soft drinks," Wehmueller writes.

HELIUM, NEW GAS, NOW BEING MADE FOR BALLOON USE

Discovered on Sun 30 Years Ago, It Is Being Put to Practical Purposes by Science.

IS FOUND IN KANSAS IN LARGE QUANTITIES

Sent Over to Europe for Aeronautics Just Before Armistice Was Signed and Too Late for War.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Helium, the new incombustible balloon gas, so called because it was discovered on the sun 30 years before it was identified on earth, which promises to revolutionize the science of ballooning, is the subject of the following communication to the National Geographic Society by Dr. G. Sherburne Rogers:

"When the United States joined the allies, the military value of helium was at once brought to the attention of the army and navy authorities, and a vigorous campaign was begun for the production of helium in quantities.

"The two main problems were obvious: First, to develop methods of extracting helium from the natural gas; and, second, to determine the geologic occurrence of the gas, and so locate adequate supplies.

"Late in 1917 two small experimental plants using different methods were erected in Fort Worth, Tex., to treat the gas of the petrolia field, and some months later a third plant, using a still different method, was erected in the field itself.

Big Fields in Kansas.

"The helium-bearing area of Kansas is far larger than any yet discovered in Texas and contains a number of fields which in the aggregate yields much more gas than petrolia. The old Dexter field, in which the helium-bearing gas was first discovered, is now exhausted, though the early difficulties in the way of burning the gas were overcome and for years it was produced in large volumes and used as fuel.

"As the apparatus used in all these processes of extracting helium gas for balloon purposes require rather delicate adjustment and manipulation, some time was naturally consumed in determining the most efficient working conditions; but just prior to the armistice the first shipment of 150,000 cubic feet of helium compressed and stored in steel tanks, had been started to Europe. This was enough to fill four of the ordinary kite balloons, though the large dirigibles require one to two million or more cubic feet of gas.

"Although quantity production of helium was achieved just too late to be of value in the actual hostilities, it was in itself a great accomplishment, for the world's total output of helium up to 1915 was porbably less than 100 cubic feet, the market value of which was about $1700 a cubic foot. Our helium can be produced by the first two methods at less than 10 cents a cubic foot, and if the third process fulfills expectations, this figure will be still further reduced.

"The details of the process of extracting helium are highly technical, but the general scheme is easily understood. All of the main constituents of natural gas, including the nitrogen, become liquefied when cooled to about 328 degrees, Fahrenheit; but the helium remains a gas at this exceedingly low temperature and is thus easily separated.

"The principle by which these low temperatures are attained is one known to every motorist who is unfortunate enough to have to pump up his own tires. When air is compressed in a tire it becomes hot; if the tire is allowed to cool to ordinary temperature and the valve is then opened and the air allowed to escape, it becomes cool.

"Similarly the natural gas is put under a very high pressure and then refrigerated, and when allowed to expand it becomes so cold that all of its constituents except helium become liquid."

PEACE CONFERENCE TO EVOLVE INTO A LEAGUE OF NATIONS

PARIS, July 5.—The present plan is to continue the peace conference in Paris for a while and then move to Geneva, where it will gradually evolve into a league of nations.

Many important persons who were conected with the work of the peace conference have followed the example of President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George and returned home to attend to their own affairs.

The Hotel de Crillon presents a deserted appearance. There is a well-defined lull in the processes of readjusting the affairs of Europe. The heads of states wish to see how the world will accept the work they have already done.

Academy Honors Marshal Petain.

PARIS, July 5.—Marshal Petain was received yesterday as a member of the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences. M. Thibault, the chairman, in introducing the Marshal, compared him to Turenne in the love he showed for the soldiers and in inspiring their spirit. The Marshal in reply paid a warm tribute to the French soldier before whom, he said, "we cannot bow enough."

VALUE OF OIL AS COMPARED TO CUP GREASE

Some Oil Cups Have a Wick That Feeds Oil Gradually; Grease Carries Dirt.

In spite of the insistence of motor car manufacturers and service men on the vital importance of lubrication as it affects the life of the vehicle, it is doubtful if the average car gets all that it really needs in this connection. Nor is the reason far to seek; we have upward of a million new car owners in this country every year and they must learn the lessons that the preceding motoring generation has come to take as a matter of course. Further, we are learning all the time in every branch of the automobile industry and the science of lubrication is constantly developing. So it is that the wise motorist reads all that he can find in regard to lubrication, and here are a few suggestions that may help him:

To begin with, let us address a few words to car owners who are still using grease in the transmission. Oil is the proper lubricant for the gearset. The gear teeth cut a path through the heavier lubricant and then proceed to revolve in thin air, to their great detriment. In addition, grease has the unfortunate characteristic of carrying dirt and foreign matter of any kind into the gears or wherever else it may be used. In cold weather grease is simply impossible. After the gearset has been in operation for a short time the grease becomes packed against the walls of the housing and the gears themselves get no lubrication whatever. So make this your first lubrication law: Use transmission oil of the proper grade in this part of the mechanism.

Not many years ago grease cups were used in all parts of the mechanism for lubricating bearings, etc. Now grease is not the best lubricant for this location, because it has a characteristic of getting hard in the cup, so that the latter cannot be properly turned down, hence that part does not get adequate lubrication.

It is for this reason that more and more cars every year are being fitted with oil cups in many locations, though the familiar grease receptacle still persists on many parts of even the best cars. The owner who really understands his car knows without being told that oil is better than grease, but perhaps he does not know that if he so desires he can substitute oil cups for the grease variety. Within the past year or so a number of very ingenious oil cups have been placed on the market, embodying systems of gradual feed whereby the oil is permitted to leak out gradually instead of running away in a single day as used to be the case. That was always the trouble with oil cups, you had to keep filling them up each day. Some of these new cups have constricted passages which permit only a slow flow of oil, while others have what are known as wick feeds, wherein a wick picks up the oil from the cup and allows it to reach the part to be lubricated gradually. Some of these cups need replenishment only once or twice in a running season. Another advantage of the wick feed is that, since it operates by capillary attraction, it does not carry dirt or foreign matter to the bearing surface, even if it is present in the cup. As a matter of fact the wick feed cup is probably the nearest thing to having the parts running in oil.

Naturally the different parts of the mechanism require different grades of lubricants or better say oils. For the gearset, differential and rear axle a heavy oil is the proper lubricant. Other parts of the mechanism do better on the ordinary cylinder oil. For the average car two grades of oil will practically take care of the entire mechanism.

It has always been customary to lubricate universal joints by means of grease or graphite, simply because of the difficulty of keeping oil in the housing of the joint. The universals move with tremendous rapidity when the mechanism is in operation and they need very efficient lubrication. Recently it has been found possible to lubricate the universal joints by means of oil fed through wicks.

Before we leave the subject of wick oiling it might be well to call attention to the economy of this method. The wick draws the oil from the cup slowly and distributes it evenly over the whole surface to be lubricated. There is no waste. A well designed wick feed oil cup will need replenishing only once or twice in a season.

This question of lubrication is one that has engaged the attention of engineers from the very beginning of the automobile industry. Some of our engineers have attempted the negative solution of the difficulty by dispensing with grease and oil cups and substituting bushing made of wood or soft metal impregnated with graphite, which gives a sort of perpetual lubricating characteristic to the part. For certain parts of the mechanism these oilless and greaseless bearings serve very nicely. But where there is intense movement this type of lubrication is scarcely up to the work demanded of it. At that they are probably better than grease cups which the car owner has forgotten to turn down.

It seems to be accepted in engineering circles that eventually we shall have a car with a central oil reservoir, from which practically all parts that need it will be supplied with lubricant. When that happy day arrives all the owner will have to do will be to fill up the central well at stated intervals. When that time arrives, as long as the oil system is functioning properly we shall have perfect lubrication, and haven't the engineers always told us that that means the everlasting car? In the meantime the car owner who wants his vehicle to last as long as possible can contribute to that end by substituting properly designed oil cups for the inefficient grease cups now so widely used.

INFORMATION ON TRUCK LINES GIVEN BY BUREAU

An important step to further motor truck transportation in a national way has been taken by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. in the establishment of a Ship-by-Truck Bureau at their St. Louis offices, 3201 Locust street, which, since its opening less than a month ago, has gathered data on the operation of 50 motor truck express companies, most of which run on a daily schedule in and out of St. Louis, with some hauls extending more than 100 miles.

Branches of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. have been knit into a movement to foster shipments by motor truck. Ship-by-Truck Bureaus now have been established in 65 trucking centers throughout the United States, said F. C. Rudisell, manager of the St. Louis branch of the company.

The Ship-by-Truck Bureau, he said, is at the service alike of merchant, farmer, manufacturer and truck manufacturers, dealers, owners and operators. Shippers of goods, or any person interested in hauling, are requested to tell their requirements to the Bureau Manager, Roy S. Rauschkolb. The bureau undertakes to furnish full information regarding express routes, truck lines and the like over which such shipments may be made.

Individuals, on the other hand, or concerns interested in furnishing truck service, are invited to file information regarding the service offered.

Carburetor Ills.

In many cars water and dirt in the fuel system cause almost endless trouble, which may very likely be attributed to the engine proper. Dirt will clog the minute crevice in the carburetor, causing numerous peculiar symptoms of trouble to appear. Many cars have no provision, except a metal strainer in the tank, for preventing the entrance of dirt into the fuel system. It is suggested that the owners of cars so equipped fit a trap in the gasoline line. All the larger manufacturers of carburetors have devices of this kind.

Motorists Should Watch the Other Fellow as Well as Themselves

FIRST, assume that you must look out for yourself and the other fellow, too. Don't rely wholly on the other fellow doing the right thing, and you'll be on your guard if he does the wrong thing and ready for the emergency.

Never back or swing from the curb into the street without looking back to see if the way is clear.

Glance both ways on each cross street, and if you're not on the main thoroughfare slow down before you cross. It's safest to drive slowly enough to have the car well under control where buildings hide the intersecting streets.

Do not cut the corners in turning, but keep well to your side of the street and look both ways before you make the turn.

Put out a hand as a guide to the car following or approaching.

In passing a slower moving vehicle pass it on your left, but in passing a street car always keep to the right.

Do not follow another vehicle too closely. It might stop suddenly.

Stop when the street car ahead of you stops and stand still till all passengers getting off are out of the street. In most cities this is required by ordinance.

Dim your lights when approaching another auto on the road.

Use common sense at all times and you'll save trouble for yourself and the other fellow.

AUTOMOBILE CLASS MAKES INSPECTION TOUR OF PLANT

Ranken School Students Get First-Hand Instruction in Truck-Building at Traffic Factory.

Members of the Automobile Class of the David Ranken Jr. School of Mechanical Trades visited the plant of the Traffic Motor Truck Corporation, 5200 North Second street, Friday afternoon, on a tour of inspection to study the process of making an automobile. The class was in charge of George L. Gaston, instructor. The Ranken school is arranging a series of inspection trips through St. Louis plants in order that this class might obtain a thorough first-hand knowledge of how automobiles are made. The Traffic Truck Corporation furnished guides who explained in detail how the Traffic Trucks are made. Gaston said this practical knowledge was of great benefit to the students and enabled them to conduct their studies with more interest and a better knowledge of the principles of automobile construction. This is the first of the inspection and educational tours being conducted by the Ranken School.

DATA SOUGHT ON ST. LOUIS RURAL MOTOR EXPRESS ROUTES

Data on rural motor express companies operating in the St. Louis district, of which there are now 17 operating within a radius of more than 30 miles, giving their routes, schedules of operation, tonnage capacity and in some cases rates, was forwarded this week by C. E. Lightfoot, chairman of the Commercial Car Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association and a director of the Federal Highway Council to the Highway Transport Committee of the Council of National Defense at Washington, D. C.

Lightfoot said the Highway Transport Committee requested this information for the purpose of furthering good road development and demonstrating the practicability of using motor trucks for transportation purposes.

MOTORCYCLISTS MAKE RUN TO NEARBY POINTS EACH WEEK END

St. Louis Riders Arrange Schedule for Summer and Fall, Riders Traveling in Pairs.

Touring by motor cycle is growing in favor among St. Louis motor cyclists and runs to points more than 100 miles distant have been made during the week end this season.

The Cross Country Motor Cycle Club of St. Louis has been formed by a group of St. Louis riders and a schedule of tours is compiled to cover each week end up to Nov. 1. The rules of the club forbid open mufflers being used inside city limits and the speed is limited to 25 miles an hour. The club members ride in pairs, so that if a rider has a puncture or other trouble he is always certain of assistance. In case of trouble this pair alone drops out of place, the other riders continuing according to schedule.

Frequent stops are made to allow time for the stragglers to catch up. Runs so far this season have been made to Hollow and Arcadia, Mo., and Alton, Ill. Today a run will be made from St. Louis to Villa Ridge, Mo., and return. A tour to Louisiana, Mo., is planned for the next week end. On July 20 they will ride to Eureka and July 27 to Centralia, Ill.

The officers of the club are: George Duncan, president; William Paschetag, treasurer, and A. M. Vagedes, secretary.

ACCESSORY ASSOCIATION TO MEET TUESDAY NIGHT

President William L. Ferrier of the Motor Accessory Trade Association has called a regular meeting of the association for Tuesday night, July 8, at the City Club. The dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m., after which there will be several matters of importance discussed, including the extension of the usefulness and scope of the association.

The second annual river excursion of the association will be held on the steamer "J. S." Friday night, July 25. Last week Ferrier and E. S. Marvin, who is chairman of the ticket committee, disposed of 1200 tickets.

Invitations to the excursion are to be extended to members of the Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association and of the Storage Battery Dealers' Association.

Questions and Answers

Q. Please give me directions on how to get to Seven Oaks with road conditions. J. G. M., 1215 Chemical Building.

A. Seven Oaks is located on the Manchester road at the western limits of Ellisville. Take Clayton road west to North and South road, turn left to Manchester road. Follow Manchester road through Mentor, Des Peres and Manchester to Ellisville. Roads are good all the way.

Q. What road would you recommend to Fulton, Mo.?

A. Take the National Old Trails road following the red, white and blue markings on the poles through St. Charles, Wentzville, Warrenton, Jonesburg, Williamsburg and Fulton. This is a graded dirt road the greater distance and fairly good.

Cracked Porcelains.

When the owner removes a spark plug and finds the porcelain insulator broken the portion which has fallen off may have made its way down between the piston and cylinder, where it will cause scoring of the metal. This possibility should be taken into consideration, though more often the broken piece will blow out with the exhaust.

Roads to Ha Ha Tonka Park, Place of Natural Wonders, Damaged by Heavy Rains

Trip Made by Post-Dispatch Automobile Editor Shows Tour Over Route Is Not Advisable at Present.

A tour to Ha Ha Tonka, Mo., was made by the automobile editor of the Post-Dispatch last week and the only route open between Jefferson City and Ha Ha Tonka is in such rough condition at the present time that it is not advisable to attempt a tour over these roads for a month at least.

The recent heavy rains have caused the route shown in the Automobile Blue Book from Versailles to Linn Creek to become almost impassable in places. The route from Tuscumbia to Linn Creek is as bad. The route from Lebanon north is also reported in poor condition. After making numerous inquiries it was found that the preferred route at this time is by way of Brazito from Jefferson City, southwest through Hickory Hill, Spring Garden, Etterville, Eldon, Aurora Springs, Cooper, Bagnell, Zebra, Linn Creek and Ha Ha Tonka. At Bagnell it is necessary to ferry across the Osage River. From Aurora Springs to Bagnell the road follows a railroad track and is very rough, being ungraded and rocky, with several steep hills. From Bagnell the road ascends a high bluff, passing through several mudholes in crossing the river bottom lands. The scenery along the summit of this bluff is beautiful, the Osage River lying more than 300 feet below. The road is rough and rocky to Zebra, where it becomes better, with several rough stretches between there and Linn Creek. From Linn Creek to Ha Ha Tonka the road is fairly good. It crosses several small fords and winds through some very beautiful Ozark mountain scenery.

Many Caves in District.

The Ha Ha Tonka estate, which covers an area of approximately 5500 acres, contains more natural wonders and wild beauty than perhaps any other part of the Middle West.

Near the village of Ha Ha Tonka there is a lake a half mile long and more than 600 feet wide. It is fed by a mammoth spring that emerges from under a rock ledge at the base of a high bluff in a stream more than 50 feet wide. The daily flow of this spring is estimated at more than 100,000,000 gallons. The stream passes through a narrow canyon of rock, the walls of which are 250 feet high, with enough room from one end to the other to conceal a city block. An island in this stream at the lower end of the canyon has a cave with stalactites and stalagmites plainly visible inside the entrance. A round opening at the entrance leads into a chamber 20 feet wide and 10 feet high. This is but one of eight or 10 caves in this vicinity. The river cave, which contains an underground stream, is said to have been explored more than two miles. The entrance to the cave is in a large sink. The underground stream may be crossed in a boat to a column of onyx in white and yellow, said to be the largest stalagmite in the world. Among the other caves are included the Counterfeiters' cave, Bridal cave, Robbers' cave and Onyx cave.

Beautiful View for Miles.

The roadway leading to an uncompleted mansion which was in the process of construction at the time of the death of R. M. Snyder, former owner of the estate, 12 years ago, and which, while completed on the outside, has never been completed on the interior, passes over a natural bridge more than 75 feet high. The mansion is on the summit of a bluff overlooking the canyon and lake, affording a beautiful view for miles.

There is an enormous natural amphitheater nearby. The "Devil's Kitchen" is a depression in the ground, the rock formation of which resembles a kitchen.

The Niangua River passes within several hundred yards of the Ha-Ha Tonka Lake resort, where is a small group of cottages is available for tourists. Meals are served in a dining hall.

For the motorist with a camp trailer there are more than eight or 10 acres available for camping sites along the "river run," which carries the lake overflow into Niangua River and along the river itself there are ideal sites for the motor car camp. A road leads to a gravel bar at the water's edge. Swimming, boating and fishing is permitted in the Niangua River, but these privileges are not permitted in the lake.

Sunset Hill is the name of a rock bluff on the Niangua River near the resort where the sun may be seen as it sinks below the horizon.

Proposed as State Park.

Robert M. Snyder of Kansas City is executor of his father's estate. The Snyder family have a summer home at Ha-Ha Tonka.

The matter of having the Ha-Ha Tonka estate become a State park has been proposed in bills introduced in the State Legislature on two occasions, but failed both times. The bill failed by one vote to pass on one occasion, it is said.

At Linn Creek a beautiful view of the Osage and Niangua River valleys may be had from a point about 300 feet high, which is known as Lover's Leap, and located where the two streams join. The story told by residents of Linn Creek is that an Indian maiden disappointed in a love affair jumped from the bluff, and it has been known as Lover's Leap since.

The log house, which at one time was the residence of Gov. McClurg of Missouri, built during the '50's, is still standing. In going to Lover's Leap the old McClurg home is passed on the right. It is on Arnhold's Mill road, and about midway up the first hill from Linn Creek.

Swinging Bridge Across River.

There is a swinging bridge across the Osage River at Linn Creek, 525 feet long, that was made and is owned by residents of Linn Creek.

T. S. Hart, who designed and superintended the construction of the bridge, is the toll gate keeper. The bridge is swung on two cables made of 750 strands of heavy wire. The wooden floor is built on steel girders, which are attached to the supporting cables by means of half inch steel cable at intervals. The cables are fastened to 25 iron posts at each end and buried in concrete. An iron tower 45 feet high supports the cables on the north side of the river, while the high rock bluffs serve that purpose on the south bank. The bridge was started in April, 1909, and completed in July, 1911. It was built by the residents of Linn Creek and farmers from the surrounding country at a cost of $12,000. Hart said it will accommodate the heaviest farm tractor and at one time was loaded with cattle from end to end. The tensil strength of each half inch steel cable, he said was 8.4 tons.

G. A. Moulder, a druggist of Linn Creek, who is secretary of the Camden County Highway Commission, said he was in conference with State Highway Engineer Alexander Graham several weeks ago and expected work to start soon on the surveying of the two cross county highways to be built in Camden County under the terms of the Morgan-McCulloch road bill, recently passed. These two roads will cross at Linn Creek and connect it with Versailles, Lebanon and Bagnell, forming three routes into Linn Creek and HaHa Tonka Park from St. Louis.

With several weeks of dry weather the muddy stretches should have become dry but it probably will be months before the rough roads are in good state of repair.

ST. LOUIS AUTO CLUB WILL SUPPORT NEW ROAD LAW

To Aid Operation of McCullough-Morgan Measure, Which It Formerly Opposed.

The following statement has been issued by the Board of Governors of the Automobile Club of St. Louis in regard to the new Missouri road law, which is now effective:

"The Board of Governors of the Automobile Club was opposed to the McCullough-Morgan bill because it believed that it was wrong in principle, but since the bill has become a law, the board intends to co-operate with and assist the highway commission in every way possible to make this law operative, effective and successful. We favor the improvement of roads over the State and intend to do all we can to promote and encourage the building and maintenance of substantial highways."

BITTEL RESIGNS AS HEAD OF BITTEL-LEFTWICH CO.

New Management to Curtail Free Service to Motorists.

It was announced this week that C. G. Bittel who had formerly been president of the Bittel-Leftwich Tire Service Co., Grand and Lindell avenues, had resigned June 15.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the company this week Auguste Chouteau was elected president to succeed Bittel and Fred A. Kamp was elected vice president. C. B. Langhorst became secretary and treasurer.

B. O. Leftwich who was the former manager resigned Jan. 15 of this year.

Kamp, as a stockholder, was interested in the concern before entering the military service, he said, and since his return about the first of the year, had been secretary, until elected to the office of vice president. He said an application had been made to the Secretary of State to change the firm name to that of Lee Tire and Service Co. Kamp said in the future free service to motorists with tire troubles other than users of Lee tires would be curtailed.

Under the new management, Kamp said, the accessory line would not be developed, the desire being to promote the tire and tube business alone.

MOTOR CARS IN MISSOURI INCREASED 17,270 IN YEAR

Reports From Secretary's Office Show Registrations of Many New Licenses.

Reports from the office of Secretary of State, John L. Sullivan, to Peter J. Schilling, St. Louis deputy for his office, show a marked increase in the number of motor cars registered in Missouri to date. The registration to July 1 was 205,320 owners' license plates; 1825 dealers' plates; 1923 dealers' duplicate plates; 2835 motor cycle plates, 1807 chauffeurs' badges and 3836 transfers or re-registrations.

Of the foregoing number the St. Louis office registered 38,586 owners, 8653 chauffeurs, and 1160 motor cycles. The Kansas City office registered 27,850 owners, 3142 chauffeurs and 619 motor cycles. The registration to date shows an increase for the entire state of 17,270 motor cars over the year 1918.

Boarding houses with "home cooking" are to be found through Post-Dispatch WANT ADS.

PRACTICAL PARAGRAPHS.

Carbon Removers.

The market at the present time is flooded with auxiliary air and moisture injecting devices, some of which are good and some bad. The moisture injecting devices will, in most cases, prevent the formation of carbon on the cylinder walls, but they are not likely to remove carbon already formed, although this claim is made for them. The air devices are practically useless, unless the owner is absolutely certain that the air range of his carburetor is insufficient. If the adjustment already on the carburetor is capable of supplying more air, an auxiliary air device is a waste of money.

Use of Gaskets.

Oil joints should be fitted with gaskets made of wrapping paper, while water joints should have asbestos gaskets coated with graphite. Hot gas joints, on the other hand, should have copper covered asbestos and dry gas joints call for coated asbestos.

Cone Clutch Slippage.

In the absence of Fuller's earth ordinary talcum powder may be used to stop cone clutch slippage. Sprinkle the talcum over the surface of the leather or fabric after having first cleaned the surface with gasoline.

Cleaning the Car.

The body of the car should be cleaned with castile soap and water. Mud should not be rubbed off, but rather should be washed off by flowing a gentle stream of water over the spot. This floats the mud off without injury to the polished surface. If mud is permitted to remain on a new body until it dries hard it almost always leaves a spot, consequently removal should be immediate. If spots of road oil get on the body they should be removed by an application of salt butter, which loosens the oil, or by local application of kerosene. Be careful not to rub them too much. The top should not be cleaned with gasoline or similar liquids. Soap suds and water should be used inside and out. For the upholstery a little linseed oil on a piece of cloth rubbed over it will work wonders.

Storage Battery Mounting.

If the storage battery is not secured tightly in its place the vibration and jolts of ordinary travel may very possibly break some of the jars.

Water in Crankcase Oil.

Few motorists realize that a comparatively large quantity of water gradually accumulates in the crank case, mixing with the oil and forming an emulsion, which has impaired lubricating qualities. This accumulation of water is more pronounced in winter than in summer and is found to a greater extent as the number of cylinders increase. This brings out the importance of changing the oil every 1000 miles, and for the best lubricating results every 500 miles, in which case the old oil may be run through a chamois skin to remove the water, after which it may be used again.

UTILITY OF AUTO IMPORTANT POINT

Although it is natural for every owner to want to have his car appear to good advantage under all conditions, the important fact must be taken into consideration that there are certain constituent parts of a machine that require particular attention. When all is said and done appearances are only skin-deep, an axiom which may be fairly applied to automobiles as well as people, says a writer in Automobile Topics. For this reason it is clearly essential for the owner to scratch beneath the surface, to educate himself to judge a product for its actual worth.

The owner who is anxious of getting a return for his money in actual service rendered must see that every component part that goes to make up his machine is capable of functioning efficiently in every respect.

Not only must the car owner be in a position to judge competently of the worth of the axle, carburetor or radiator that he has put on his machine, but the shopman or dealer who sells him such articles must also be in a position to judge the merits of the products he carries.

Will it stand up under the requirements of the machine on which it is to be installed? What are its big advantages? What qualities does it possess that are not to be found in similar articles on the market?

Dealers are finding the automobile owner of today a far different customer to handle than he was a few years ago. The time has passed when he selects a car on the say-so of somebody else and takes their word for its being equipped throughout with parts that will function efficiently at all times. He is rapidly gaining a knowledge of the mechanism of his machine. The hard knocks of experience have convinced him that he must have at least a general idea as to what he is putting his money in. He is learning all the time and will continue to learn.

He will learn that efficient operation comes first and foremost, that graceful lines and the most up-to-date accessories are well and good in their place, but when backed by a major part that is fundamentally wrong they do not count for much. In other words, he is appreciating the value of getting down to the foundation of things.

Just as the car owner looks at things in a different way than he did five or more years ago, so is the manufacturer of component parts showing the results of these years of study and testing out. He, too, has seen and is continuing to see the wisdom in digging below the surface. The result is a more varied line of parts, as well as a more efficient line.

R. C. FRAMPTON TO TOUR WITH CAMP TRAILER

R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Automobile Co., is having some improvements made upon a Minneapolis camp trailer which he intends using during the summer months for touring from St. Louis to points along the Meramec River during the week-end. Later in the summer he intends to tour to Colorado with his family.

The camp trailer, which is collapsible, will accommodate four persons, two on a side. It contains a refrigerator slung from the under side and bins for provisions. An electric battery that will be recharged by the motor will be carried to supply current for an electric fan and lights at night. It will be mounted on pneumatic cord tires of the same gauge as the Hudson car so the trailer will follow in the same tracks.

200 CARS IN LINE FOR PARADE OF MISSOURI AUTOMOBILE CLUB

Motor Boat Race Vaudeville Program and Dinner to 650 Members Complete Day.

Nearly 200 automobiles were in line last Sunday for the annual parade of the Missouri Automobile Club. The parade ended at the Western Rowing Club where a motor boat race was held after which dinner was served to nearly 650 members of the club and their families.

KELDON TRUCK ST. LOUIS PRODUCT

Expect to Have Output of 15 a Month Starting July 1.

The rapid growth of the motor truck industry and the consequent slump in the construction of horse drawn vehicles caused T. B. Kelly, secretary and treasurer of the House Cold Tire Setter Company, 4143 Laclede avenue, a concern which for years has been in the business of manufacturing machinery for shrinking steel tires on wooden wagon wheels to seek new fields, he said while describing the features of a two-ton motor truck which is the first to be made by the company in its new enterprise. The new truck which has been named the Keldon, is to be as much a St. Louis made product throughout as possible, Kelly said. F. W. Gordon is the designer and the truck name is coined from that of Kelly and Gordon.

The truck during the next ten days will be put to a severe test to detect any points in the construction that may be improved. It was loaded with a hundred sacks of sand of a total weight of 10,050 pounds last Thursday and driven more than 20 miles over cobblestone pavements the first day. The same load will be used throughout the testing period, Kelly said. The designer's idea has been to use oversize parts though adhering to two-ton units. The wheels are of steel spoke construction. The parts of the truck that are being made in St. Louis include the springs, made by Champ Spring Co.; cast iron castings, Green Car Wheel Manufacturing Co.; cast steel, St. Louis Frog and Switch Co.; frame, Christopher & Simpson Iron Works; dash, hood and fenders, Max A. Wilsdorf Sheet Metal Works. The motor is of Buda make with a stroke of 4¾x5½. Gordon formerly was in the engineering departments of the Moreland Motor Truck Co. of Los Angeles and Traffic Motor Truck Corporation. They say they expect to produce at least 15 trucks a month after July 15, providing they are not held up on materials.

The firm name will be changed to that of the House Manufacturing Co. or Keldon Motor Truck Co. shortly, Kelly said, but it has not yet been decided which will be chosen.

AUTO TRUCK MAKES RECORD TRIP FROM MEXICO, MO.

Brings Books to St. Louis When Railroads Fail to Supply Car for Shipment.

Harry G. Moock, secretary of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, is responsible for the following story:

David Robertson, an attorney of Central Missouri, recently retired from his law practice at Mexico. His library was considered one of the most complete in the State and it was purchased "as is" by the F. H. Thomas Law Book Company of St. Louis.

For a month Robertson tried to get someone in Mexico to crate the volumes, more than 1000 in number and valued at several thousand dollars. He found he could get no crates and the railroad company additionally could not promise a car for the shipment.

In the meantime the Thomas company learned where they could make a very advantageous disposal of the library—if they could get the books to St. Louis. They telephoned Robertson and asked if there wasn't someone in Mexico with a truck who could make the trip. Robertson got in touch with the Mexico Transfer Co. truck man there, who loaded the whole library aboard a two-ton truck and drove to St. Louis between 6 a. m. and sundown, a distance of 140 miles. The time made was less than the railroad schedule for freight delivery and the cost of transportation was about 40 per cent less than the railroad rate.

PRICES OF CLOSED BUICK CARS WILL ADVANCE, DEALER STATES

Touring Models and Roadsters Will Remain at old Mark; No Radical Change in Construction.

F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., who returned this week from Flint, Mich., after attending the annual sales convention, in discussing Buick sales plans for 1920, said there would be no change in the prices of touring cars and roadsters, but that there would be an advance in the price of closed car models. In a bulletin sent to Buick dealers in this territory, Vesper says the five-passenger sedan has advanced $60; the four-passenger coupe $100 and the seven-passenger sedan $110.

"No radical changes have been made in the new models," he said. Mechanically, the chassis is substantially the same as it was before. No general change of any sort was made in either the touring car or roadster models. Some changes are noticeable in the closed car designs, all of which will carry tilting steering wheels, a new type of side-lights, different trimming, new rear decks, new instrument board and an enlargement of seating space. Some changes also have been made in the design and shape of tops.

The 1920 schedule, Vesper says, calls for the production of 150,000 cars. This total will be greatly increased in the season of 1921, as the new plant in St. Louis, which will have an annual capacity of 60,000 cars, he said, will have been completed by then.

WOMAN IS MANAGER OF WEARWELL TIRE STORE

The first woman manager of an automobile tire agency in St. Louis and perhaps in the United States, made her appearance in the city this week with the opening of the Wearwell Tire Store, 100 North Twelfth street. The manager is Mrs. N. E. Love, who has been with the Wilson Tire and Rubber Co. of Springfield, Ill., for more than six years. Mrs. Love estimated the value of the opening stock of Wearwell, Service and Red Dot tires, of which the building interior is practically filled at $18,000.

A stock of automobile inner tubes is expected during the week, she said.

Mrs. Love said these tires are manufactured in Springfield, Ill., and the middleman's cost will be saved to the consumer as the tires will be handled direct from the factory.

Mrs. Love formerly lived in Springfield, Ill., and on previous occasions has been in charge of the opening of similar branches in Chicago and Kansas City. She said she will be the manager permanently of the St. Louis concern.

ROAD EXHIBITS TO BE PRESENTED AT 57 FAIRS BY U. S. GOV'T.

Complete exhibits designed to show the various types of highway construction now in use in the United States, together with beautiful photographs illustrating the effect of roadside treatment and scenes of striking interest to be found along the highways of the United States, will be shown this year at 57 fairs under the supervision of Government authorities.

These collections will form part of a series of Government offerings which will be open to visitors to fairs all over the United States. The series depicting roadside treatment is expected to prove of especial interest, as this subject is one which is only just coming home to American road builders.

The photographs indicate forcibly the great beauty which may be added to highways through a little attention to shrubbery, trees and vegetation generally along the road.

On the committee with Bailey are B. E. Purcell of the Dorris Motor Car Co., Frank Martin of the Martin Truck Co., H. H. Hawke of the Traffic Truck Co. and Henry Rottersman of the Rottersmann Auto & Truck Co.

ORDER FOR CARS WORTH TOTAL OF $15,600,000 IS PLACED

Apperson Company Receives Large Contract From Kansas City Distributers.

What is said to be one of the largest single orders ever received for motor cars by a manufacturing company has just been booked by the Apperson Bros. Automobile Co. of Kokomo, Ind., according to Roy Frye, president of the Frye Motor Car Co., local Apperson dealers.

The Bruening Bros. of Kansas City last week placed with Elmer and Edgar Apperson, pioneer motor car builders of Kokomo, an order which represents a total of $15,600,000 worth of automobiles.

"Ship-by-Truck" Bureau Means Co-operation

Through the local Firestone Ship-By-Truck Bureau the Motor Truck Express operator is brought in direct contact with the shipper. Also it is bringing the producer and consumer closer together, reducing the expenses of the city dweller and increasing the funds of the farmer.

During the last week a St. Louis moving and storage company contracted for three long hauls of household goods. One from St. Louis to Rolla, Mo., a distance of 280 miles round trip; another from St. Louis to West Frankfort, Ill., a distance of 250 miles round trip; and another to Marissa, Ill., a distance of 95 miles round trip.

The Ship-By-Truck system can go to the freight instead of waiting for the freight to be brought to the system. It saves drayage on both ends of the line.

Ship by Truck
The Sign of Good Trucking Service—
Manufacture—Operation—Maintenance

The Ship-By-Truck method of transportation for short hauls is the eventual solution of many shipping problems, not only in reference to the smaller towns and the farmer, but as an advantage to the big city shipper as well.

St. Louis has fifty Ship-By-Truck lines in successful operation, running into contiguous territory. New lines are in their preliminary stages and it can be stated authoritively that at least one of these will be in practical operation within a short time, operating on a regular schedule between St. Louis, Union and Washington, Mo.

The Firestone Ship by Truck Bureau

The growing interest in the shipment of goods by motor truck has reached a point where a clearing house for information on this new industry should be of great value to all classes of shippers and truck operators.

As an aid toward bringing "Ship by Truck" to its greatest usefulness to all we have established a department to gather, compile and circulate information.

It will pay you to send us at once the information called for below

SHIPPERS: Manufacturers, merchants and farmers are invited to get in touch with our "Ship by Truck" bureau for information regarding motor express routes and lines covering their requirements. Let us know what you have to ship, in what volume, with what frequency, to what destinations, etc.

MOTOR EXPRESS OPERATORS: Send to our "Ship by Truck" bureau all information of interest to shippers, such as the route or routes you cover, tonnage capacity of trucks, schedules under which you operate, rates, etc.

THE one sure way to tell what a tire is worth as it stands in the store of a dealer, is to divide its price in dollars and cents by the miles of the adjustment that backs it up.

Then square it up against the GOODRICH SQUARE, Standard Measure of True Tire Value.

Square its price, discounts or no discounts, against Goodrich List Prices on the short branch of THE SQUARE.

Square its mileage adjustment against the Goodrich More-Mileage Adjustment on the long branch of THE SQUARE—6,000 miles for Fabrics; 8,000 for Silvertown Cords.

If you pay more than the Goodrich List Prices—always the same to you, and everyone else everywhere—the tire overcharges you. If you take less miles than the GOODRICH MORE-MILEAGE Adjustment, you short-mileage yourself.

When you have thus measured tires by GOODRICH SQUARE, you understand all this talk you hear everywhere about the miles-for-money economy of Goodrich Tires.

You understand the message that's in the air, spread by word of mouth wherever automobiles go, "Goodrich has THE TIRES."

You understand why thousands of tire users who never before realized the supreme quality and service of Goodrich Tires, are putting them on their cars.

Maxwell: advanced by fine engineering

FIVE decided improvements have been made in the Maxwell. One makes it look better. Another makes the electrical unit far more efficient. A third makes the engine run sweeter, steadier, and gives it advanced economy. A fourth adds a comfort in seating. A fifth produces increased durability in the top.

You get a Maxwell now with the famous Hot Spot and Ram's-horn and you find a rare delight in more power and more mileage at the old-time cost.

But it isn't a new model Maxwell. For this car is merely the chassis of five years ago with all the advances made in fine engineering.

This is the original chassis model of which 300,000 have been built to date—300,000 all alike basically, but each one better than the previous one.

Thus you get a sound, safe, extremely reliable car, refined to a degree, and at the same time you get the new improvements without paying a penny more. The price is still $985 f. o. b. Detroit.

West Leads in Per Capita Ownership of Motor Cars

The West leads the nation in per capita auto ownership, according to figures compiled by the bureau of publicity of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce.

Michigan, in tenth place, is the leading state east of the Mississippi.

In Nebraska there is an auto to every seven and eight-tenths people. In other words, if it were necessary for the entire population to leave the state it could be done quickly without the assistance of railroads.

The state of Utah is in twenty-fourth place.

SOME TIRE DON'TS THAT ARE WORTH REMEMBERING

Don't run your car with the wheels out of alignment. Wheels that don't track" are gluttons for rubber.

Don't let your inflation get below the point recommended by the tire dealer. Underinflation is keeping thousands of tire builders working overtime.

Dont buy tires smaller than recommended by the manufacturer for a car of the weight of the one you own. It isn't economy.

Don't forget to remove and reverse your inner tubes every three months. They appreciate a change and will pay for it.

Don't buy a nameless tube or casing. The manufacturer who is afraid to put his name on his product is ashamed of the goods.

Don't blame the tire if it "blows" after standing idle in a warm garage all winter. Tires don't thrive on a hibernation diet of heat, oil and grease.

REGISTRATION REQUIRED EACH TIME AUTOMOBILE IS SOLD

Transfer of Used Car Must Be Sworn to and Certificate Filed With Secretary of State.

The matter of registration for the transfer of used automobiles at the time of sale is causing much questioning among automobilists.

Under the new law which is an amendment to the Motor Vehicle Law of Missouri passed to curtail automobile thefts, and which became effective May 21, the sale of an automobile is illegal and a fine of $50 is imposed if the law is violated.

It is required that the registration certificate issued by John L. Sullivan, Secretary of State, be taken by the seller and the buyer of a used car before a notary public and signed by both. A copy of the transfer blank is then to be sent to the Secretary of State accompanied by a fee of 50 cents to make the sale legal.

The law requires that this procedure be followed each time a used car is sold and dealers selling used cars are required to comply with the law by obtaining original certificate blanks to be filled in with each transaction of this nature.

Transfer certificate blanks may be obtained from Secretary of State Sullivan, at Jefferson City.

FIVE REBUILT CARS SHIPPED TO MALAY

The Weber Implement and Automobile Co. report the shipment of five rebuilt Hupmobiles to a firm in the Malay peninsula.

These cars were crated in the rebuilding plant and delivered to the railroad on trucks.

The Weber company reports they have exported over 50 rebuilt cars through a New York broker. This business started with a trial order of six cars in 1916. Additional orders have been received. There were no cars shipped last year on account of the war, but officials of the concern look forward to receiving more orders.

The cars were shipped by rail to San Francisco and then placed on board steamship bound for Penang, China.

PIONEER TRACTORS TO BE EXHIBITED

Harry Newman, distributor of Pioneer trucks and tractors in the St. Louis territory, said the Pioneer tractor will be exhibited at the Wichita, Kan., tractor demonstration from July 14 to 21. It will also be represented at the Aberdeen tractor show to be held Aug. 18 to 21, as well as the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia, Aug. 9 to 16, and the Illinois State Fair at Springfield Aug. 15 to 23, Newman said.

Pioneer trucks will have a berth in both the New York and Chicago motor truck shows to be held in January, he said.

Before You Buy Another Tire

There would have to be something superhuman about a motorist who'd like to pay twice as much as he need pay for the upkeep of his tires.

The tires now on your car, assuming that you've already had 3,000 to 5,000 miles out of them, can be made to give 5,000 to 10,000 miles more—and with an iron-clad guarantee against puncture.

This is made possible by the improved principle of tire construction developed and perfected by Charles C. Gates, E. M.—and embodied in Gates Half-Sole Tires.

These Gates Half-Sole Tires have been proved on the cars of 500,000 motorists, many of them business men you know.

They make your tires 20% oversize—stronger and better than ever before; and they cost only ½ as much as other tires of corresponding size.

In addition, the puncture-proof guarantee that's back of them assures you freedom from tire worry—and consequently greater pleasure from the use of your car.

We believe that more mileage and a saving of one-half on your tire bills must appeal to you as a motorist—it's the kind of service you want.

Kidney Remedy for 40 Years a Pronounced Success

When kidney diseases have been successfully treated for a period of more than forty years, it is reasonable to assume that the remedy therefore must possess unusual merit. Such is the remarkable record of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy. Without its ability to give relief and benefit its users so that they would continue its use, it could not have existed 40 months, much less 40 years, of its enviable record. Many letters have come to us to prove that it has been a household remedy for years and years. Here is what one grateful woman has recently written:

"I wish to say that your remedies have been used in our family for fifteen years. We are never without a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy in our home, and it has saved many a doctor's bill. It is a wonderful medicine for all diseases of the kidneys and liver."—(Signed) Florence E. Schmidt, R. F. D. No. 1, Dunkirk, Ohio.

For the elimination of poisons due to impaired kidney action, Warner's Safe Remedy was famous for 25 years before this woman so judiciously began its effective use. There are thousands of people who realize that their general health depends upon their kidneys and have found Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy a reliable family medicine. Forty years ago it was named "Safe" because it is SAFE absolutely; equalizing the work of both the kidneys and liver. Satisfactory results are obtained in the most severe cases, and it is sold by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and druggists everywhere. A sample sent on receipt of ten cents. Goodyear Cushion Truck Tires on this truck have scored 20,000 miles, while reducing truck repair costs

High Mileages, Low Truck Costs—Furla's Results With Goodyear Cushions

> "We have been using Goodyear Cushion Tires 36 x 4 on the front end of our truck, and have had wonderful success. This truck averages fifty-five to sixty miles a day and has continually worked every working day for the past fifteen months, yet the tires look as though there had been practically no wear on them. They are a great benefit to the truck as far as cushioning is concerned, cutting down repair bills and at the same time giving a driver more comfort."
> Furla Fruit Supply Co.

THE figures set down in the above letter from Mr. John Furla, show that his Goodyear Cushion Tires have scored more than 20,000 miles and show practically no signs of wear.

However, the very obvious economy in mileage records such as this, is still further improved by a substantial reduction in truck repair costs.

This reduction is accomplished because of the high resiliency of Goodyear Cushions, which so protect the Furla truck from jars and jolts that repairs have been decisively lessened.

To thinking truck owners it is becoming increasingly evident that these features of long wear plus resiliency in a truck tire should be and can be obtained.

It is obvious that the maximum of truck service and truck economy can be secured in no other way.

In the St. Louis territory you can secure a Goodyear Truck Tire that is fully capable of giving you these desirable economies.

At the Goodyear Truck Tire Service Stations listed below, you can depend upon men who are competent to analyze your haulage conditions and determine whether Goodyear Cushions, Solids or Pneumatic Cords will serve you best.

You can depend too, upon their ability to apply your tires correctly and promptly, and upon their willingness to help you get the very last mile of wear built into all Goodyear Truck Tires.

Many other St. Louis truck owners are profiting from the combination of Goodyear Truck Tires and Goodyear Service. Why not you?

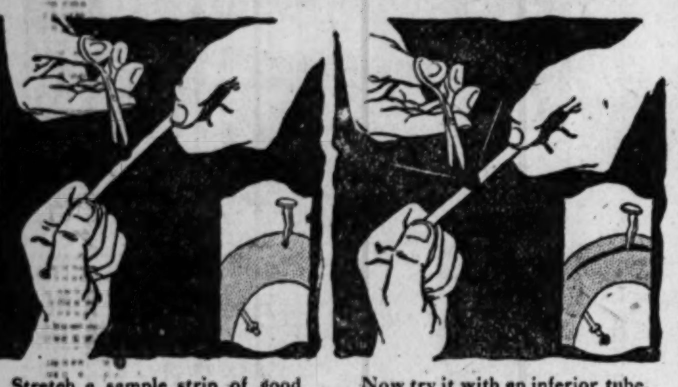
The Scissors Test Take sample piece of tube ¼ inch by 3 inches. Stretch to 9 inches or three times its original length. Cut on the edge with the scissors. The cut should not be more than ⅛ inch across the sample. If the strip tears apart the rubber is inferior.



Stretch a sample strip of good tube—red or gray. Snip it on the edge. It cuts—but it does not rip.

Now try it with an inferior tube. The slightest cut and it rips across. Make your dealer prove that the tube he sells will stand the Norwalk Test.

The Scissors Test Proves That Norwalk Tubes Do Not Rip

1. Neither blow-out nor puncture can destroy a tube which will not rip.

2. Cuts remain little, clean-edged holes, which can be easily repaired.

3. Norwalk Tubes are guaranteed not to rip as other tubes.

Norwalk Tubes, both red and gray, set a new standard—floating stock*.

TRANSCONTINENTAL TRACTOR STOPS HERE

Has Completed More Than 2000 Miles of Its Coast-to-Coast Trip.

The first tractor to attempt a transcontinental run passed through St. Louis this week, having completed more than 2000 miles of the trip, which started from New York City, May 31, with Los Angeles as the destination.

The tractor hauled a trailer from New York City to Shelbyville, Ill. At this point the roads were in such poor state of repair, said one of the pilots, that the trailer was loaded on a freight car and shipped to Kansas City, where the tractor will take it up again.

Edward Kuhl of Buffalo, N. Y., was in charge of the expedition. He had recently returned from 18 months' service overseas with a railway engineer regiment.

The tractor took the National Old Trails road across Missouri from St. Louis, which passes through Columbia, Mo. Here the tractor will be shown to students of the State Agricultural College. The tractor is running on a schedule to arrive in Wichita, Kan., and Los Angeles in time for tractor demonstrations there.

Two sets of wheels form part of the equipment. A rubber-tired set is used on the highways, while a set of metal traction wheels is used for farm work on soft ground. The purpose of the run is to test a new model of the Wheat tractor which is of 20-40 horsepower construction and capable of making as high as 20 miles an hour on good pavement, according to Kuhl.

There are three pilots, who drive in shifts of a day each. They are Howard Tiffany, Gus Bohlig and Theodore Irwin of Buffalo, N. Y. Tiffany was formerly a Lieutenant in the Ordnance Department, while Irwin was a pilot in the air service.

While in St. Louis the tractor made its headquarters at Rottersmann Auto and Truck Co., 2650 Locust street, local dealer for the Wheat tractor.

"SPOT-LIGHT" MAY BE USED IN STATE EXCEPT IN CITIES

Beams Must Be Projected Well Downward, Not Into Eyes of Other Persons.

"While "spot-lights" may not be used in the cities of Missouri ordinarily, they may be used in the country, according to an opinion by an attorney of the National Automobile Dealers' Association to the Supreme Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, quoting the Missouri statute upon this point.

Article 4 of Section 10 of the Missouri Motor Vehicle Law regulating the use "spot lights," says:

"Dirigible Searchlights—How and When Used—Dirigible searchlights shall not be used on the public highways within cities or towns except in emergencies or when headlights are inadequate owing to rain or fog, and then only providing the shaft of condensed light is directed well downward below the level of the lamp and at no time into the eyes of other persons, but dirigible searchlights may be used at any time on public highways outside the limit of cities or towns, provided their light is directed as hereinbefore required."

HOLMES MAKERS EXPERIENCED ON AIR-COOLED TYPE OF AUTO

Makers of the new Holmes car do not believe there is any nature of an experiment in their product as they are all experienced in the manufacture of air-cooled motors cars.

Athur Holmes, president of the Holmes Automobile Co., was formerly chief engineer and vice president of the Franklin Automobile Co., where his work dealt with the development of air-cooling as applied to automobile motors.

During the war Holmes was actively engaged as consulting engineer on airplane motors of the air-cooled type that were installed in combat planes.

In charge of the engineering department of the Holmes plant is H. B. Massey, formerly with the Franklin Automobile Co., where he spent more than seven years in a designing capacity.

C. H. Rockwell, vice president of the Holmes company, was for years in charge of sales in the larger territories for Franklin Automobile Co.

NEW LIBERTY CAR OF STRAIGHT LINE DESIGN

J. D. Costlow, district supervisor of the Liberty Motor Car Co. of Detroit, was in St. Louis for two days this week and announced that quantity production of Liberty cars was expected by Aug. 1. The construction company which has charge of the erection of the new Liberty plant in Detroit, on which it started June 1, has assured its completion by July 20. The buildings of the new plant are of unit construction, Costlow said, and erected more rapidly than other types.

He said the first of the new series of Liberty sedans and coupes would arrive in St. Louis about Sept. 1. The new 1920 series, he said, follow the straight-line design of body, with the radiator of sharp squared lines. Frank Bishop is the local dealer.

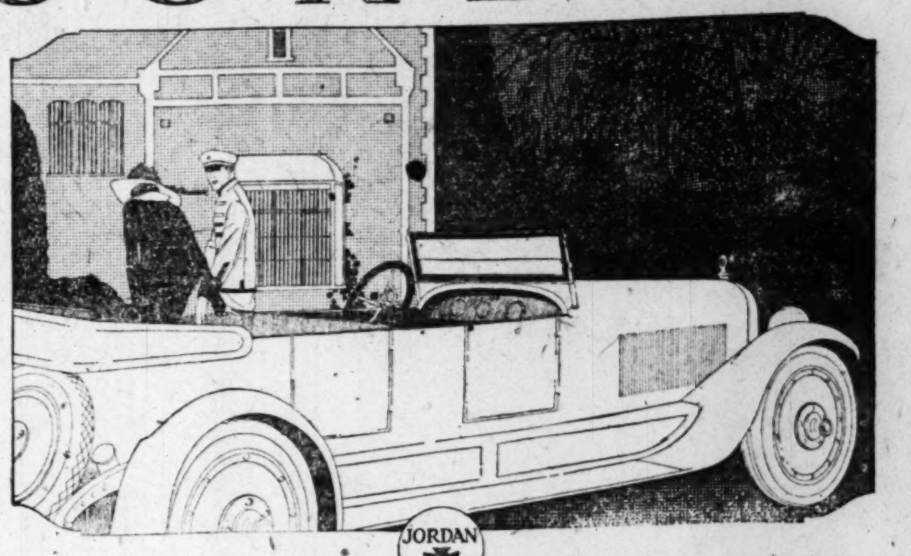
JORDAN



You cannot afford to carry extra weight

THE extremely light car of short wheelbase vibrates up and down.

The extremely heavy car, whose wheelbase also is short considering its weight, cannot escape the wear and tear of side sway.

You cannot afford to carry extra weight. Yet who would sacrifice it at the cost of jerky up and down vibration?

The Jordan Silhouette has banished both difficulties forever.

It is the lightest car on the road for its wheelbase.

Yet it possesses that peculiar balance which cannot be attained in cars weighing twelve to fifteen hundred pounds more—nor in extremely light, short cars.

Its whole tendency is toward forward movement.

It is a new kind of a car. And heralding the new, it has naturally marked the passing of the old.

Picture the perfectly balanced chassis of finished mechanical excellence equipped with this new custom style all-aluminum body. Style—dash—individuality—and perfect riding comfort.

Built in both four and seven passenger. Optional colors Brewster Green and Burgundy Old Wine.

If you have found it impossible to secure prompt delivery of a Paige car, please remember that we share your disappointment and keenly regret our inability to have served you.

Our plants are now working at capacity with a very large production schedule, but, despite our best efforts, it has been impossible to keep step with the public demand. In Peace and War Use ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE

A prominent British Government officer, in a speech about the war to a large body of business men in N.Y. City recently said, "After the tired soldier has returned from a 12 mile tramp with swollen and aching feet, is there a mother, who, if she knew, would not go out and get some Foot-Ease to send to her boy?"

People everywhere should realize the comfort derived from Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder to be shaken into the shoes. It takes the friction from the shoe and gives instant relief to tired, aching, swollen, tender feet, corns, bunions, blisters and callouses.

The Plattsburg Camp Manual advises all men in training to shake Foot-Ease in their Shoes each morning. Try it yourself and if you have a son, brother or friend in the army or navy, why not mail him a package now. Sold by drug and dep't stores everywhere.

Hair Made Beautifully Wavy While You Sleep!

Just think, girls! You apply a little liquid silmerine at bedtime and in the morning your hair has a prettier wave and curl than probably it has ever had. The waviness looks perfectly natural and the hair is sleek and glossy like plush. It will remain in curl the longest time, regardless of heat, wind or moisture, and you won't have to be continually fussing with loose strands or flyaway ends.

Liquid silmerine is, of course, entirely harmless. It leaves no sticky, greasy or streaky trace. It has the peculiar quality of drying in beautiful waves, crimps and swirls. It is also an excellent dressing for the hair, keeping it delightfully soft and silky. A few ounces from your druggist will last for weeks. It is best applied with a clean toothbrush, drawing this down the full length of the hair. —ADV.

The route followed will take them to Niagara Falls, Syracuse, Utica, Albany, Plattsburg, Burlington, St. Johnsbury, Portland, Boston, Providence, New Haven, West Point, Binghamton, Ithaca, Elmira, Jamestown and Youngstown, back to Akron, the trip to consume two weeks. The party will camp in true Boy Scout fashion at night, although the trucks are fitted with double-deck berths and are manned by a double shift of drivers, so that travel may continue day and night when necessary. Moving pictures will be taken on this trip that will be shown throughout the country by the National Council of Boy Scouts.

The Dressel Collapsible Rim Corporation has purchased the building at 5156-8 Delmar avenue, and will move in this week. The company has installed about $3000 worth of new machinery for the manufacture of its rim locks.

The Aldrich-Stephens Motor Co. of 3027 Locust street entered in the truck expedition a 1909 Locomobile that they converted into a two-ton truck by the use of their All-Car internal-gear-drive truck attachment.

In Jerseyville, Ill., George C. Cockrell was so interested in the truck that he took Aldrich to his garage and showed him an old Garford touring car. The motor was in perfect condition and it is needless to say how easy it was for Aldrich to get the order. Monday morning Cockrell had his old Garford at the Aldrich-Stephens Motor Co.'s place, and Friday he drove it back to Jerseyville as a regular two-ton truck.

BRIGHT FUTURE FOR ST. LOUIS AS A DISTRIBUTING CENTER

Inglish Horckitz, formerly with Fred Campbell Auto Supply Co., has been appointed district manager of The Ever-Tight Piston Ring Co., with headquarters in St. Louis. Horckitz returned this week from an extensive trip through the South and predicts a bright future for St. Louis as a distributing center in the automotive industry throughout the South. He said dealers have been organizing and business has shown a tendency to a good substantial increase over the same period of a year ago in the states where he traveled. Horckitz's territory includes the eastern half of the United States, extending from the Mississippi River to the Atlantic coast and the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

Famo Stops Seborrhea and Grows Healthy Hair

We ask you to put FAMO to the most exacting test.

Have a member of your family examine your scalp before you start the use of FAMO.

Apply FAMO daily for one month.

Have your scalp examined again.

If they do not report the growth of new hair, return the FAMO bottle to where you purchased it and you will receive your money back.

FAMO DOES grow new hair luxuriantly.

It makes the hair fluffy and soft.

FAMO intensifies a natural tendency to waviness and retards grayness. It contains no harmful alcohol to dry the scalp and produce gray hair.

Every woman should use FAMO regularly.

Its use is a daily habit you will enjoy.

But not only does FAMO beautify the hair.

FAMO kills the deadly seborrhea microbe which is the cause of dandruff.

It stops all itching of the scalp and nourishes and feeds the hair roots.

It penetrates the scalp without massage and gives life and sheen to the hair.

FAMO was evolved by scientists in one of the famous laboratories of Detroit.

Three years were spent in perfecting it before it was offered to the public.

The ingredients in FAMO have never before been used on the head.

But they have been well known to medical science for many years.

They work differently from any other hair preparation.

FAMO stands alone.

If your hair is thin and lacks lustre and the dandruff scale causes constant irritation of the scalp, you should start the use of FAMO at once.

It destroys the dandruff bacilli.

FAMO is sold at all toilet goods counters in two sizes—35 cents and $1. The dollar bottle is extra large and contains four times as much as the smaller size.

Applications of FAMO may be had at the better barber shops and hair dressing establishments.

Seborrhea is the medical name for a morbidly increased flow from the sebaceous glands of the scalp. The seborrhean excretion forms in scales and flakes and is commonly known as dandruff.

Make This Test For Acid-Stomach

There are millions of people who suffer almost daily from the horrors of an acid-stomach—indigestion; sour, gassy, stomach; distressing heartburn; sickening food-repeating; painful bloat and that miserable, puffed up, lumpy feeling after eating. Many of these people have tried treatment after treatment; medicine after medicine; others have gone to doctors and stomach specialists and some to hospitals but in spite of all of their efforts they have obtained no lasting relief or a permanent cure.

These symptoms simply mean acid-stomach. If allowed to run on, they are very likely to cause a lot of serious trouble. Dyspepsia, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, sciatica, splitting headache, dizzy spells, nervousness, sleeplessness, mental depression, melancholia, a feeling of listlessness and all-goneness—these are just a few of the disorders which can be traced to acid-stomach. As a matter of fact, acid-stomach is often the direct cause of those almost incurable conditions known as catarrh of the stomach, intestinal ulcer, and cancer of the stomach. The lives of those who suffer from these serious troubles are nothing short of daily agony. Surely, then, you must see how important it is to go at once to the seat of the trouble—acid-stomach. You know what acid-mouth does to the teeth—how it eats right through the hard enamel and causes them to decay. Think then of the havoc that must be caused by excess acid in the stomach!

Even if you are not suffering any immediate stomach pains, but are not feeling just as fit and fine as you should, you should by all means make this test: go to your drug store at once and get a big box of EATONIC. It is in the form of pleasant-tasting tablets—you eat them like a bit of candy. EATONIC is prepared for just one purpose—correcting acid-stomach by driving out the excess acid. EATONIC literally absorbs the excess acid. It brings instant relief from the pains of indigestion, heartburn, belching, sour, gassy stomach, bloat, etc. It makes the stomach pure, sweet, cool and comfortable, puts it in a normal, healthy condition, so that your food is properly digested. You need every bit of strength you can possibly get out of the food you eat—and EATONIC helps you get it.

Don't put this test off if you value your future good health and happiness. You run no chance at all because EATONIC is absolutely guaranteed to give you relief—or your druggist will refund your money. The cost is a mere trifle.

How Signs of Old Age Creep Into Your System When the Iron in Your Blood Runs Low

For Want of Iron, You May Be Old at Thirty—Nervous, Irritable and All Rundown—While at Fifty or Sixty, With Plenty of Iron in Your Blood, You May Be Young in Feeling and Brimming Over With Health and Ambition

IRON IS THE RED BLOOD FOOD

That Helps Strengthen the Nerves, Restores Wasted Tissue and Aids in Giving Renewed Force and Power to the Body. Physicians explain Why Administration of Simple Nuxated Iron Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Delicate, Run-down People in Two Weeks' Time.

Old age has already sunk its talons into thousands of men and women who ought still to be enjoying the springtime and summer of life simply because they have allowed worry, overwork, nervous strain, dissipation and occupational poisons to sap the iron from their blood and thereby destroy its power to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain. You will find plenty of people at 40 who are broken in health and steadily going downward to physical and mental decay while others at 50 are strong, active, alert and seemingly growing younger every year. One class withers and dies like leaves in autumn, while the other, by keeping up a strong power of resistance against disease, may pass the threescore and ten mark with surprising health, strength and ambition. But you cannot expect to look and feel young and vigorous unless you have plenty of iron in your blood, and physicians explain below why they prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to supply the iron deficiency in the weak, nervous and run-down so as to build them up into stronger, healthier men and women.

You Are Ageing
If you are wearied by the activities of your daily life

YOU ARE AGEING
If you have lost the spring of your step and your movements are cumbrous

YOU ARE AGEING
If your skin is shrinking and your face looks wrinkled, careworn and old

YOU ARE AGEING
If the enthusiasm for tackling your daily problems has waned

"Many a man and woman who ought still to be young lacks ambition and energy simply because their blood is starving for want of iron" says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man nervous, irritable and easily fatigued but it utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life. Thousands are ageing and breaking down at a time when they should be enjoying perfect health because anaemia—lack of iron in the blood—has fastened its grip on them and is sapping their strength, vitality and energy. For want of iron you may be old at thirty, dull of intellect, poor of memory, nervous and all "run-down" while at 50 or 60 with good health and plenty of iron in your blood you may be young in feeling, full of life, and your whole being brimming over with vim and energy. As a proof of this take the case of Former United States Senator Charles A. Towne, who at past 58 is still a veritable mountain of tireless energy. Senator Towne says: "I have found Nuxated Iron of the greatest benefit as a tonic and regulative. Henceforth, I shall not be without it."

Then there is former Health Commissioner William R. Kerr of Chicago, who is past the threescore year mark, but is still vigorous, active, full of life, vim and energy. Former Health Commissioner Kerr says he believes his own personal activity today is largely due to his use of Nuxated Iron and that he belives it ought to be prescribed by every physician and used in every hospital in the country.

"But in my opinion you can't make strong, keen, forceful men and healthy, rosy-cheeked women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist upon dosing themselves with metallic iron, simply, I suppose because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron.

Manufacturers' Note—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Dr. Sullivan and other physicians with such surprising results, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Weipert Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Co., Enderle Drug Co., Pauley's Drug Co. and other druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

ALKALI IN SHAMPOOS BAD FOR WASHING HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

BILLS PROVIDE FOR NATIONAL HIGHWAYS

More Than 40 Measures Introduced in Congress Reflect Demand for Federal Action.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—More than twoscore bills already introduced in the special session of the Sixty-sixth Congress make evident the positive demand that is developing all over the United States for nationalized highways and more complete control of Federal expenditures on roads by the Government

Though the extra session is yet young, some 40 bills having highways as their major theme have been dropped into the legislative hopper, while more than a score of others which deal with the road situation to a greater or lesser degree are now on file.

Chief among these in interest, of course, is the measure of Senator Townsend of Michigan providing for a national system of highways, a Federal highway commission, and a thorough study of the principles governing transportation.

This bill was first introduced at the last session. Since then it has been subjected to a nation-wide criticism, with the result that numerous powerful organizations have gone on record favoring it as a bill which treats the subject in the broadest manner and with due consideration for the varying needs of the respective states.

Evidently the present bureau plan of Federal road administration does not now meet with country-wide favor, as aside from the Townsend measure, several others have been introduced which would create a radically different form of control.

Would Drop Bureau.

For instance, Senator Jones of Washington calls for the creation of a department of public works, which would, among its other duties, include all that is now done by the Bureau of Public Roads. Representative Osborne of California would create a department of Federal highways and establish a national highway system, while Representative Reavis of Nebraska introduces in the House the same measure as is sponsored in the Senate by Jones.

Senator Sheppard of Texas is the author of one bill calling for a military highway along the Southwestern border, while Representative Hayden of Arizona also would have the War Department at once undertake a survey and investigate the need for a boundary road. Representative Hudspeth of Texas has about the same idea, except that he would delay in starting the building of such a military highway.

Senator Jones would have a survey of the entire Pacific coast for the purpose of investigating the need of a military road. He would also survey and locate a military and post road from St. Louis to Olympia, Wash.

Representative Lea of California proposes a highway for military coast defense purposes along the Northern Pacific Coast of his State, to be known as the Roosevelt Highway. Hawley of Oregon seconds this idea and calls for the construction of the Roosevelt Highway along the coast of his commonwealth.

Wants Military Roads.

Senator Shields of Tennessee would authorize the Secretary of War to prepare a preliminary plan for a system of improved national highways, keeping in mind possible future military requirements.

Representative Robison of Kentucy asks for an increase of $1,000,000,000 to present Federal Aid Road act appropriations; while Representative Ferris of Oklahoma believes that $400,000,000 should be added.

Many of the Rocky Mountain states representatives have fathered measures which would provide for the sale of public lands for use in road improvement, one of the most important of these bills coming from Senator Phipps of Colorado.

There are a number of bills which call for special appropriations for the construction of national park thoroughfares, memorial roads and military highways.

"It is interesting to note in analyzing the measures that the demand comes from all sections of the United States," comments Chairman George C. Diehl of the A. A. A. National Good Roads Board, "showing that the movement for national highways is a genuine growth, and that the roads question has passed beyond sectional stages."

SECRETARY OF STATE ASKS DEALERS TO CHECK UP CARS

Sullivan Wants Monthly Report on Sales to Keep Tab on New Licenses.

Secretary of State Sullivan of Missouri has forwarded to the National Automobile Dealers' Association copies of a blank form for dealers to fill monthly, setting forth the number of new cars they have sold, the persons to whom sold, their address, name of vehicle and horse power.

This blank, the Secretary points out, is required under the Missouri Motor Vehicle law, and has nothing to do with the provisions of the registration of used cars, sale of which has been regulated by a law passed in the last Legislature.

The purpose of this dealers' monthly report is to assist the Secretary to check up on unpaid automobile licenses. Sullivan recently stated to the association that there were several thousand automobiles in Missouri operating without a State license.

Mixed Summer Foods The Cause Of Much Indigestion

SUMMER days are days of careless living, kitchens too hot for cooking, cold lunches at the homes of friends, open-air picnics, with the result that many a family is down with indigestion.

Give the stomach and bowels a new start by taking a dose of a good laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then put variety into your diet by eating more warm food. It is more easily digested.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. It acts so gently and safely that it can be given even to a baby in constipation, indigestion, "summer colds" and similar ills.

The formula on which Syrup Pepsin is based was written by Dr. Caldwell over 30 years ago. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that trains the stomach-muscles to do their work naturally so that medicines can again be dispensed with. Over 6 million bottles of Syrup Pepsin are sold by druggists every year. That is recommendation in itself.

If you have never used Syrup Pepsin, send your address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

SUMMER DANGERS OF FAT PEOPLE

Liability to Collapse, Heart Failure, Sunstroke, Apoplexy and Other Serious Ailments

Why continue to suffer with summer heat because you are bloated with fat? Apart from the unsightliness and discomfort, you are risking your life.

If you are overstout you should determine right now that you will take off ten to sixty pounds—whatever you need to—and become normal in size with the benefit of better health, a cheerful disposition, attractive appearance and the joy of knowing that you have conquered a great victory in a comparatively easy manner.

Eat all you need; don't take tedious exercise or sickening medicines, but go to the drug store and get a small box of oil of korein (in capsules); then take one at each mealtime and one when going to bed; also follow the simple rules that come with the box. Or you may obtain a free book on how to get thin, which will come to you in a plain envelope, by writing to Korein Company, NF-27, Station F, New York, N. Y.

A reduction averaging one pound daily is often reported by this system, while in obstinate cases the fat does not disintegrate so rapidly. A guarantee of $100 is offered that the use of oil of korein and observance of certain simple rules will reduce your weight ten to sixty pounds—just whatever is necessary to bring you down to a good figure. Make this a happy summer. Surprise and delight yourself and your friends! Get oil of korein at any druggist.—ADV.

Use O-Cedar Polish the O-Cedar Polish Way

First, remove mud, dust, etc., from your car by washing with water in the usual way.

If you have used oils, or wax, it is best to use Ivory Soap to remove them.

Pour about 4 ounces of O-Cedar in a pan and add a quart of warm water. Saturate a clean cloth in this and go over the body of the car. Do not attempt to clean too much at a time—take one side of the body or a fender first. Follow by rubbing with a dry cloth. But little rubbing is required to produce a hard, dry, lasting lustre.

BOOKLET ON FARM LIFE FOR SOLDIERS

War Department Distributing 800,000 Circulars on Advantages of Land Owning.

In the interest of returned soldiers who wish to take up farm life the War Department has prepared for distribution a booklet entitled "Forward to the Farm," designed to inform such as to how they may best become established. More than 800,000 copies are now being distributed in France and in the demobilization camps.

While it is made plain that there is no disposition on the part of the Government to urge farm work on those who do not care for it, the attractive features of the life are pointed out. It is explained that there is an enormous demand for farm labor throughout the country and vast crops must be garnered. Wages for farm hands, it adds, are most attractive, and furthermore, it states that there are many opportunities for men with or without funds to start as farmers. It says:

"No Get-Rch-Quick" Scheme.

"There is no get-rick-quick side to farming; neither do the best farms succeed when directed from a rocking chair on the back porch. But if you mean business; if you are ready to work and willing and anxious to learn, there are all sorts of chances for you to wrest success and money from the bosom of Mother Earth.

"Farmers have coined big money in the past two years—more than in all the six years previous. Look at North Dakota—it has the greatest percentage of increase in income tax of any State in the Union, and almost all its people are farmers. They are important people, too. Are these farmers rubes? Fiddlesticks. The rube's day is done."

The booklet was prepared under the direction of Col. Arthur Woods, assistant to the Secretary of War. Men who wish to obtain farm work and are not able to get employment are asked to write him at Washington, D. C.

Men interested in other features of the Government's back-to-the-land plan are advised to write one or more of the following:

Sources of Information.

AMERICAN RED CROSS GIVES CARE TO RUMANIAN CHILDREN

Comfort Given Little Ones for First Time in Four Years of Privations and Suffering.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, June 2.—The children of Rumania are the special care of the American Red Cross nurses who are showing Rumanian mothers how to care properly for them. They are distributing infants' clothing, condensed milk, soap, talcum powder and everything that contributes to a baby's comfort.

The Red Cross workers found the children in all these war-affected towns in a pitiful state of impoverishment. Many of them were slowly dying of starvation. Others had pellagra and malignant skin diseases. These little ones are now being cared for and given nourishing and fattening foods.

All these children have been under the stress and strain of war for four years and have really never known what childhood is. In common with their parents, they have borne the keenest privations and sufferings. Since Rumania entered the war they have not known what it is to play or to laugh. Hunger has robbed them of that spirit. The war has blighted their lives. No smiles have come to their faces, no happiness into their hearts. The Red Cross gives them American jam and sweets, the things that youngsters the world over crave for, and their dark eyes, frank and melancholy, light up with a new radiance. They become children again.

CRACK ESTHONIAN REGIMENT WAS ORGANIZED BY AMERICAN

He Financed Unit of 1000 Men Which Has Been Fighting for Several Months.

By the Associated Press.

REVAL, Esthonia, July 3.—The crack regiment of the new Esthonian army is one organized and financed by an American citizen, H. C. Reisser. It is composed of cavalry, infantry and artillery units, numbers 1000 men, and has been fighting for several months.

Reisser already had organized a small Red Cross hospital of 50 beds. The first articles which this hospital requested of the American relief workers were an American flag and a Red Cross flag. When both of these were supplied they flung the two banners to the breeze from flag poles in the hospital yard.

To Overcome Redness, Tan, Freckles, Blotches

If your skin is unduly reddened, tanned or freckled, just dab a little pure mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine, flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer skin is absorbed, but so gradually and gently there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the stubbornest freckles are affected. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so clear, fresh and youthful-looking, you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing known to actually discard an aged, faded, muddy or blotchy complexion. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.—ADV.

Plays All Makes Records Many Times Better

Almost everyone who hears the New Edison for the first time is amazed at its natural re-creative qualities. The piano records record sound exactly like a piano. You would declare there was a piano in the room if you did not see the phonograph. The violin sounds like a real violin, with all the quality and timbre of that king of musical instruments. And the voice—well, all we can say is, "The artist is standing right there, a living, breathing reality, singing right to you and for you at your command".

SOUTHERN HOTEL MAY BE VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

Quarters Needed to Comply With Law for Instruction for Employed Children.

The famous old Southern Hotel building at Broadway and Walnut street perhaps will soon be transformed into a vocational institute and continuation school by the St. Louis Board of Education. President Wolfner of the board has said the definite steps for the purchase of the property, which has been discussed for some time, might be taken in the near future.

If a deal for acquiring the hotel structure is carried through, he said, it is probable the School Board will offer for sale its building on the northwest corner of Ninth and Locust streets and move its administration offices to the Southern building.

Quarters Seriously Needed.

The proposition of buying the Southern Hotel was taken up by the School Board because of the serious need of such quarters by the instruction department of the school system. Under a law passed by the last General Assembly the board will be required to maintain a part time and continuation class department for the purpose of giving special instruction to all children between the ages of 14 and 18 who are employed and who have not finished their elementary school course. The law stipulates that these pupils shall have not less than four hours of class room work each week. It is estimated by the board that there are 12,000 or more such children in St. Louis. The new department, it was pointed out by Wolfner, should be located in a building convenient to the business district. A survey has been made and it has been ascertained that fully 85 per cent of the 12,000 pupils who would attend the school are employed within a radius of one mile of the Southern Hotel building.

Building Believed Suitable.

To provide instruction for each of these 12,000 pupils four hours each week in classes of 25 will require the use of 50 classrooms daily from 8 o'clock in the morning to 5 o'clock in the afternoon. It is thought the hotel building is admirably suited for the work.

The Allen estate, owners of the hotel property, have offered to sell it for $27,000, or approximately $4.50 a square foot, which is 50 cents less a square foot than the board received for its property recently sold at Fourth and Market streets. The building is fireproof, stands on a foundation of 270x229 feet, has six floors and more floor space than either the Soldan or Cleveland high school.

"Without great expense of alteration, the building could be fitted for numerous vocational and trade departments," Dr. Wolfner said. "The Federal and State Governments will appropriate an amount equivalent to any sum we set aside for such instruction. Because the students will be required to attend their classes between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. it will be necessary to provide accommodations near where they work, rather than near where they live."

Not Certain as to Finances.

A definite plan for financing the establishment of the proposed new department of the public schools has not been decided upon. Members of the board do not know from what fund it would be necessary to take the money for the purchase and equipment of the property. The board is conducting practically all the work possible on the amount of funds it has, Dr. Wolfner said, and it is possible another levy will be asked this fall.

The proposition of the Southern Hotel purchase has been well received. It is believed by the school board that the maintenance of such an institution would rehabilitate that section of the city near the historic hostelry, which has been neglected since business has moved farther west.

EMPLOYES' COUNCILS BILL READY FOR GERMAN ASSEMBLY

Committees Would Adjust All Differences With Employes Under Its Provisions.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 7.—A bill creating employes' councils for all industries, businesses and trade in Germany is completed and ready for action by the Assembly. The bill provides for councils in all establishments employing 50 or more persons, an industry with 50 workers to have a council of three, 50 to to 100 a council of five, 100 to 1000, one extra for each hundred and over a thousand employes one extra for each 500. The councils will be chosen by secret vote of all employes over 20 years from candidates who are over 24 years of age.

The councils' duties will be to protect the interests of employes to support the employer in furthering his business, to see to the carrying out of loan agreements, to co-operate in wage disputes, regulate vacations, to increase co-operation between employers and employes, aid in hiring and discharging employes, to support the employer by advice and to obtain the highest possible efficiency.

The employer is obliged to notify the council confidentially on all questions concerning employes unless that endangers trade secrets, and to submit wage books and information regarding trade prospects. The council can hold up every dismissal and can force a discharge if the committee of adjustment approves.

During the first five months of 1919, the Post-Dispatch printed 26,556 For Sale "Wants"—15,262 more than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers combined.

U. S. Supplies Sell High in Italy.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, July [illegible].—The American army reaped a harvest in Italy when it disposed of its surplus equipment. Automobiles which sell for but $900 when new in America brought $2000. Typewriters which sold for $100 in the United States were bought for $200. All the material was second-hand, the automobiles having been used on the Italian front. The importation restrictions and scarcity of material are the causes attributed for the high prices.

MAN WHO SAYS HE IS SENATOR NEW'S SON KILLS FIANCEE

Slayer Takes Body to Los Angeles Police Station in His Closed Car and Gives Himself Up.

TELLS OF SHOOTING IN LONELY CANYON

Declares He Fired Bullet Into Girl's Head When She Refused to Consent to Immediate Marriage.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 5.—"I killed her because I loved her and she wouldn't marry me as she promised; I love her still and am ready to die for my act because I want to go to her," said Harry S. New of Glendale, in concluding an account tonight of the killing of Miss Frieda J. Lesser, his fiancee, at a lonely spot in Topanga Canyon, about 25 miles northwest of here, early today. New says he is a son of United States Senator Harry S. New of Indiana.

Calmly and without apparent remorse, New reviewed in detail to newspaper men and policemen his actions, which included his driving to the Central Police Station with his fiancee's body in the rear seat and surrendering.

New, who is 30 years old, is a graduate of an Indiana military academy. He said he later attended Notre Dame University. He met Miss Lesser at a local manufacturing plant where he was employed as a truck driver and she as a stenographer. The young woman was 21 years old.

New walked into police headquarters early today, told detectives there was a dead woman in his automobile and he desired to give himself up as a murderer. He then led the officers to a sedan type car outside the station, where the body of Miss Lesser, 21 years old, was found.

New said he had quarreled with the young woman at Topanga Canyon, several miles from the city, when she refused to marry him, and had shot her. She had a bullet hole through the head.

New was booked for murder and held without bond.

New told the police, they said, that he was the son of Senator New, and his claim, they said, was corroborated by relatives of the dead girl, who said they had known New and his family in Indiana. The same claim has been made to his employer, according to the police, who said the employer had told them of New's claim to relationship.

"We didn't understand each other," said New, according to detective Sergeant D. A. Davidson, "and so I shot her, and here I am. There she is, too," he added, as he gazed at the dead girl.

He said he had borrowed the automobile from his mother, Mrs. Lulu M. Burger, of Glendale. He told the officers, they said, that for three hours after the shooting he drove around town, trying to make up his mind to surrender.

Mother of Confessed Slayer of Girl Leaves for California.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 5.—Mrs. Lulu Burger, mother of Harry S. New, who today surrendered to the Los Angeles police as the murderer of Miss Frieda Lesser, left Indianapolis early this evening for her home in Glendale, Cal. Mrs. Berger stated that New is the son of Senator Harry S. New of Indianapolis and that she was divorced from Senator New about 18 years ago. Mrs. Burger also said she expected to wire Senator New and solicit his aid in behalf of her son.

Senator New Denies He Was Ever Married to Mrs. Burger.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Senator New issued a statement tonight denying that he and Mrs. Burger ever were married or divorced. When shown a dispatch from Indianapolis quoting Mrs. Burger, the Senator said: "The only thing I care to add is that the statement from any source that Mrs. Burger and I were ever either married or divorced at any time or under any name is absolutely untrue."

Heat Overcomes Dozens in New York

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The hottest July 5 since 1910, today sent the official thermometer to 98 degrees at 3 p. m., and though thunder showers were predicted for tonight, the sky was clear at midnight and the temperature only a few degrees below the day's high mark. About a dozen persons were overcome by the heat. Thousands of persons spent the night on the sands at nearby bathing beaches, while other thousands slept in parks or on the river docks.

HERE'S A ST. LOUIS WAR HERO WITH NO ONE TO CLAIM HIM

Winner of D. S. C. Was Only a Boarder at Home of Woman He Named as "Next of Kin."

A citation issued by the War Department yesterday, announces the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to Sergt. Lawrence E. Rue, of E Company, 132d Infantry, whose "next of kin." according to the official record, is Mrs. Cora Sponagel, of 3917A Flad avenue, St. Louis.

Mrs. Sponagel said Rue was not related to her, but that he boarded at her home for a short time, three or four years ago. He was in Chicago when the United States entered the war, and he enlisted in the Illinois National Guard. His citation is for extraordinary heroism in action near Consenvoye, Oct 9 last, and says:

"Sergt. Rue had led his platoon to its objective, when orders were received to shift the line in preparation for a hostile counter-attack. He thereupon opened fire with an automatic rifle and remained behind under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire until the last of his platoon had reached the newly designated line."

COURTMARTIAL REVIEW ORDER

Secretary Baker Disapproves Ansell Recommendation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Recommendation by Lieutenant-Colonel Samuel T. Ansell of the Judge Advocate-General's department that the case of every military prisoner now under sentence be sent to the Board of Review of which he is head for a re-examination has been disapproved by Secretary Baker. Certain specific cases will, however, be examined again, with the object of determining whether further clemency should be allowed.

Secretary Baker said today that the 1100 military prisoners returning from France under arrest would be given the same opportunity for having their cases reviewed. It was originally intended, he said, to have this done by officers of Gen. Pershing's staff.' Rapid withdrawal, however, of the American expeditionary forces caused a change of plans and the same board which reviewed cases in this country will act on those from overseas.

He is quoted as saying he spent all of the money.

SENATE MEETS AT MIDNIGHT TO PASS PUNISHMENT BILL

House Engrosses Measure and Call Is Sent Out for Absentees So It May Be Put Through Tuesday.

EMERGENCY CLAUSE NEEDS 95 VOTES

Efforts Are Made to Have Law Go Into Effect Immediately So as to Affect St. Louis Prisoners.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 5.—The Senate will meet at 12:05 a. m. Sunday to pass the bill restoring the death penalty to the criminal statutes. The bill will pass the Senate, practically without opposition.

After an hour of wrangling this afternoon the House engrossed the bill by a vote of 56 to 15. Tonight the proponents of the bill are sending out an "s. o. s." call to absent members in an effort to get a sufficient number here before Tuesday to pass the bill with an emergency clause.

It will require 72 votes to pass the bill and 95 to pass the emergency clause. If the emergency clause passes the law will become effective immediately. If the bill passes without the emergency clause it will not go into effect for 90 days. All efforts are being made to pass the emergency clause, so that the Meramec bank robbers can be tried under the new law.

When the bill was taken up in the House, Representative Campbell offered an amendment requiring all executions to be made by electrocution at the State Penitentiary. Some of the friends of the bill favored the amendment, but when it was suggested in debate that the amendment was offered for the purpose of dividing the supporters of the measure, they lined up solidly and defeated the amendment by a vote of 55 to 25.

DEATH PENALTY IS POSSIBLE IN BANK ROBBERY CASE HERE

Some Lawyers Believe Proposed New Law Would Apply to Slayers of Policeman.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 5.—Prominent lawyers and members of the Legislature told a Post-Dispatch correspondent here today that if the Legislature should pass a law restoring capital punishment before the Meramec Trust Co. robbers in St. Louis, who murdered one policeman and maimed another for life, are brought to trail, they might be sentenced to death and executed, although their crime was committed in a period when capital punishment was unlawful.

A. L. McCawley, an attorney with offices in Carthage, Kansas City and Jefferson City, said that in his opinion the law of punishment in force at the time of the verdict would be the one the trial court would follow.

When this statement was submitted to Representative Frank H. Farris, one of the most experienced criminal lawyers in the state, he was doubtful, but after consulting authorities, he concurred in McCawley's opinion.

The question as to which law the St. Louis bank robbers are likely to be tried under was suggested by the statement of one of the robbers, Earl Hunter, who was alleged to have told the police he had suggested to his companion that they shoot their way out when cornered, because their sentence could be no more severe for killing a policeman than for the robbery of the bank, which they already had committed. Later Hunter denied saying this to the police.

There is considerable speculation here on whether Hunter and his companion will be made to suffer the death penalty because the crime which they committed roused the State to change the very law they believed would save their lives.

Hunter was paroled by Gov. Gardner last February, upon a personal appeal from the Governor's personal and political friend and appointee, Charles J. Lammert, secretary of the St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners, although the prison records showed at the time of his parole that Hunter had committed several other robberies than the one for which he had been convicted.

William Baer, assistant Circuit Attorney, said he was inclined to believe that the capital punishment law, if passed, could not be made to apply to the Meramec bank robbers "It would be ex-post facto," he said, "and would be impossible of application in this case as increasing the degree of punishment of a crime subsequent to its commission."

DEMPSEY TO GO ON STAGE TODAY AT $7000 A WEEK

Several Other Offers, One for $120,000 for 12 Weeks, Under Consideration.

BY JOHN E. WRAY

Sporting Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, OHIO., July 5.—Jack Dempsey, the new world's heavyweight fight champion, will begin to reap the first of his expected financial harvest tomorrow, when he opens an engagement at a Cincinnati theater at a salary of $7000 a week.

Dempsey's manager, Jack Kearns, announced today that he was considering several other vaudeville offers, the most notable of which was an offer from the Grauman theatrical syndicate of the Pacific coast, which telepgraphed a bid of $10,000 a week for 12 weeks.

It was announced today that Willard and his wife would depart for Lawrence, Kas., perhaps tonight.

FARMERS DEMAND REPEAL OF $2.26 WHEAT GUARANTEE LAW

They Declare That Millers Are Deriving All the Benefit From Government-Fixed Prices.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Congress soon may be urged to repeal the present law under which growers of wheat are guaranteed a fixed price of $2.26 a bushel by the Government. A determined crusade against this statute appears to be setting in, and it already is apparent that the matter must be given serious consideration.

Senator Gronna, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, and other Senators from wheat-growing states are being deluged with letters from farmers. All protest against the fixed price for wheat, and insist that the law be abolished. They believe their interests would be better conserved by selling their product at the market price.

The chief argument advanced by the farmers is that the millers are deriving all the benefit from the fixed price for wheat. They point out that no limit has been placed on the profit of the millers. They demonstrate that the price of flour at this time is far in excess of that justified by wheat at $2.26 per bushel.

FORCED LANDING HALTS KERR IN NOVA SCOTIA TO U. S. FLIGHT

Handley-Page Biplane Smashes Against a Tree, but Pilot and Crew Are Virtually Unhurt.

By the Associated Press.

PARRSBORO, N. S., July 5.—Badly damaged while making a forced landing early this morning the Handley-Page biplane, which started from Harbor Grace, N. F., for Mineola, N. Y., yesterday, under command of Vice-Admiral Mark Kerr, stood on her nose at the edge of the Parrsboro racetrack tonight, incapable of resuming her flight.

The huge bomber cruised back and forth over the town from 2 a. m. until daybreak before coming down for the purpose of making necessary repairs to her engine. Her pilot tried to effect a landing on the racetrack, but the machine overran the track, struck a wire fence, puncturing a tire, and crashed into a tree. The impact with the tree stood the machine on end, wrenching off a wheel, wrecking the pilothouse and slightly damaging her right wing.

Admiral Kerr and his crew of three were shaken up, but none was seriously injured.

RECEIPTS AT BIG FIGHT ESTIMATED TO BE $600,000

Government Agents Aid in Checking Up—War Tax Will Be $54,600 and City Will Get $42,000.

CITY'S SHARE TO GO FOR OUTINGS FOR POOR

Dempsey Departs to Begin Theatrical Engagement — Willard Rests, Swelling in His Face Rapidly Subsiding

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., July 5.—Tex Rickard, promoter of the heavyweight championship contest between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey, estimated tonight that the gate receipts would total between $500,000 and $600,000. Revenue agents are assisting in checking up the receipts to determine the amount of war tax due the Government. Basing the receipts on $600,000, the Government will receive approximately $54,600, while approximately $42,000 will be turned over to Toledo's charity fund.

The city, under the agreement with Promoter Rickard, is to receive 7 per cent of the gross receipts. Rickard already has paid $30,000 to this fund.

Mayor Schreiber plans to use this money in sending orphans and children of Toledo's poor families on vacation trips to Michigan. He also plans to devote a part of the money to endow beds for the poor in hospitals.

Dempsey departed tonight for Cincinnati to open a theatrical engagement there tomorrow. He is to receive $7000 a week.

Willard Spends Day Quietly.

Willard spent the day resting quietly at his temporary home in company with his wife and a few personal friends. Aside from the swelling on the right of his face, which as subsiding under cold applications, he was none the worse, apparently, for his encounter with Dempsey. He accepted his defeat without any attempt to excuse it or belittle the new champion's fistic prowess. On the contrary, he made a number of complimentary remarks about Dempsey's ability.

"There is little to add to what is already known," the defeated champion said. "After that first hard swing to the jaw in the first round Dempsey came in so fast that I never had a chance to clear my head and square away for a better offense or defense. I was fighting in a daze. This is no attempt to alibi my defeat or take the credit from Dempsey, who is a fast, clever, hard-hitting opponent, ranking with the best of the heavyweights. Now I am through with boxing and expect to be just plain Jess Willard. I hope, however, that the public will remember me as a boxer who always tried to give his best in the ring and did his share to keep the boxing game above suspicion."

Efforts were being made today to obtain permission from proper authorities for the exhibition of the moving pictures of the fight in the soldier camps and hospitals where wounded overseas fighters are recuperating. It is hoped that eventually the pictures may be shown in public generally without violating the law. Rickard and Willard still retain their two-thirds interest in the films, but Dempsey sold his third before the fight.

Moving Pictures Show Five Clean Knockdowns by Dempsey.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., July 5—The uncertainty as to the number of times Jess Willard was knocked down by Jack Dempsey in the first round of the championship contest at Toledo was settled tonight when the first screening of the motion pictures of the fight registered five clean knockdowns by Dempsey.

CLEVELAND CAR STRIKE TODAY

2600 Union Men to Quit Work if Demands Are Not Met.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., July 5.—Unless something unforeseen develops before 4 o'clock tomorrow morning, 2600 union motormen and conductors of the Cleveland railway company will go on strike at that hour because of a deadlock between the employes, the company and city officials over the men's demand for an increase in wages of 12 cents an hour.

Members of the City Council made a final effort this afternoon to avert a strike by granting the railway company a sufficient extra allowance to pay the men the increased wage they demand, but it was rejected by President John J. Stanley of the street car company.

Are you going to the Theater or Movies tonight? If so, see Page 10, Part 2.

R-34 NEARS BOSTON; DESTROYER IN SIGHT READY TO AID HER

"COME QUICKLY; GASOLINE GIVING OUT," SAYS R-34

"Making for Boston From Bay of Fundy at 23 Knots"—Landing Contemplated at Chatham.

By the Associated Press.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 5.—The following messages from the British Dirigible R-34 was relayed here from Partridge Island tonight:

"Rush help. Making for Boston from Bay of Fundy at 23 knots. Come quickly. Gasoline giving out. Send ship."

Capt Hose, senior naval officer, ordered this message broadcasted by wireless.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—A message tonight from the navy department from the R-34, somewhat garbled in transmission, appealed for gasoline and hydrogen gas, and indicated that a forced landing at Chatham, Mass., was contemplated. The message, which came through heavy interference, was received at 7:47 o'clock tonight, and read: "Gasoline. R-34 wishes to land at Chatham. Can you supply hydrogen and gasoline early tomorrow morning."

Navy officials said the message probably indicated the dirigible was in a bad plight.

HALIFA&, N. S., July 5.—The British dirigible R-34 enroute from Scotland to the United States passed over Digby, N. S., at 7 p. m. time tonight and then headed in the direction of Yarmouth, according to wireless messages received here.

Before the R-34 was sighted over Digby she had last been reported as in the vicinity of Partridge Island, N. B. Digby is across the Bay of Fundy from Partridge Island, while the most direct course to New York is southwesterly. The airship left the course apparently to avoid the severe electrical storm which was raging along the New Brunswick coast.

At Digby the R-34 was flying so low that members of the crew were plainly visible.

ST. JOHN, N. B., July 5.—A telephone message from St. Martin tonight reported that the R-34 passed there at about 4 o'clock this afternoon local time. She was flying low and going slowly. St. Martins is 30 miles northeast of St. John, on the Bay of Fundy coast.

By the Associated Press.

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 5.—A wireless message from the R-34 relayed here from Boston indicated the high power radio set was out of commission. It read: "High power off except on half kilowatt set."

GASOLINE VERY LOW AFTER FIGHTING GALE

Airship Makes Only 25 Knots After Leaving Nova Scotia — Course Changed to Avoid an Electrical Storm Over New Brunswick.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Contact with the British dirigible R-34, whose call for help continued to grow more urgent all day as she neared the finish of her transatlantic journey only to find gasoline and sustaining hydrogen gas exhausted, was established tonight at 11:40 by the destroyer Bancroft of the United States Navy.

The Bancroft, at that hour, according to messages which reached the Navy Department, was trailing the dirigible as it proceeded southwest across the Gulf of Maine. The R-34 was still under her own power.

Naval observers said the destroyer probably would stand by the dirigible until daylight, calling the destroyer Stevens to her assistance meanwhile. No attempt to take the airship in tow or to re-fuel her would be possible until then, it was said. If the vessel has gas and fuel enough to sustain herself until she can reach Boston, it is expected that no attempt will be made to resupply her at sea.

The following message was received from the R-34 at the Navy Department at 11:23 p. m.: "Flying 1500 feet above sea. Come and meet us. Making for Boston. Rush. Very short of gasoline."

The R-34 reported to the Navy Department at 11:09 o'clock tonight that she was 170 miles northeast of Boston and slowly making her way there over the open sea.

When the message was sent the R-34 was 85 miles southwest of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. It was relayed from the Otter Cliff Station as follows:

"Position R-34, 67 degrees and 30 minutes west, 43 degrees and 20 minutes north. Course southwest by south, by magnet compass."

Orders were sent tonight to the commandant of the First Naval District at Boston "to get out everything available immediately" in an effort to give assistance to the dirigible.

All available naval vessels at the Boston Navy Yard put to sea tonight in an effort to get in touch with the R-34. The yard commandant, in reporting to the Navy Department said Boston had been unable to hear fro mthe destroyers Stevens and Bancroft since they sailed late today.

R-34 at Present Speed Should Reach Boston at 6 a. m. Today.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The British dirigible R-34 was heading for Boston tonight, where she will replenish her fast diminishing supplies of hydrogen and gasoline before completing her scheduled trip to Mineola, N. Y.

After a day of buffeting by high winds, lost for a part of the time in a dense fog, and driven out of her course to vaid a severe electrical storm, the R-34 reported herself at 11:20 p. m. nearing Boston harbor and flying over the water.

At 11:30 o'clock the following message was picked up by the radio station at Halifax, N. S., and relayed to the United States:

"Position of R-34, 67.30 west, 43.23 north. Course southwest by south magnetic. Twenty-five knots. Flying at 1500 feet."

This position was approximately 170 miles northeast of Boston, and at her present rate of speed the di-

5000 WOMEN SAW WILLARD KNOCKED OUT

Majority of Them Apparently Enthused by Chopping Up Work by New Champion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., July 5.—There must have been 5000 women in the big arena at the Willard-Dempsey bout yesterday, and they stood up on the hard, sun-blistered benches and added their shrill cries to the rolls of applause and encouragement that their male companions hurled at the combatants.

And were they dismayed? Did their faces blanch? Did they reach for smelling salts when the blood fairly sprayed through the air as Dempsey landed blow after blow on Willard's mashed features? Not so.

Indeed, there were no signs of faintness even when Dempsey's gore-stained gloves left great red patches on Willard's body and the pouring sweat, curiously streaming through the red, left an effect like an amateur painter's first sunset.

In fact, the women didn't seem to care at all whether Jess bled, but they did greet with applause every fresh rally and whirlwind of blows from Dempsey's fists. There were no cries of "Stop it, please," with averted faces. Like their husbands and brothers and sweethearts, the women—some gray-haired and motherly looking—appeared to want the chopping-up process to go on.

"More Like a Murder," Says Ethel Barrymore of Toledo Fight.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 5.—"It didn't seem to me like a fight, it was more like a murder," said Miss Ethel Barrymore in discussing the bout at Toledo Friday, when Jack Dempsey won the heavyweight championship of the world, while returning to this city on the Harris-Turner special today.

"It was more like an outrage," said Russell Colt, her husband. "Why it was the worst"—but nobody pays any attention to Colt when Mrs. Colt is present.

"It was the most pitiful thing I ever saw," continued Miss Barrymore. "I shall never forget it. Willard was like a child who is being punished and cannot understand it."

"Willard was like a big ham," said Mr. Colt, "an expensive ham, a $100,000 ham."

"Do you think that your brother Lionel as Neri," we asked Mrs. Barrymore, "could have beaten Willard?"

"Benny Leonard could have beaten him if somebody had brought him a stepladder," said Mr. Colt.

"It was pitiful," repeated Miss Barrymore. "Willard looked more like an amateur actor than a fighter. From the moment he entered the ring he posed. He threw his chest out and held his arms out like a boy trying to imitate a strong man in front of a mirror."

And Miss Barrymore imitated Willard's pose. It was a splendid imitation—only it had a charm entirely lacking in the original.

"He was trying to keep his stomach in," said Mr. Colt.

"The thing that impressed me most," continued Miss Barrymore, "was Willard's utter helplessness. He couldn't hit and he couldn't guard. He was just a big helpless animal led to the slaughter. It was a terrible thing to watch. He came into the ring so pompously and he left it so broken."

"So did the suckers who bet on him," said Mr. Colt.

"What did you think of Dempsey?" we asked Miss Barrymore.

"I thought he was a little nervous at first," she replied, "but he is a wonderful fighter. He should be a popular champion, but—poor Willard."

"Poor Willard," said Mr. Colt; "poor Willard, why—" but this is a family paper.

RAY CUMMINS' 10-YEAR SENTENCE IS AFFIRMED

Former Police Relief Secretary Was Convicted on Burglary and Larceny Charges.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 5.—The Supreme Court today affirmed the decree of the St. Louis Circuit Court, which sentenced Ray H. Cummins, former policeman, and secretary of the St. Louis Police Relief Association, to 10 years in the penitentiary for burglary and larceny.

Cummins was convicted principally upon the testimony of George Franke, who served a term in the penitentiary, and of Sybil White, a woman with whom Franke lived during his operation as a burglar.

Franke testified that he robbed about 175 homes in St. Louis, and that Cummins gave him police protection and advice and shared in the spoils.

Cummins first gained notoriety when the Circuit Attorney tried to connect him with, and to prove by him, charges of bribery in connection with the passage through the Legislature of a bill increasing the salaries of policemen. The legislative campaign was financed by the association of which Cummins was secretary. It developed that Joseph J. Crites of Rolla, Mo., a lawyer, had been retained to work for the passage of the bill, and had been paid a large retainer.

Franke and Sybil White said they testified against Cummins on the burglary charge because he had agreed to get Franke out of trouble or to obtain his release when arrested and that he failed to keep his word.

Red Flag Flies as Disorders Increase — Troops Kill One, Wound 20—Government Cuts Meat Price.

By the Associated Press.

FLORENCE, Italy, July 5.—The municipal and military authorities distributed food at half price throughout the morning. There is still some confusion and disorder, but no acts of violence have taken place.

FLORENCE, Italy, Friday, July 4.—Noisy outbursts in the outskirts of the city have increased the alarm caused by cost-of-living disorders. The red flag has been hoisted in many places here and elsewhere in the Romagne district by what are termed local soviets. These organizations throughout the Romanga district, in addition to imposing rules for gathering and selling food, are also issuing sentences in controversies under the authority of the red flag.

All available supplies from shops have fallen into the hands of the crowds or of the organizations.

Troops Fire on Crowds.

Carabineers fired upon crowds here today. One dead and 20 injured was the total of the rioting today.

Strengthened by rowdies the crowd has abandoned itself to the general sacking of all shops without distinction, destroying what it is unable to carry away. One entire street is flooded with petroleum, gasoline, wine, beer and olive oil.

Wherever the Chamber of Labor is able to exercise authority goods are being transported to special warehouses under the red flag, even tram cars being pressed into this service. Large quantities of supplies are being turned over to the municipality in the Piazza Signoria, the chief square of the city. Money taken from shops also is being placed in the care of the municipality or the Chamber of Labor. Thousands of boxes of matches are being distributed free to the crowds.

The only shops respected by the rioters were those bearing the inscription: "This shop is at the disposal of the Chamber of Labor."

Labor Chamber Alone Obeyed.

The Chamber of Labor apparently, has become the only authority to which the people pay any attention. Automobiles and cabs permitted to use the streets must bear a sign reading: "Circulation allowed by Chamber of Labor." Local authorities seemingly have made no effort to oppose the chamber.

All the newspapers have suspended publication because of a strike of printers. The sale of newspapers from other cities is prohibited.

One of the manifestos issued by the Chamber of Labor announced that all goods which had been sold at prices fixed by the Government would hereafter be sold at half that price. All other goods, including medicine, it was ordered, should be sold at a reduction of 70 per cent from the previous prices.

Government Orders Price of Meat Reduced Throughout Italy.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Friday, July 4.—The Government has ordered that the price of frozen meat be reduced throughout Italy to 50 cents a pound.

The press today urges the Mayor of Rome not to wait for the repetition here of riots of the character of those in Romagna and Florence, but to "prevent action by the people" by imposing a reduction of 50 per cent upon all prices of foodstuffs and clothing.

Commenting on the situation, the Tempo today says: "The present conditions are the consequence of the failure of the policy of the Governments during the last four years in the diplomatic, financial and economic fields. Italy is worse than a defeated country."

All Food at Ancona Under Control of Chamber of Labor.

By the Associated Press.

ANCONA, Italy, Friday, July 4.—The entire stock of foods and other necessaries in the city are now in the control of the Chamber of Labor. These stocks have been labeled with inscriptions reading: "Goods requisitioned, and at the disposal of the people."

Large contingents of troops occupy the town, but crowds met with no resistance in seizing stocks of food.

The soldiers were applauded by the people who gave them part of the wine stocks requisitioned. Men in the crowds shouted: "Come on, boys; you also deserve a drink."

DANIELS TALKS TO METHODISTS

Centenary Adopts Resolution Approving League of Nations.

COLUMBUS, O., July 5.—Methodist minute men had their celebration today at the Methodist centenary here. Secretary Daniels, a minute man of the Methodist Church, South, delivered an address on problems confronting the church. He recommended strongly ratification of the League of Nations covenant, referring to it as "the noblest covenant the world has known, a patriotic sermon on the mount, adopted by all allied nations of every clime and every tongue and every faith."

Resolutions approving the league of nations and the planned unification of the two branches of the Methodist Church were adopted.

President Wilson has taken under advisement acceptance of the invitation of centenary officials to spend a day at the exposition, and will make his decision known when he arrives in Washington. Officials said they had received this word today from the President aboard the George Washington.

PETAIN MADE MEMBER OF MORAL-POLITICAL ACADEMY

Three Great French Leaders Will Be Presented With Swords of Honor by Paris.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 5.—Marshal Petain was made a member of the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences today. After acknowledging the honor the Marshal, in a speech which provoked storms of applause from the distinguished audience, said:

"The great war which has so happily been terminated opened a vast field for the application of moral sciences."

He then pointed out that the army is the immediate product of society, whose existence it is the mission to safeguard.

"My great honor and my greatest happiness," he said in conclusion, "is to have succeeded in inculcating a sense of duty and responsibility in the soul of the French soldier, before whom we cannot sufficiently bow, because he has known how to suffer and die for an ideal, to hope continually, inspire and, finally, to stand in the front rank of the peoples raised up against oppression, injustice and barbarity."

Marshals Foch, Joffre and Petain will be presented on July 13 with swords of honor by the City of Paris. Special aiguillettes also will be bestowed upon certain regiments, after which there will be a spectacular fete winding up with a ballet entitled "Alsace-Lorraine."

KAISER STICKS TO LOG-SAWING

He Is Unable to Find Suitable Dwelling Outside of Amerongen.

AMERONGEN, Thursday, July 3.—William Hohenzollern, former Emperor of Germany, has decided to stay here at least until the end of summer, and perhaps throughout the autumn, owing to the difficulty which has been encountered in finding a suitable dwelling elsewhere. The health of both the former Emperor and Empress remains very good, despite the worries of the last few weeks.

The miserable weather has somewhat hindered the former monarch's log-sawing operations, but whatever the nature of the weather, Count Hohenzollern passes two or three hours daily at his favorite occupation, taking shelter with his assistants beneath a garden shed when a downpour of rain is most severe. He expects to complete the sawing of his six-thousandth tree this week.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMEN MEET HERE JULY 14-18

400 Already Have Made Hotel Reservations for Conventions at Statler.

The interests of business and professional women of the country will be discussed at the joint convention of the Women's Association of Commerce of the United States and the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, which will be held at Hotel Statler July 14 to 18.

Local arrangements for the convention yesterday were placed in the hands of Mrs. David McWilliams, executive board member of the Commerce Association, and Miss Alma Gibson-Robb, president of the Town Club.

The purpose of the joint convention is to work out a plan by which the two organizations may effect a combination of their aims, ambitions and forces through the formation of a single large organization for the study and promotion of the interests of business and professional women of America.

Delegates are expected from every State of the Union, upwards of 400 women having already made hotel reservations. Among the participants already arrived in St. Louis is Miss M. Spencer of New York, who is engaged in organizing business women's clubs.

The opening session will be Tuesday, when Mayor Kiel will extend a welcome.

FIRE AT NATIONAL STOCKYARDS DESTROYS SAWDUST AND BARN

A spectacular fire last night, which destroyed a large quantity of sawdust and the barn containing it, owned by the Maxwell & Crouch Mule Co., National Stockyards, East St. Louis, did about $3000 damage and threatened for a time a pen containing 500 head of cattle soon to be shipped to France to restock farms. The fire started about 8 o'clock and burned for several hours. Spontaneous combustion in the sawdust is thought to have been the cause. Several one-story frame houses across the street were scorched.

The first firemen to arrive at the blaze were those of No. 6 Engine Company, stationed at the stockyards. It had recently been announced that this station would be one of those to be abolished by the East St. Louis city authorities tomorrow for lack of funds.

rigible should reach Boston about 6 a. m.

If no great delay is experienced the R-34 should reach Mineola tomorrow afternoon.

The navy radio broadcasted a message to all cities and towns north of Boston requesting that they be on the alert to give aid to the R-24 in case of an enforced landing. It was said that about 500 persons would be required to bring the big ship to rest.

The American naval authorities earlier today ordered the converted yacht U. S. S. Satilla, the nearest available vessel, to start from Machias Bay, Me. Scarcely had the yacht cleared when she was followed by the submarine chaser 407 from Bar Harbor, and shortly afterward the U. S. Destroyer Stevens steamed out of Boston harbor under forced draft.

British Vessels Lend Aid.

From St. Johns a cordon of British tugs was thrown out and in the stormy Bay of Fundy the French cruiser Somme answered the summons, starting south in an effort to cross the path of the airship.

All day long every wireless station from the northern coast of Newfoundland to the mouth of the Hudson was manned by eager listeners and watchers who strained every eye and ear for sight or signal of the traveler of the skies. A glimpse was caught from the little Nova Scotian town of Parrsboro, 35 miles west of Halifax, the town at which the Handley-Page biplane, in flight from Harbor Grace, N. F., to Mineola, N. Y., made a forced landing early today. The mammoth airship passed directly over the lighthouse of the part at 2:15 this afternoon.

When first sighted she appeared to be down by the head, but before she had passed out of sight had apparently righted herself and was proceeding on an even keel. Sailor watchers estimated that she was making about 25 knots an hour.

The first intimation of possible trouble was contained in a wireless message intercepted at 11 a. m. and addressed to the president of the admiralty, in which Maj. Scott, commander of the dirigible, reported that his fuel was getting low. Three previous messages, giving position, had concluded with a cheery "all well."

American Aid Asked For.

Five minutes after the message Commander Zachary Lansdowne, U. S. N., invited to take part in the flight as a courtesy to the American Government, sent a query to the Navy Department on behalf of Maj. Scott, asking if a destroyer could proceed to the Bay of Fundy "if required." In less than three hours another message asked Washington if destroyers were coming and two hours later a more urgent appeal flashed to the Navy Department asked that the destroyers meet the airship "at earliest possible moment."

Earlier in the day wireless experts had expressed the opinion that something had gone wrong with the R-34's wireless apparatus, and this opinion was confirmed by the apparent difficulty in communicating to the airship word that the American naval authorities were doing everything in their power to render the assistance asked for.

Col. Lucas Asks Maj. Scott to Try to Reach Long Island.

By the Associated Press.

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 5.—Lieutenat-Colonel Frederick Lucas, R. A. F., in charge of British arrangements here for the arrival of the dirigible R-34, sent a wireless message to the airship's commander tonight urging that he make every effort to proceed as far as Montauk Point before alighting for fuel. He suggested American destroyers could be sent to tow the dirigible to Montauk Point.

Two hundred naval mechanics here have been called out and are held in readiness to go to Montauk Point in motor trucks. There is plenty of gasoline and 200,000 cubic feet of hydrogen gas at Montauk Point.

In his message to the R-34, Col. Lucas said that Chatham Field was too small and that there was no force of men available there or at Boston to assist in the R-34's proposed landing.

Capt. C. T. Craven, director of American naval aviation here, departed tonight for Boston.

Capt. Craven was accompanied by Maj. Hugh Fuller, R. A. F. Two other American naval officers also were in the party.

R-34 Followed Railroad From Digby to Yarmouth.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The following message was received at the Navy Department at 9:35 p. m. from the officer in charge of the Otter Cliff, Me. radio station:

"Canadian press informs me that R-34 is flying over the Dominion Atlantic Railroad from Digby to Yarmouth about midnight G. M. T. (8 p. m. Washington time). Please inform commandant first naval district in order to route destroyers accordingly off Yarmouth."

A later dispatch from New York to the secretary of the navy from the commandant of the third navl district said: "R-34 expected to arrive early Sunday morning. Dinner will be held at Garden City hotel about noon Sunday."

Weather conditions are not likely to add to the hardships of the R-34, according to the special report flashed to the vessel tonight from the United States weather bureau. The upper winds, for the next 24 hours along the north Atlantic coast will be westward and northwestward, and moderate. Local squalls and rain storms are likely, however. E. H. Bowie, supervising forecaster, explained that the upper winds above the 100 foot level, were chiefly important to the aeronauts. The prediction concerning them is based on the bureau's work with pilot balloons, which have been released each day at 4 p. m. from a number of stations over the United States, while along the Atlantic coast they have been sent up twice daily for some time.

Submarine chaser 405, which left Bar Harbor today to go to the assistance of the dirigible R-34, developed engine trouble 50 miles out and was forced to put back to Bar Harbor, according to word received tonight.

Facilities Lacking in Massachusetts for Properly Handling Craft.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 5.—At the Navy Yard tonight it was said that it would probably be impossible to get any additional naval vessels ready in time to get away tonight.

It is considered doubtful whether a suitable landing place could be obtained on Cape Cod for so large a dirigible and whether enough men could be concentrated there to handle the big airship properly if she should arrive tomorrow.

Wilson Says His Wish as Boy Was to Be Sailor

Early Ambition Would Have Taken Him Into Navy but for Parents, He Tells Seamen on George Washington.

By the Associated Press.

ABOARD U. S. S. GEORGE WASHINGTON, July 5.—President Wilson might have been an American sailor, he told the seamen of the Washington today in the course of a stirring tribute he paid to the American Navy and the part it had borne throughout the war.

The crew had assembled between decks to give the President a hearty greeting when he moved about among them. It was the navy, he said, which had put the army in the fighting field, by safely transporting 2,000,000 men across the Atlantic, and it is the navy now that is engaged in the prodigious task of promptly and safely returning the great host back home again. His continued thought and his pride during the dark days of the war, he said, were those men of the American navy who performed the dangerous duties out at sea.

The President then disclosed his youthful wish to become a sailor, a wish that would have taken him into the American navy if he had not been dissuaded from it by his parents.

The sailors cheered their commander in chief when he concluded his talk.

The sea today is as smooth as a lake, with a gentle breeze blowing and a bright sun shining.

Fourth of July Address.

"This is the most tremendous Fourth of July ever imagined, for we have opened its franchise to the whole world," said President Wilson in his speech to the men yesterday.

The men gave three cheers, and when the President appeared among them and began his address by greeting them as "my fellow citizens," it was a striking picture, with several thousand khaki-clad doughboys and bluejacketed sailors crowding the decks, lifeboats and riggings, and with the President bareheaded and earnest, in their midst. His theme was "the new and enlarged meaning of the Fourth of July," and "the war has borne America's message of liberty and independence to the remotest corners of the earth."

He spoke of the future of America and said: "You cannot earn a reputation like that and not live up to it."

The Fourth was celebrated with sports and games and a tug-of-war between army and navy teams.

The members of the presidential party were interested observers of the morning events. The President spent part of the morning in his office going over plans in connection with his arrival in New York.

Final plans have been arranged for the arrival of the presidential fleet. The George Washington will dock at Hoboken at 2:45 o'clock Tuesday and the presidential party will board automobiles and cross the Twenty-third Street Ferry.

Will Leave at 5 P. M.

Then they will proceed to Carnegie Hall, where Gov. Smith and the Reception Committee will extend a welcome to which President Wilson will make a brief response. The party will proceed to the Pennsylvania station and will leave at 5 p. m. for Washington, arriving at the capital at about 10 o'clock.

The President continues to receive by wireless messages of congratulations on America's part in the war and in the peace. One message came from the ruler of Persia, another from President-elect Pessoa of Brazil. The President of Panama sent greetings from "the smallest country declaring war against Germany."

Gen. Pilsudski, Polish Chief of State, sent a message reading, "It was your voice, Mr. President, which first lifted itself to proclaim the rights of our nation."

President Will Address Senate Thursday, Says Tumulty.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, announced here today that, according to the present program, Mr. Wilson will address the Senate on Thursday.

Wireless message received here today from the transport George Washington, bearing President Wilson, said the vessel would reach Ambrose Channel lightship at noon Tuesday and dock at Hoboken about 3 p. m.

Tumulty said that the President would be greeted at the pier on his arrival here Tuesday by the school children of Hoboken, who will form lines through which he will pass to the Twenty-third street ferry. He will cross the Hudson on a city ferry boat and will be received in the New York side by the official reception committee, headed by Gov. Smith and Mayor Hylan.

After his reception Mr. Wilson will motor by way of Fifth avenue to Carnegie Hall, where he will deliver a brief address. He will leave New York for Washington at 5 p. m.

He may be accompanied by a composite regiment of 3000 American troops representing all the units still aligned with the allies in France. ABYSSINIAN MISSION BRINGS GIFT FROM EMPEROR TO WILSON

Assistant Secretary Long Goes to New York to Meet Prince and His Suite.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The Cunard liner Mauretania arrived here today from Southampton via Halifax, bringing a number of soldiers and civilians, including the Rt. Hon. W. F. Massey, Premier of New Zealand, and three Abyssinians, Nado Dejas, H. Gabo and Ato Hern, members of a mission to the United States bearing a gift for President Wilson.

Nado, known as Prince Nado, said he and his compatriots were sent by the Emperor of Abyssinia to present to the Governments of Great Britain and the United States the Emperor's congratulations on the consummation of peace.

Prince Nado and his suite, in flowing white robes and white turbans, were unattended on the pier after their arrival. A message was sent to Washington this morning by the Cunard officials, and Third Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long hurried to New York to meet the visitors.

"As the United States maintains no diplomatic relations with Abyssinia," said Secretary Long tonight, "and as the Abyssinians apparently had neglected to inform our embassy at London when they were coming, the State Department was absolutely without knowledge that they were bound here on the Mauretania."

PROSECUTOR TO BE TOLD OF FARMER'S DEATH BY POISON

Coroner Denny said yesterday at the conclusion of an inquest into the death from strychnine poisoning of Theodore Semke, 33 years old, a farmer residing northwest of Bonfils, St. Louis County, that he would present such facts as he had in the case to the Prosecuting Attorney.

Mrs. Semke testified that her husband arose early to attend to chores. She said that a little later he awakened her, saying he had taken poison. He collapsed at her bedside, she said. She administered milk and eggs as an antidote, she said, but Semke was dead when a physician arrived.

A bottle containing strychnine and securely corked was found in weeds about 50 feet from the house.

Semke had been married about six years. A 2-year-old daughter also survives him. Semke had been in ill health.

NEW BARS TO LIFT SUNDAY LID TODAY WITH SOFT DRINKS

Saloons Which Sell 2.75 Per Cent Beer Will Be Prosecuted, Excise Commissioner Announces.

TERMINAL BAR TAKES IN $60 IN FIVE DAYS

Business Formerly Would Have Reached $1200—Hotels to Continue Sales Experiment.

The Sunday "lid," placed on St. Louis saloons in 1905 will be lifted today by a number of the establishments which until Tuesday were saloons, and which now sell soft drinks. Signs of "Open Tomorrow" appeared in some of these places yesterday.

So long as they serve soft drinks, ice cream and lunches, the police will not molest them. The Excise Commissioner has announced that the saloons which continue the sale of 2¾ per cent beer, while waiting an interpretation of the wartime prohibition act, will be held strictly to observance of the Sunday closing law.

Hotel bars which were visited last night by a Post-Dispatch reporter are not yet doing the soft drink business they have hoped for, but some managers expressed the hope that things would improve, as the stocks of liquor laid in by former saloon customers run low, and the drinkers realize that they must get on a non-alcoholic basis.

Sales Fall Off.

The Terminal Hotel bar, which has been known as the only barroom in the United States on railroad property since the Railroad Administration took control, now offers soft drinks for sale. The one bartender who remains, of the former staff of six, said $60 was the total of the five days' receipts since prohibition went into effect. "The bar would have taken in $1200 in the same time under former conditions," he said.

At Hotel Jefferson, where two of five bartenders remain, it was said that the soft drink experiment would be continued a while longer, but that the receipts in the previous 16 hours had not been what they often were in a half-hour in wet days.

At the Statler and the Marquette, the management appeared better satisfied, and it was said that the soft drink business was starting out promisingly. The Statler has borrowed a list of soft drinks from its sister hotels in Detroit and Cleveland, dry cities before wartime prohibition went into effect. There are 77 drinks on its list, running up to 40 cents in price, and some of their names would startle the total abstinence folk, but all come under the head of "nonalcoholic." Gin fizz, sloe gin fizz, rum sour, gin rickey, horse's neck and mint julep are some of the familiar names which appear in the new list.

It was said at the Statler that bar business had fallen from $800 to $150 a day, but that a gradual improvement was looked for.

The American Hotel had two bartenders left and the Annex one, and neither place has found the soft drink business lucrative. The Planters has closed its Pine street bar, and the Chestnut street side is not doing much.

Fewer Dinner Guests.

At the Sunset Hill Country Club last night, the dining room guests were not so many as a week ago, but the manager said business was not bad. The Century Boat Club and the Missouri Athletic Association reported light business. Hotel Statler had a dinner dance with a moderate attendance, but Hotel Jefferson has abandoned such functions for the summer. Meisheimer's Cafe was closed, because of the observance of yesterday as a continuation of the July 4 holiday. Cicardi's Cafe had a fair number of dinner customers.

In the first five days of war-time prohibition, ending last night, 14 men were sent to the inebriate ward, as compared with 52 on the corresponding days of July, 1918. The number of inebriate arrests for each day has been smaller than last year, the number for Wednesday and Thursday being one each, as compared with 10 and eight on the corresponding days last year.

The Carsonville Wine Garden, a well known St. Louis County resort, has been closed until further notice, according to a sign which was viewed yesterday by a number of dismayed automobilists. Besides wines of varied origin and price, the place used to specialize in chicken dinners.

WADER DROWNED IN MERAMEC

Boy Swept Downstream by Current Loses His Life.

Roman Gravowski, 18 years old, 1406 North Twenty-first street, was drowned at 10 o'clock yesterday while wading in the Meramec River near Giles Landing. He, with three companions, was caught in the rapid current and all were carried downstream, but his companions were rescued.

The boys apparently underestimated the strength of the current for none of them could stand up in it. Gravowski's body has not been recovered.

Woman Who Fled From Texas With Another's Husband and Is Fined Here

WOULD LET EUROPE SOLVE OWN INTERNAL DIFFICULTIES

O. T. Crosby, Former Assistant U. S. Treasurer, Holds South Faced Worse Conditions After War.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Conditions in Europe are not as bad as those faced by the South after the Civil War, Oscar T. Crosby, former Assistant Treasurer of the United States and for two years chairman of the inter-allied council on war purchases and finance, declared tonight upon his arrival from Europe on the transport Mount Vernon. None of the European nations is bankrupt, he said, though they will need encouragement to return to normal conditions.

America should aid, he asserted, in adjustment of the financial problems, but he urged that the European countries be allowed to solve their own internal difficulties. These problems, he said, were of greater importance to Europe than all of the foreign obligations.

Crosby expressed himself as greatly pleased with the policy of the Federal Reserve Board as announced yesterday. He added that he believed it was much better that loans for commercial and industrial purposes be made by private bankers than by the Government. Government loans, he said, always carried with them an element of political danger.

Germany, said Crosby, eventually would reach a stable form of government if the people were given the opportunity to solve their political problems.

In speaking of Russia Crosby said he opposed intervention.

"The Kolchak Government," he continued, "is a government of private ownership without any reaction to czarism. The other or radical type is socialistic or an attempt to set up communism. I think it would be best if the world would let the Russians settle their own affairs without outside influence."

ROBERT NEWTON CRANE CALLED TO SELECT BENCH IN LONDON

Dispatches from London state that Robert Newton Crane, dispatch agent to the United States Embassy in London, has been called to the bench by the Middle Temple, most select of London's legal societies. The London Morning Post, in making the announcement, speaks of it as "a notable act of courtesy to the American bar."

"Mr. Crane," it adds, "is probably the first American citizen from the English bar to be so honored by the Inn of Law."

Crane is a former resident of St. Louis, and a son-in-law of the late Gerard B. Allen, of St. Louis. He was engaged in newspaper work here in the '70s, being at one time city editor of the Globe-Democrat. He served as consul in Manchester, England, and was admitted to the American bar in 1880, and to the British bar in 1894. He has represented the United States Government in important cases of international law, such as the Samoan arbitration award.

Nine Bodies Rescued, Workers Quit.

By the Associated Press.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., July 5.—After working frantically all day, more than a score of rescuers quit work tonight, satisfied that the nine drowned bodies recovered from the water would be the final death toll exacted when the pleasure boat Reliance turned over at Lake Madison last night, with about 30 persons aboard. The lake in the vicinity of the accident, which was caused when the boat struck a snag, was dragged dozens of times today. The boat was not lighted and was overcrowded, it is said.

WOMEN HONOR DR. ANNA SHAW IN SIMPLE FUNERAL SERVICE

Nearly Every State Sends Floral Tribute as Did President and Mrs. Wilson.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 5.—With the pinning on her breast of the distinguished service medal, conferred by the Government for her war work, and the jeweled American flag worn by Susan B. Anthony, funeral services for Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, honorary president of the American Woman's Suffrage Association, were closed at her home in Moylan, Pa., late today. Leaders of women from all parts of the country gathered about her rose-covered coffin to pay their last respects in a ceremony the outstanding feature of which was its simplicity.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the Suffrage Association, fastened the pin upon the dress of Dr. Shaw as a symbol of the highest honor the women of the world had to offer. The pin is an American flag with a diamond star for each State which voted for suffrage before the national suffrage amendment passed Congress.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Carolina Bartlett Crane of Kalamazoo, Mich., and Mrs. Catt in a brief address eulogized Dr. Shaw for her efforts in behalf of women and laid at her feet the honor for the passage of the Susan B. Anthony amendment.

The home was a profusion of flowers. Nearly every State sent a floral tribute, as did President and Mrs. Wilson, the Council of National Defense, and many individuals and organizations. Telegrams of condolence were received by Dr. Shaw's relatives from hundreds of well-known men and women, both at home and abroad. A wireless message was received from President Wilson.

In accordance with Dr. Shaw's wishes, her body tomorrow will be cremated.

CANE GROWERS SPLIT WITH HAWAIIAN MILLS

Break Away From Ancient Feudal System of Patronizing Nearest Grinders.

HONOLULU, T. H.—What is generally regarded as a move which may eventually revolutionize cane land homesteading in the Hawaiian Islands is the recent decision of a majority of the Wajakea Homesteaders' Association, on the Island of Hawaii, to spurn the offers of the Waiakea Mill Co., whose mill is situated directly on their lands, and to go afield to bargain for the grinding of their crop. These homesteaders contemplate buying a mill of their own at some future date.

While some of the Waiakea settlers have announced that they will continue sending their cane to the Waiakea Mill Co., which was the former lessee of these lands, the greater number of the homesteaders have arranged with the Hawaii Mill Co., about five miles distant, for their grinding. Gov. McCarthy this week approved and signed the contracts between each group.

The action of the majority is distinctly revolutionary, for it breaks away from the almost feudal idea that homesteaders must depend on the nearest mill to handle their cane, a custom that in some instances has resulted in the "scorers," being and down hard on the homestead folk.

Blow to Bolshevism.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—One method of discouraging and warding off Bolshevism and all other forms of "hysteria" is the "practicing of Americanism and the preaching of thrift," according to Antonio Possano, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Lakes Engineering Corporation, who addressed the annual meeting of the Atlantic Coast Shipping Association, Employment Managers' Division.

WOMAN HELPS TO PROSECUTE RIVAL WHO IS FINED $500

Conducted 3-Year Search and Was Told No Law Could Touch Husband and Feminine Companion.

WARRANT FOR MAN WHO HAS LEFT CITY

Couple Was Found When Woman's 7-Year-Old Daughter Revealed Their Address.

When Judge Calvin N. Miller yesterday fined Mrs. Flora Foster Brown, 36 years old, $500 on a statutory charge and remanded her to jail because of her inability to pay, Mrs. Frances Merrill of Dallas, Tex., scored legal revenge comparable to her detective victory when on June 17 she found Mrs. Brown living at 4735 Page boulevard with her husband, Charles R. Merrill, for whom she had searched the United States since 1916, when he deserted her in Dallas.

Mrs. Merrill's legal victory lies in the fact that all governmental prosecuting officers, Federal, State and city, had given their opinion that Mrs. Brown or Merrill could not be successfully prosecuted. Mrs. Merrill willed otherwise, and yesterday's fine ensued.

As was stated at the time of their arrest, the discovery of Mrs. Brown in Merrill's company solved a mystery that attracted much discussion in 1916. Mrs. Brown, wife of a member of the police department in Dallas, disappeared, taking her daughter, then 7 years old. Merrill disappeared at the same time, but there was not at the time nor afterwards any suspicion that the two disappearances were associated.

Retained Own Attorney.

Mrs. Merrill since has conducted a search for her husband. Coming to St. Louis, she was told that her husband was living with a woman somewhere in the vicinity of Page boulevard under the name of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Nunnelly. She began to frequent the neighborhood and chanced upon Mrs. Brown's daughter, Heloise, who said that her name was Nunnelly. Bribing the child with candy, she gained the address at which her husband was and rented a room nearby. After several day of watching, she called detectives and the arrests followed.

Detectives, supported by Mrs. Merrill, went from Federal District Attorney to Circuit Attorney to Prosecuting Attorney, but none thought the charge clearly enough substantiated. So Mrs. Merrill engaged a prosecutor of her own, Andrew C. Maroney. His first act was to ask that the bond of Mrs. Brown and Merrill be extended when it became returnable on June 19, so that he might search the law for provision upon which he could gain Mrs. Merrill's revenge. Through a mistake, the bond was not extended when the couple appeared on June 19. No prosecutor appeared, there was no information and they were discharged.

The police, in the meantime, were taking steps in juvenile court to take Mrs. Brown's daughter from her on the ground that she was unfit to have her custody. Mrs. Merrill interested herself in that phase of the case, also.

First Husband on Scene.

Hearing was held last Tuesday. All concerned were surprised when Mrs. Brown appeared in court in the company of her former husband, who had obtained a divorce, remarried and now is living in Kansas City. They appeared very friendly. Miss Alice Gunn, an investigating officer of the court, reported that Brown and his former wife had been attending picture shows and dining together and that Brown even had taken a room at the Page boulevard address, where his former wife had been living with Merrill.

Brown said that he would care for his daughter and asked that he be given official custody. Miss Gunn protested that she believed that if this were done Brown immediately would return the child to his former wife. The Court ordered the girl turned over to a paternal grandparent in Dallas.

As Mrs. Brown was leaving the court she was rearrested and yesterday she was arraigned on the statutory charge before Judge Miller, with Mrs. Merrill appearing with Maroney as special prosecutor. Mrs. Brown must remain in jail 250 days, if her fine is not paid. Merrill, for whose arrest a new warrant has been issued, has resigned a position as salesman with Butler Brothers and left the city.

Toronto was chosen, at last night's session, as the meeting place for the 1920 convention. Cincinnati was second in the voting.

Dr. Lerrigo of New York, representing the Northern Baptist Convention, spoke of the pledging of $175,000,000 by the Northern and Southern conventions, for a world missionary fund, to combat infidelity and agnosticism. Dr. Love of Richmond, representing the Southern convention, said: "We Americans can overdo the prescribing of democracy as a remedy for the world's ills. Christianity is also necessary."

Dr. Evans Elected President.

At the noon session yesterday Dr. D. J. Evans of William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo., was elected president. Dr. Evans received 206 votes, W. Fred Reynolds of Toronto, Canada, 127, and Dr. John Wellington Hoag of Detroit, retiring president, 107. When the vote was announced Reynolds moved that the election be made unanimous, which carried unanimously.

Other officers elected were: J. S. Newell of St. Louis, first vice president; Marion Wright of Ohio, and W. Fred Reynolds of Toronto, second vice presidents; O. O. Montague of Chicago, treasurer, and J. B. Dance of West Virginia, recording secretary. The last two were reelected.

Plan to Raise $2,000,000.

O. O. Montague spoke in favor of extending the membership and scope of the Tithers' League, each member of which pledges himself to give onetenth of his income to the support of the Baptist Church and its young people's societies. The plan is to raise more than $2,000,000 and to enroll 1,000,000 new members within the next three years.

The Rev. Landrum P. Leavell, associate professor of Sunday school pedagogy at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., in his address emphasized the need of the churches for the leadership of young men and women. He complimented the B. Y. P. U. and urged them to remain active in the church organization.

The convention has been in session since Wednesday morning.

TWO ESCAPE FROM TRANSPORT

Army Prisoners Missing When the Mount Vernon Docks.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Two army prisoners, one sentenced to life imprisonment for murder and the other to 15 years for attempted murder, escaped from their guards last night when the transport Mount Vernon was nearing New York harbor and were still at liberty when the ship docked today.

Guards with fixed bayonets searched the vessel from end to end, and, as the troops disembarked each man had to run the gautlet of the military police. When the soldiers had left the ship the search was resumed, but without a trace being found of the fugitives.

RUFFNER QUITS AS MANAGER OF UNION ELECTRIC

Former Vice President Announces He Will Engage in Broader Work for North American Co. in New York.

DUTIES TAKEN OVER BY LOUIS H. EGAN

New Official, Who Also Is Vice President of St. Louis County Gas Co., to Be Assisted by F. J. Boehm.

Charles S. Ruffner, vice president of the Union Electric Light and Power Co., who has acted in the capacity of general manager since 1916, has relinquished the resident management of the company to his assistant, Louis H. Egan, who, last week, was elected a vice president by the Board of Directors.

Ruffner departed yesterday to take up his residence in New York. He said that he would engage in broader work for the North American Co., which owns the Union Electric Co., and controls the United Railways and public utilities in other cities. He has retained his office as vice president of the Union company, and expects to spend about half of his time in St. Louis.

Frank J. Boehm, statistician of the company, has been promoted to be assistant general manager.

Egan, the new vice president of the company, is vice president and general manager also of the St. Louis County Gas Co., having divided his time between that company and the Union company. He came to St. Louis from Kansas City, where he was general manager of the Kansas City Electric Light Co. He resides at Taylor and Essex avenues, Kirkwood.

Ruffner has been an officer of subsidiaries of the North American Co. since 1911. The North American Co. paid his salary as manager of the Union company. Previously he was president of the Mississippi River Power Distributing Co., the "middle" company of the Keokuk power contracts with the United Railways, later becoming vice president and general manager of the Electric Co. of Missouri, which assumed those power contracts, and later assigned them to the Union Electric Co.

PERMANENT MILITARY POLICY MAY BE FORCED ON CONGRESS

Baker's Order to Demobilize Army by Sept. 30 Expected to Bring Action.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The question of a permanent military policy probably will be forced before the present session of Congress by Secretary Baker's order reducing the army to 233,000 officers and men by Sept. 30. Military experts here believe only speedy passage of the army reorganization bill will prevent demoralization of the military establishment.

The recent army bill makes mandatory the continuance of the four new staff corps: chemical welfare, motor transport, tank and air service, none of which was provided for in the national defense act. Officers and men must be drawn from the line and from the regular staff personnel to provide the necessary overhead for these branches.

"A return to the status of 1908" was predicted of one officer concerning the effects. In that year companies could muster only 35 men and regiments were frequently under the charge of one major and one captain.

The general staff is already at work on some program which will come within authorized expenditures and yet permit the retention of a skeleton establishment which may be expanded for war.

Primary troop requirements which must be met include: Garrisons for the Philippines, Hawaii and the Panama Canal, conservatively figured at 50,000 men; a guard for the southern border, now maintained at 30,000. A force of 80,000 men on the Rhine and for the time being at least, 8000 men for Siberia.

The 23,000 temporary officers who have applied for permanent commissions in the regular army must be discharged forthwith because of the lack of money.

WAR HERO WHOSE MEMORY IS HONORED

SERGT. JOSEPH M. FOURNIER JR.

POST NO. 3, AMERICAN LEGION, NAMED FOR SERGT. FOURNIER

St. Louis Man Who Gave His Life to Aid Wounded Comrade, Honored by 128th.

Post No. 3 of the American Legion, consisting of the officers and men of the 128th Field Artillery, is to be known as the Joseph M. Fournier Post, in honor of Sergt. Joseph M. Fournier Jr. of Battery B, who gave his life in an attempt to carry to safety an injured comrade during the fighting in the Argonne Sept. 30, 1918.

Sergt. Fournier, who was the son of Joseph M. Fournier of 7157 Lanham avenue, was working in Phoenix, Ariz., when war was declared. He returned to St. Louis and enlisted in Battery B of the 128th.

On the night of Sept. 30, 1918, during a severe bombardment in the Argonne a comrade of Sergt. Fournier was wounded in advance of the battery. Fournier, accompanied by Corp. Monihan, crawled out to get him but they were unable to return to their battery, due to the fire. They succeeded in reaching a small creek and, following it, carried their comrade to an advance dressing station. There they were informed that he was dead. In trying to rejoin their battery they were compelled to go through an area that was being shelled. Fournier was struck by shrapnel and mortally wounded. He was taken to a base hospital where he died on Oct. 3.

A meeting will be held Thursday night at the artillery armory, Grand avenue and Rutger street, to perfect the organization of the Post, which has 36 charter members.

OFFICERS STAND IN CHOW LINE

3348 of Them Travel From France on Leviathan Like Enlisted Men.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Receiving sudden orders to return on the Leviathan, 3348 casual officers who arrived here on that vessel today were surprised to find that they had been assigned to troops' quarters instead of first-class accommodations, as prescribed by army regulations, and would have to eat their meals standing up like enlisted men. Col. Robert S. Knox of the regular army, troops commander aboard the vessel, showed an order issued at the port of embarkation in France, stating that the War Department had decided to use the Leviathan on the trip to transport first-class personnel to relieve congestion of first-class passengers in France awaiting their return home.

Brigadier-General Benjamin W. Foulois of the American Army Air Service, who had spent 20 months in France organizing the American air forces, was among a group of returning Brigadier-Generals, which included Lesly J. McNair, Briant H. Wells and William R. Wood. Rear Admiral S. S. Robinson, who had been serving on the Naval Armistice Commission, returned to go to his new post as commandant at the Boston Navy Yard.

EXPLODING GAS HURTS TWO MEN

Ignites When Match Is Struck in Investigation of Leak.

One man was knocked down and another burned on the face last night when gas in the basement of Alex Sutkowski's commission house, Eleventh and Carr streets, exploded.

Sutkowski smelled gas and went to the basement to investigate. Joe Mogilinick started with him but waited on the outside of the basement door, which opens off the street. Sutkowski closed the door after entering and struck a match. He was knocked against the door, which was blown open and struck Mogilinick and knocked him into the street. Sutkowski was burned on the face. Quick arrival of fire companies prevented serious damage to the building.

BELL STRIKERS TO M DISCUSS PLANS FOR REMAINING OUT

Leaders Are Hopeful That Kinloch Settlement Will Have Favorable Bearing on Ending of Dispute.

ONLY 175 ABSENT, COMPANY DECLARES

Service Was About Normal Yesterday Except in Busiest Hours—All Kinloch Strikers Back at Work.

Striking operators and electrical workers of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. will meet at 10 a. m. tomorrow at Hibernian Hall, 3619 Finney avenue, in continuation of the strike against that company. A similar meeting was held yesterday morning to discuss a method of carrying on the fight.

Since the Kinloch company has agreed to sign a contract virtually meaning recognition of the union, leaders of the Bell strikers are hopeful that that company will do likewise. Miss May E. Matthews of Boston, secretary of the telephone operator's department of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who is advising the girls, said she believed the Bell company could not long hold out against the employes who have ceased work in obedience to the strike call.

Officials of the Bell company say there are less than 175 operators out and that many of them are not avowed strikers. The union leaders make claim to a much greater number of strikers.

Jennings' Statement.

O. E. Jennings, the local organizer of the electrical worker's national organization, is advising the linemen, cable splicers and other men Bell employes on strike. He said the company's maintenance system was disorganized by the strike and that the electrical workers would stand by the operators until the company signed an agreement recognizing the strikers as union members.

The Bell service yesterday was about normal, except during the busiest hours, when it was a little slower than normal.

H. L. Reber, president of the Kinloch company, said about all the strikers employed by that company had returned to work under the agreement he had with their committee, and that the strike was now a closed incident with his company.

Federal authorities will determine tomorrow what action, if any, can be taken by the Government toward prosecuting persons who have interfered with the opertaions of the service of the local telephone companies during the strike, according to K. P. Aldrich, Chief Postoffice Inspector.

Investigate Cable Cuttings.

Inspectors of the Postoffice Department have been busy for several days investigating cable cuttings, jamming of coin telephones and similar interference with telephone service with the view of submitting the results of their investigations to the office of the United States Attorney to bring about prosecution of those implicated in the actual work of obstructing the service, on the theory that with the telephone companies under the supervision of the Postoffice Department such obstructions are interferences with Government operations.

Although several conferences have been held between officials of the Postoffice Department and District Attorney Hensley the method of procedure in these cases has not been determined, but is expected to be decided tomorrow.

Inspector Aldrich said yesterday his men had obtained the names of several of those who were active in cable cutting and the placing of other obstacles in the way of efficient telephone service and these will be submitted to the District Attorney.

HINDENBURG TAKES BLAME FOR ACTS AFTER AUG. 29, 1916

Requests Ebert to Inform Allies He Was Responsible for Orders as to Warfare.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 5.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg, former chief of the German staff, declares that he is responsible for acts of German main headquarters since August, 1916, and also the proclamations of former Emperor William concerning the waging of warfare. He asks President Ebert of Germany to inform the allies to this effect, according to a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co.

The Field Marshal arrived in Hanover on Friday, the dispatch states, and telegraphed the following message to President Ebert:

"The signing of the peace treaty gives me occasion for declaring that I am responsible for the decisions and acts of main headquarters since Aug. 29, 1916, and also that all proclamations and orders of his majesty, the Emperor and King, concerning the waging of warfare, were issued upon my advice and upon my responsibility. I beg you, therefore, to inform the German people and the allied governments of this declaration."

WILSON'S RETURN VIEWED AS CLIMAX OF PUBLIC CAREER

Confronts Same Psychological Condition in America as Existed in Europe Last December.

SENATE ATTITUDE TO FIX LENGTH OF TOUR

President Probably to Make Biggest Fight in States of His Bitterest League of Nations Opponents.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1919, by the Pulitzer Pub. Co., the Post-Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, July 5.—President Wilson comes back to the White House next week. He has been away six months—an unprecedented length of time in American history. He went to Europe with certain ideas and fixed notions about European politics and diplomacy. He went away with certain ideas and fixed notions about American politics and congressional diplomacy. But there is something strikingly similar in the psychological problem—the personal and political equation—which faced Mr. Wilson as he turned to the shores of Europe for the first time and the situation which confronts him as he approaches the shores of his own country.

The President holds in his hands today as he did last December the keys to success or failure. The great climax of his public career is come. Mr. Wilson's friends in the national capital have been aware of it. They have been thinking hard and planning and studying and preparing advice, oral and written. The President acknowledges that he is out of touch with the situation inside America. He wants the counsel of those who have been intimately in contact with American affairs, particularly the maneuvers and strategy of the Republican leaders who have been exercising their American right to pick flaws in the peace program and present their views. Mr. Wilson comes back to debate with them before the American people, before the bar of public opinion, which has sometimes disappointed him but often sustained him.

With an Open Mind.

But it would be surprising to folks here if Mr. Wilson came back with a chip on his shoulder, and figuratively accoutered in war paint. That's exactly what they thought in England and France when he first set sail from America. Mr. Wilson and Prime Minister Lloyd George and Premier Clemenceau had been looking at each other through the printed word and the stiff formalities of diplomatic notes and messages. British and French newspapers looked askance at the idea of an American President coming across the Atlantic to tell them "how to run Europe." A certain stand-offishness and ado about rank and position and prestige consumed the month of December. And then they got together. They sat down and argued with the American President and found that he was much more conciliatory than they imagined; that he disavowed any intention of running Europe, but made it plain that America's signature to the peace treaty was not to be attached to a series of imperialistic settlements, a mere rearrangement of the map of Europe, but that if America was to assist in guaranteeing the articles of the peace treaty they must be of a kind that would produce a healing peace and not international friction and bloodshed. His 14 points were vague expressions of principle. Those who like the treaty say the 14 points have been carried out. Those who dislike some of the settlements say the 14 points were wrecked on the rocks of political expediency in the hope of establishing the league of nations which was so close to the President's heart. Mr. Wilson himself calls the covenant and the peace treaty a chart on which nations may venture in self-assurance and security on the always uncertain seas of economic racial and political rivalry.

What Wilson Really Got.

People who have come to Washington in the last fortnight from the vicinity of the American Mission in Paris say the President did not get the kind of treaty he wanted, but that he got something better than he really expected—he got the best he could under the circumstances. He conceded, yielded, demurred and deferred on points that might break up the conference. He placed his hope for correction on the league of nations and its commissions and councils through which the provisions of the peace treaty are to be executed. To those who find fault with the peace treaty, Mr. Wilson offers the league of nations covenant backed by an awakened sense of morality and conscience among the nations of the world. To those who do not like the league of nations covenant, he offers the opportunity for revision and correction in the charter of the league of nations itself. To reconstruct the world's map in six months, to get signatures of a score of nations to settlements that had to be made quickly in order to save Europe from further chaos and disintegration is a task of unparalleled magnitude. Mr. Wilson will surprise his friends here if he insists that the work at Paris is free from imperfections. That he will defend the treaty and league in vigorous terms and oppose amendments and reservations at this time is fully expected. And that he will read criticism from opposing Senators equally vigorous and uncompromising is also expected.

But the President is a shrewd enough hand in dealing with Congress to know that part of the opposition is political, part of it is based on personal antipathy to him, part of it on his own unfortunate course of aloofness and seclusion and part of it on a well-defined but genuine dislike of European entanglements and engagements and a desire to return to our antebellum policy of national isolation.

European Ideals.

Mr. Wilson learned things about the European statesmen that he didn't know before. He learned in the first few weeks of his European experience. He learned that the statesmen of Europe had exalted ideals, too, but that they doubted the efficacy of those ideals in actual practice. He adopted an attitude of dignified humbleness. He didn't stand on ceremony. He walked in the French Foreign Office and called on H. Pichon, the Foreign Minister, during the first week of his stay. Such things hadn't been done before. A foreign secretary might call on a Premier or President but never would the latter be calling on officials of lower rank.

What Mr. Wilson did in Paris he had been criticised for failing to do in Washington. Not only had he neglected Republican Senators during the war, but he rarely called into counsel the members of the Democratic party in Congress. He never fraternized. Consequently as he departed for Europe he got the coldest reception ever given him on the occasion of an address to Congress. When he returned to Washington in February and invited Republicans as well as Democrats on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to the White House for dinner, most of them went, but some of them felt and privately said that the invitation was a trifle belated and might have gladdened the congressional heart much more in the chill days of December than in the balmy evenings of early spring.

Cabinet Hurt Wilson.

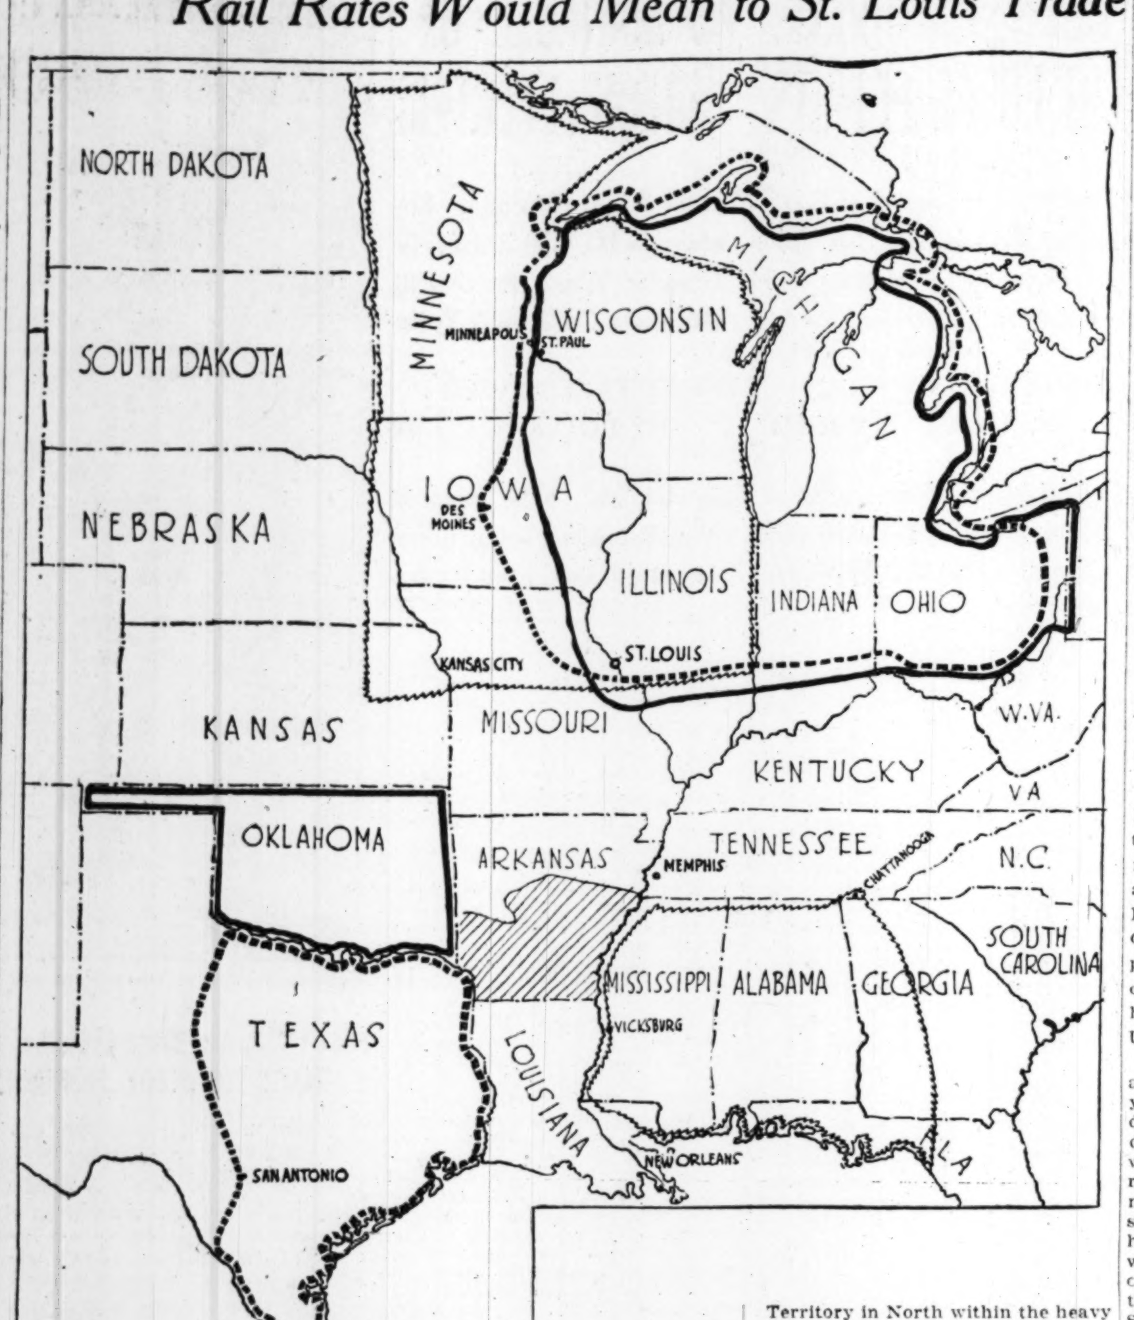
Something else had hurt Mr. Wilson, too. His Cabinet officers—not all of them, but a goodly number—took their war powers so seriously that they didn't take especial pains to draw the right line between unnecessary restriction and the public patience. Irritation ensued. Much of the blame went Wilsonward. Now the President comes home to straighten out a political house which has been wobbling in his absence. There is a demand ready to be spoken quietly but firmly to him that certain Cabinet officers must go. There must be, they shall say, expression and action from the President to indicate a new deal, a new spirit toward the things that have been making for public irritation in domestic affairs.

As for the controversy over the league of nations, Mr. Wilson's friends will counsel him to throw off the mantle of seclusion which rightly or wrongly, avoidably or unavoidably, has kept him from personal contact with Congress and influential folks outside of Congress during the hectic days of war confusion. They will tell him to "open up" and get back to the Woodrow Wilson of campaign days. They will tell him in fashion emphatic that he must keep the nonpartisan flag constantly unfurled, doing nothing that might be construed as an effort to help the Democratic party's fortunes in 1920 at the expense of the Republican party. If Republicans wish to differ with him and criticise him in unmeasured terms, Mr. Wilson must calmly seek just the same to win to his side the Republicans who are open-minded on the big questions of our foreign policy and who want specific, informative arguments and enlightenment so that they may be guided in their votes. Senators of the extreme opposition will follow on Mr. Wilson's trail. The President has been in campaigns before.

Roosevelt Methods.

The late Col. Roosevelt used to mince no words in his campaign criticisms of Mr. Wilson, but the latter never permitted himself to get caught in the meshes of personal argument. Unquestionably he will not permit himself to become involved in any personal controversy on the stump or otherwise with Senators of the opposition. His friends here are certain of that. But he comes back anxious to lay before the American people the essentials of a new framework for peace. It shall be for them to interrogate him for reasons why the United States should depart from her policies of past years, why the fate of America and Europe is joined. Mr. Wilson will make a stumping tour of the country. How far West he will go depends to some extent on the effect on the country of his first speech to the Senate. He may wait 10 days or two weeks after that utterance to see what the reaction is. Then he will start out. Probably he will visit the states of the Senators whose opposition is most pronounced and menacing to the success of the ratifying resolution. But from every evidence here, and one judges by those who have been advising the President and have been in a position to predict his acquiescence in their plans, Woodrow Wilson will come back to the White House a changed man. He will omit neither word nor act of public or private speech and conference, personal amiability and resourcefulness, to put his case before the bar of public opinion and win the Senate's approval to the peace treaty plus the league of nations, unamended now, but subject to revision in international conferences of the future.

Map Showing What Combined River and Rail Rates Would Mean to St. Louis Trade



THIS map visualizes the chief freight schedules applied for at Washington by the Government River Service operating between St. Louis and New Orleans whose purpose is to commit the railroads to interchange of freight with the Mississippi River on a large scale.

The effect of the rates will be to greatly extend the trade territory of St. Louis by lowering shipping costs and, it is predicted, will create capacity cargoes for the new fleet of six towboats and 40 barges which the Government soon will establish on the river. At capacity this fleet will make St. Louis the point of loading and discharge of 1,000,000 tons of export, import and domestic shipments annually.

Territory in North within the dotted line would be enabled to ship by rail to St. Louis, thence by river to Vicksburg and again by rail to and from territory within the dotted line in South at a rate based on 20 per cent saving for the water haul. To St. Louis shippers this saving would be 22½ cents per hundred pounds on first-class freight.

Territory in North within the sawtooth line would be enabled to ship by rail to St. Louis, thence by river to Memphis and again by rail to and from territory in South within sawtooth line at a rate based on 20 per cent saving for the water haul. To St. Louis shippers this saving would be 17½ cents to Atlanta, Ga., as an illustration.

Territory in North within the heavy black line would be enabled to ship by rail and water via St. Louis and Memphis to and from territory in the South within the heavy black line, which is the State of Oklahoma, and also to and from that portion of Arkansas which is shaded at a rate based on 20 per cent saving on the water haul. To St. Louis shippers the saving to Little Rock, Ark., as an example, would be 16½ cents per hundred pounds on first-class freight. Oil could be brought from Oklahoma to St. Louis at a saving of 16½ cents.

Territory shown on the map north of a line drawn east and west from St. Louis would be enabled to ship by rail to St. Louis, by river to New Orleans, thence to foreign ports and similarly import at a saving equal to 20 per cent of the rail charge from St. Louis to New Orleans.

A "June Rise" in June "Want" Ads. —With a Surprise.

During the month of June just closed, a veritable flood of people's popular "WANT" Ads swept through the columns of the POST-DISPATCH, but unlike other floods it carried with it construction and prosperity.

Not only did it do this, but with its total of 74,761 it swept aside all other record figures and established itself as the biggest month of all months—spring, summer, autumn or winter—of any year in the history of the Post-Dispatch Want Ad Department.

Aside from its being the biggest month ever, what else does it mean? This:

Post-Dispatch June Want Ads	74,761
All of the other local newspapers combined	60,737
Post-Dispatch over all others in June Want Ads	14,024

London Holds Victory Parade.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 5.—London had her own victory celebration today—quite distinct from the national celebrations to be held July 19—when the London regiments which participated in the war, after a review by the King at Buckingham Palace, marched through the streets to Tower Hill. It was the most spectacular military event in London since the armistice. 20,000 men participated.

Eastman Company Profits.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Profits of $14,051,969 in 1918 and the distribution of $9,162,222 in dividends in the same period are noted in the annual report of the Eastman Kodak Co. and subsidiary corporations for the year, which has just been made public. After providing for various contingent and reserve funds, $4,889,477.17 was added to the company's surplus, which is reported now to total $31,871,770.91.

Prison For Tax Dodgers.

BOSTON.—William A. English and John H. O'Brien, members of the wool firm of English & O'Brien, were fined $1000 each and sentenced to 18 months in prison for conspiring to defraud the Government in connection with income tax returns.

U. S. AND MEXICO CLOSE FRIENDS, SAYS BONILLAS

Carranza's Ambassador Declares Only Insinuations to the Contrary Come From Newspaper Propaganda.

OIL INVESTMENTS SAFE, HE ASSERTS

Internal Conditions Said to Be Good With Revenues Increasing, Number of Outlaws Decreasing.

MEXICO CITY, July 5.—Ygancio Bonillas, Mexican Ambassador to the United States, who will leave tomorrow to return to Washington after important conferences with President Carranza and the Foreign Office, today received the Post-Dispatch correspondent and freely discussed matters of mutual interest to his Government and that of the United States.

"One result of my visit to Mexico after an absence of more than two years, and of my talks with President Carranza," said the Ambassador, "is that I am able to assure you without reservation that the present relations between your country and mine are of a cordial and understanding nature, which recent events have in no manner altered, and which refute all insinuations to the contrary proceeding from that portion of the press of the United States which is systematic in its campaign against Mexico.

Petroleum Holdings Safe.

"It would be futile to deny that there are subjects of discussion pending, but most of these are of a routine nature, and none contains elements which menace our international friendship. I say that without qualification and without excepting the subject of the status of foreign petroleum holdings under the present Mexican constitution. In view of the fact that in some quarters in the United States the action to be taken by the Mexican Congress upon foreign petroleum interests seems to be receiving attention, when Mexican affairs are being estimated, it is not inconvenient for me to say that this Government never has meditated, does not now, and in future will not meditate any confiscatory processes affecting American or any other foreign petroleum holdings.

"Its object is to safeguard the national welfare without impairment to the rights of any petroleum company, native or foreign, or to the rights of the owners of the lands overlying petroleum deposits. When a final settlement is reached through the medium of appropriate legislation enacted by Congress—not by presidential decree, as many persons erroneously assume—I am confident that all foreign investors will be satisfied with the justice and expediency of the arrangements.

"Interests of the Government and of the companies which have invested large sums in the development of Mexican petroleum fields are manifestly so mutual and interdependent that it is unthinkable that they should not meet on common ground with satisfaction to both.

Outlaws Still at Large.

"Internal affairs I have found upon careful personal investigation to be in a better condition than I had supposed before I left Washington. There is still much to be accomplished in establishing order and in imposing the authority of the Government upon numerous bands of outlaws in the more remote and inaccessible parts of the country. These bands do not operate in union and their unlawful and irresponsible activities have not the slightest political significance. Until scattered or subdued, which the Government is doing as rapidly as circumstances will permit, and with a success which is obvious to any competent and fair-minded observer, they will continue and they would continue to be an impediment to complete restoration of order, no matter what central government might be in control.

"Lacking as it does even the barest essential of public support, or a basis of sane, patriotic, constructive political policy, the recent revival of the Villa movement is rapidly disintegrating, principally through military pressure exerted by the armies of the Government which are vigorously operating in the north.

Villa No Longer a Factor.

"Villa's prestige, which for a brief time attained fictitious proportions—and incidentally more in the United States than in Mexico, because of the propaganda carried on there by his agents—through the unwarranted assumption that his opposition to the Government was sympathetically regarded in high quarters in the United States, vanished over night with the outcome of his disastrous foray upon Juarez. His following has been reduced to a few hundred men, while he and his bodyguard are being closely pursued by Federal troops. Felipe Angeles, who was misled into joining again his forces with Villa's through promises of sentimental and financial support made by irresponsible persons, who are intent upon again throwing Mexico into chaos by upsetting its only possible responsible Government, to serve their own mercenary ends, has been repudiated by Villa and is seeking to escape back into the United States. Villa is not a factor in the Mexican situation.

"Because of the fact that at intervals he has a greater following, numerically small, as it is, than any other rebel leader, his movement never did and does not now constitute the slightest menace to the central Government and exhibits the most serious obstacle which confronts the Government in its task of accomplishing complete pacification.

Carranza to Quit Politics.

"In view of repeated public and unequivocal declarations of President Carranza that under no circumstances will he be a candidate at the presidential elections next June, it is perhaps unnecessary for me to express to you my positive conviction that the elections will be held as the law provides and that President Carranza will under no circumstances accept a renomination and that he will hold himself strictly aloof from all interference in the campaign, directly or indirectly, in favor of any candidate.

"The constitutional provision which forbids President Carranza from succeeding himself will be obeyed to the letter. I know that President Carranza is determined to retire to private life, and that he will do so at the conclusion of his term. He will place responsibility for the result of the election upon the people. His only interest and hope in the election is that they will choose the best man and he believes that they may be trusted to do this. At any rate he will not interfere. You may depend upon this.

"It now appears as though there would be only two candidates, Gen. Alvaro Obregon and Gen. Pablo Gonzales. Both are good, patriotic men.

Revenues Steadily Increasing.

"Economic conditions are steadily improving. The revenues are adequate to the necessities of the Government.

"Last year our revenues were greater than for any other year in the history of the republic and indications are that they will be even larger in 1919. Financial rehabilitation is not so remote as many persons think. This will be undertaken at the earliest feasible date. Mexico is far from being bankrupt.

"No thoughtful, well informed Mexican can deny the importance to this country of the friendship of the United States, nor question the good faith and intentions of President Wilson toward the Mexican people. Too severe condemnations cannot be expressed for any person, whether he be Mexican or American, who by word or deed seeks to sow discord between Mexico and the United States, or to throw obstacles in the way of a better understanding among their peoples. We have been friends for nearly three generations, and the geographical, commercial and political ties which connect us are so close that any serious estrangement is unthinkable."

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION BILL IS STILL BEFORE COMMONS

Motion to Reject It to Make Way for Government Measure Is Defeated.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Friday, July 5.—The Woman's Emancipation bill is still before the House of Commons, notwithstanding an effort by the Government to have it set aside to make way for a new measure on the subject. Maj. Waldorf Astor's motion to reject it was defeated yesterday by a vote of 100 to 85. The bill, backed by the Labor party, has been before the commons for several months.

Before the motion to reject was offered, Maj. Astor announced the Government planned to introduce a substitute next week. This alternative measure, he said, would place women on an equality with men in civil and judicial matters and would be wide and comprehensive.

Confidence in the Government, it was understood, probably would not be considered as having been at stake in the vote on the motion.

The emancipation bill now before the House of Commons was designed to give women political and legal equality with men. It included a provision permitting women to sit in the House of Lords. A London dispatch received Friday was so garbled in transmission as to make it appear that the bill itself had been defeated.

RUMANIA REJECTS LENINE OFFER

Declines to Quit Aiding Ukrainians in Return for Bessarabia.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, July 5.—The Rumanian Government has refused the request of a Bolshevik delegation, recently sent by Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevik premier, that the Rumanians cease giving aid to the Ukrainians and to the forces of Admiral Kolchak, according to an announcement by the Rumanian bureau at Berne.

The Bolshevik delegation had proposed peace and guaranteed Rumania possession of Bessarabia, if the Rumanians acceded to their request.

UKRAINIANS CAPTURE ODESSA

Troops of Gen. Gregorieff Enthusiastically Received by Populace.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, July 5.—Bucharest dispatches, received by way of Berne, say Gen. Gregorieoff entered Odessa after severe fighting and was enthusiastically received. The defeated troops, according to the dispatch, are demoralized and in flight.

Gen. Gregorieoff is quoted as saying that he is ready to join the allies in a combined attack on the Bolsheviki if the latter begin an offensive on the Dniester River.

A Berlin wireless message received in London, July 3, said that the Ukrainians occupied Odessa after a sanguinary battle.

REVOLUTION IN PERU; PRESIDENT IMPRISONED

Minister of War and Others Arrested—Army and Navy Behind New Regime.

By the Associated Press.

LIMA, Peru, Friday, July 4.—Augusto B. Leguia late today assumed office as provisional President of Peru and took up his residence in the Government palace at a result of the successful overthrow earlier in the day of President Pardo.

Senor Pardo, his ministers and a number of high officials of the army and navy are in prison. Virtually no fighting and no casualties marked the overthrow of the Pardo Government. Senor Leguia is supported by virtually all of the army and naval forces and public opinion here apparently is behind him.

The revolution began at 3 o'clock in the morning with an attack on the palace by two regiments of troops and a force of police. By 6 o'clock President Pardo had been deposed and Senor Leguia proclaimed provisional President. The movement was similar to that which resulted in the overthrow of President Guillermo Billinghurst on Feb. 4, 1914.

It was announced that President Pardo would be placed on trial on charges of having violated the Constitution and of having conspired against the institutions of the republic. It is alleged that the Government, in refusing to obey the order of the Supreme Court in the habeas corpus proceedings in connection with the newspaper El Tiempo, was in violation of the Constitution. Another charge against Senor Pardo is that he attempted to purchase the votes of members of Congress in order to carry out his plans to annul the election of Senor Leguia as President and to place the candidate of his own party in power.

M'KINLEY LINE INSTITUTES PACKAGE EXPRESS SERVICE

Business Lost Through Government Control Will Be Sought on Company's Own Responsibility.

The Illinois Traction system has instituted its own express service on all of its various divisions.

Formerly this railway handled United States and Adams Express, but when these companies were taken over by the American Railway Express, under Government control, practically all of the express business was diverted from the electric lines. As a result many communities served exclusively by the Illinois Traction system have suffered, and there has been a demand for an express service other than that provided by the steam railways.

GEORGIA OFFENDER ENJOYS "CHARGE ACCOUNT" WITH POLICE

MACON, Ga.—Sol Hightower has a "charge account" at the police station here. He has been before the Police Judge so often that he has established a line of credit, and frequently is fined and allowed to go with the understanding he will bring the money for his fine.

He has never failed. He has been fined 30 or 40 times this year for minor infractions.

NIPPON MATCH HOLDS FIELD

LONDON.—During the war Japanese matches found new markets in the South seas, India and North America.

When the armistice was signed it was feared the export of matches to these places would decrease owing to the revival of the Swedish match industry. This anticipation has not been fulfilled, however, because Sweden has been unable to obtain sticks for the industry from Russia, its principal source of supply

AVIATION DEVELOPED BY MID-WESTERNERS

Secretary Daniels, Reviewing Progress Gives Credit to A. B. Lambert of St. Louis.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in an interview granted the Post-Dispatch correspondent today on the Naval Aviation program, gave large credit for the success thus far achieved to the pioneer flyers that came out of the Middle West. It was the Middle West, he pointed out, that produced those "zealous pathfinders" of the air, the Wright brothers.

"And some years ago," he added, "when the science of naval aviation was in its infancy, a citizen of St. Louis, Mr. Albert Bond Lambert, came to Washington with a vision of air progress, and with practical suggestions far ahead of any that had been submitted by anyone else outside the regular service. He may truly be called one of the pioneers."

Given adequate support by the American people through Congress, naval aviation, in the opinion of the Secretary, is destined to go steadily forward to new triumphs.

When the House of Representatives, in passing the naval bill, cut the appropriation for naval aviation to $15,000,000 from the $45,000,000 sought by the department, the plans for further conquests of the air, as part of the navy's contribution to the welfare of the nation and the world, were gravely threatened. In effect, according to Secretary Daniels, the House told the naval aviators to stand still.

This week the Secretary went before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, now considering the bill, and renewed his plea for funds to permit research work and the development of new types of planes. Money for quantity production was not sought. The Secretary asked for $36,000,000, but said that the department could get along with $35,000,000. This latter amount was voted by the committee, which took the view that the United States could not afford to lag behind Great Britain and other nations that are preparing to spend huge sums for aviation.

"I am well satisfied with the action of the Senate Committee," said the Secretary today. "Whereas the House bill would have stopped progress, we are now permitted to go ahead. Careful study has shown us that with $35,000,000 we can carry out for the next six months our plans for investigation, and the building of new types of planes.

"Then, when the regular session of Congress meets in December, we shall be ready with a new program for good, round development."

Asked for a brief statement on the importance of naval aviation to the whole country, the interior as well as the coastal states, Secretary Daniels said:

"Every generation makes some outstanding contribution to world progress, the genius of men makes some conquest over an element of nature. The contribution of our generation is that of making transportation through the air as much a part of our lives as transportation by land or sea.

"Americans, the Wright brothers, went from Ohio to the sand dunes of North Carolina and made the first flight. And it was an American, Commander Reed of the navy, who made the first flight over the Atlantic.

"The war of course greatly accelerated progress in aviation, both in our own country and in others. It was seen that the most effective army was the army that had eyes in the air. All the nations were alert and spent millions of dollars to provide airplanes for war purposes.

"Not only were planes needed by the armies in France, but they were required for patrol work on the coasts of Britain and France and our own.

"It is important to realize, moreover, that it is quite as essential for a fleet to have aircraft of the best and most approved type as it was in the last decade to have destroyers and fast cruisers. We have asked that Congress give us money for experiment and the construction of new types, to the end that we may make the navy as effective in the air as it is on and under the sea.

"I have found the keenest interest in aviation in all parts of the country. Some people in the states adjacent to the coasts have the feeling that they have a clearer perception of the future and the function of the airplane than people in the interior of the country. They are badly mistaken. I find that the enthusiasm for aviation and interest in its progress are as keen in the West and South as in New York or Washington."

CAPITAL-LABOR INDUSTRIAL PARTNERSHIPS INCREASING

PROFIT-SHARING GAINS NEW MOMENTUM AS WAR LESSONS ARE APPLIED

Hard-Headed Business Men See in Scheme Key to Harmonious Dealing, Reduction of Strikes and Greater Financial Return to Owner and Worker.

How a $25-a-Week Worker May Have $20,000 Profit in 20 Years

AN employe of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, earning $25 a week, and depositing 5 per cent of it, or $1.25 a week, with the company's profit-sharing fund will, it is estimated, have to his credit $19,044.26 at the end of twenty years, though his own contributions will have been only $1,267.50.

Similary an employe making $50 a week would accumulate about $40,000 during the same period if the profits of the company continue at their present rate.

For every dollar deposited last year with the fund by an employe the company paid in $3.26. Its total contribution for the year was $1,077,883.19, or 5 per cent of its net earnings, without deducting dividends.

NEW YORK, July 6.

THE World this morning presents the following interesting survey of the progress of profit-sharing arrangements between great corporations and their employes:

Announcement last week that Morris & Co., Chicago packers, would inaugurate a profit-sharing plan by which all employes may become partners in the business and sharers in the profits is only one of a number of similar moves made by large corporations since the signing of the armistice.

Before the United States entered the war a definite "swing" in the direction of industrial partnerships of this kind between capital and labor seemed under way. In 1915 11 of them were put into operation by important enterprises. In 1916 the number fell to four, and during the years when this country was in the conflict there were few developments of such plans.

With the coming of peace, however, the pendulum has swung back sharply in the other direction, and hard-headed business men who a few years ago would have looked upon such schemes as visionary and impractical have reached the conclusion that there is sound common sense behind them. And these hard-headed business men are of the type who back their beliefs with their dollars.

For there is nothing cheap about the inauguration of such a plan. Sears, Roebuck & Co., a Chicago mail order house, contributed $1.077,883.19 last year to its employes' savings and profit sharing pension fund. The Eastman Kodak Company's plan for the sale of common stock to its employes was made possible by the donation of 10,000 shares of common stock, with a market value of $5,700,000, by George Eastman, president of the corporation. To this the company added another block of 10,000 shares.

Motives Behind Scheme.

In some cases the motives behind schemes of this kind are largely altruistic. In perhaps the majority of cases, however, the company officials state very frankly that they are aiming as well at increased production, more efficient service, and a greater and continued interest among the employes in the concerns' welfare.

Where the wage earners receive a certain definite percentage of either the profits or the super-profits (i. e., after the regular dividends on the common and preferred stock are paid), and where the profit-sharing plan is on a sufficiently attractive basis to bring the "dividend" of the individual employe to a sizable figure, it is thought that the employe will reason in something after this fashion: "I am given a certain share of the company's profits. The harder I work and the better I work, the larger my share will be. Therefore I am going to work as hard and as well as I can."

Guaranty Trust's Plan.

Another way in which this problem may be viewed is shown in the following paragraph from the announcement of the "Additional Compensation Plan" of the Guaranty Trust Co. of this city, made by Charles H. Sabin, the president:

"The first requisite for increased earnings in which, under this plan, all employes will share will be efficient service. Obviously, the fewer employes required to render this service the greater the division of profits per capita. And it is hoped that, as the business of the company increases, the efficiency of the employes will increase and that the increased service which the Trust Company must render to the public in the future will be taken care of by an increasingly efficient staff of employes, and not by increasing the number of employes."

In this connection it is interesting to note what a New England employer said of profit-sharing, according to a Government report on that subject issued several years ago. He stated that the object of the system was, "to furnish additional stimuli for increased efficiency in establishments where piecework or other efficiency method, for some reason or other, cannot be successfully applied," and added that the application of the profit-sharing principle is "undesirable and unwise where more direct stimuli, such as bonuses on individual efficiency or output may be applied."

Training the Worker.

Aside, however, from these aims, other factors come under consideration when such schemes are discussed. One of the important items in modern industry is that of "labor turnover." The small business man hardly counts this, but to the modern corporation it bulks large. There is a tremendous gulf between the methods of the corner grocer who hangs out a "boy wanted" sign and the steel plant, which maintains a large employment office, the sole duty of which is to recruit labor.

The president of such a plant well knows the loss that is inevitable during the period of training new workmen, the reduced production while they are fitting themselves to their jobs, the disorganization which the departure of a "key man" may cause, the accidents, wasting material and human life (which also has a monetary value), caused by inexperienced labor. Such a man could tell you within a penny the exact cost to his plant when a workman leaves his job.

Add to this the fact that at many plants it is apparently impossible to keep the labor force at 100 per cent, even allowing for the normal number of absences due to illness, and some idea is gained of the hard, cash value of any plan which will make a workman see in his job something more than a living from day to day. It is to win a "continuing" interest of this kind that many profit-sharing plans have been put into effect. Some of these aim plainly at that end, providing nothing for the employe until after a definite period of years or until he is forced to retire either because of old age or disability.

Benefit of System.

In view of these facts, it is surprising that of the 60 employes interviewed by the United States Department of Labor in compiling the report, only three of them stated positively that the efficiency of their employes, either individual or collective, had increased. These three had paid unusually large profit-sharing dividends.

On the other hand, the consensus was almost unanimous that the plans had established more satisfactory relations between employer and employe, especially in cases where the plans adopted had been in operation for a considerabile period. In all cases where employers were interviewed on that point the percentage of labor turnover had been decreased.

To return for a moment to the question the employer's motive in adopting a profit-sharing system, it seems more than a coincidence that again only three of the employers interviewed by the Department of Labor—and a shrewd guess would be that it was the same three—stated that the main purpose was to furnish "an equitable distribution of the profits of the undertaking, as a matter of justice, irrespective altogether of hopes for increased efficiency." These, the Government report asserts, were considered bona fide cases, as their plans were exceptionally liberal, and in two of the cases all of the profits are distributed over and above an estimated fair return on the investment.

It is by no means surprising when approached with an appeal based upon "a matter of justice" the employe should yield increased efficiency, and that when the proposition is put before him on a business basis—a share of the profits in return for increased efficiency—he should give little or nothing.

Diplomacy Is Needed.

As a matter of fact, it is just this aspect of the situation that is being considered by forward-looking business men. They realize very keenly that to draw up a satisfactory profit-sharing plan is only one-third the game; the other two-thirds is to "sell" that idea to their employes. To illustrate:

An executive in a large Fifth Avenue department store was recently discussing details of a plan for group insurance, which the company intends to offer to its employes. "The system we have in mind will contain a number of unusual features," he said. "We believe that it is the most generous plan so far put forward by a large corporation.

"But we know better than to throw this at our employes with a 'take it be damned' air. A large New Jersey corporation some time ago threw a welfare plan at its employes in this way, and what was the result? Before you could say Jack Robinson they had a strike on their hands. Were the men striking against the welfare plan and its benefits? Not exactly, but they were striking against having it thrown at them."

With reference to such strikes the question has been asked why unions so often oppose profit-sharing schemes of any kind. The answer is that often such schemes are employed as weapons against the union. In one New York corporation with National affiliations, employes applying for membership in the mutual association are required to sign an agreement not to join an "outside union." In other cases the intent is not so bald as this, but the employes are given to understand that the benefits of profit-sharing or other welfare schemes are offered to them instead of the company recognizing their own organization.

Labor's Point of View.

Sometimes such schemes meet with apparent success, but students of the problem believe that in the long run the chances are against them, simply because both sides do not meet on the basis of fair and open dealing. The labor point of view was expressed by one union official who said it was "like negotiating with a man who holds a club behind his back."

This takes no account of that other point of conflict with unionism, the question of "speeding up" work by various bonus and benefit schemes. But, though responsible union officials continue hostile to attempts to drive employes at what is considered an unfair pace, only in radical unions does the theory of "creating work" by restricting output continue to hold, though occasionally it is practiced even where the theory is discredited.

Another cause for the occasional failure of such schemes undoubtedly lies in the fact that often the corporation does not bid enough for its employes' favor. When the bonuses are distributed in small amounts quarterly to the recipients they fail to make much impression.

A business man, for instance would understand, if he were given $3 every quarter, that he is receiving the annual income—or practically the use of $200 or more. But a laborer is apt to think in other terms and balances the $3 given him against the millions of dollars of profits shown by the corporation's quarterly statements, nor does he always remember that the $3 given to him and to every other laborer employed by the company in itself amounts to a considerable sum.

War Held Up Plans.

Sometimes, also, schemes for the purchase of stock by employes fall in this category, and, under careful examination, offer few advantages over similar terms extended in ordinary busines transactions by Stock Exchange houses to their clients.

During the war so little advance was made in profit-sharing plans that the Department of Labor has not tabulated changes in the situation since 1916. When it made its survey in that year there were only 60 concerns which maintained what are technically known as "full" profit-sharing systems, i. e., where at least one-third of those employed, including other than executives and clerical employes, receive the benefits of the plan.

But now, however, it is safe to estimate that there are far more than that number of systems in operation, and the total is increasing practically every week. In 1913, when Aneurin Williams, secretary of the Labor Copartnership of Great Britain, published his work entitled "Copartnership and Profit Sharing," he explained the fact that the United States lagged behind Europe in this direction by saying: "The material development of the country has been too rapid, the increase in the production of wealth too great, and the openings for men of ability, even without capital, too tempting for many of the most active minds to concern themselves much with the improvements in industrial relations, and the system of sharing wealth."

Dividend Upon Wages.

One of the most interesting of the recent profit-sharing schemes announced is that of the Simmons Co. Kenosha, Wis., a bed manufacturing concern. It is based upon a principle so simple that it can be grasped by any one in a moment. Each employe is paid a "dividend upon wages" equal to the amount that his wages would have earned if invested in the common stock of the company. For instance, if a man made $1500 one year, he would receive as a "dividend upon wages" the same amount paid to the holder of $1500 worth of common stock. When there is no dividend upon the common stock there is no "dividend upon wages." When the dividend upon the common stock increases the "dividend upon wages" keeps pace with it.

Every man, woman, girl or boy employed by the comapny is to receive this dividend. Any employe dismissed for cause (and the right of appeal is provided) or any employe voluntarily resigning his or her position, does not receive the dividend, but it is paid to any employe temporarily "laid off" or absent for sickness. In these cases the worker receives a dividend upon such sums as he has earned from the company during the year.

Long Under Consideration.

"Simmons Co. has had under consideration for a long period of time the question of sharing with the employes upon some equitable basis the earnings of the company, and the officers have made a very careful study of all of the prominent plans for stock ownership by employes, bonus systems and profit sharing," said Z. G. Simmons, president of the company, in announcing the plan last May.

"After the most careful deliberation they made up their minds that as the success of the business, as represented by earnings, is the result of two major elements, that is, the capital invested in the business and the efforts of the employes, it is a matter of common justice that this success be divided among those contributing to it, upon some equitable basis. We believe that each one of these two elements is fundamentally an investment entitled to a return.

"We think that the money investment is entitled, if the earnings warrant, to a larger return than an ordinary rental value of money, and the effort of the employe is entitled to a return in addition to wages or salary. As each is an absolute and fundamental essential to every business, without which neither can succeed, so is each entitled to share in the profits toward which each contributes. Both contribute to the earning capacity of any business and its success, and while they are different in character, they join in producing the same result.

Making Just Division.

"Just how to make an equitable division has been the problem. At a meeting of the directors it was decided that the employes of the company, including everyone, from the president down to the humblest employe, who are all servants of the company, working for its common good, should share in the earnings of the business at the same rate or percentage upon their yearly wages or salary as the rate of dividends paid the owners upon the common stock.

"When any stockholder withdraws his money from the business he is no longer entitled to share in the profits of the business; so also when any employe ceases to contribute by his personal effort toward the success of the business, so should he no longer be entitled to any return additional to his wages or salary."

Under the provisions of the Employes' Savings and Profit-Sharing Pension Fund of Sears, Roebuck & Co., the employes already have 20,000 shares of the common stock to their credit in the fund, and, in addition, own outright nearly 60,000 shares, making a total of about 80,000 shares, or more than 10 per cent of the company's stock.

According to Julius Rosenwald, president of the corporation, "it is not unlikely that in the course of years a majority of the stock will belong to the employe, either to those who have withdrawn their earnings in the fund and have retained their shares, which they withdrew, or to those who are still participants in the fund."

This is made possible through the extremely liberal plan of the fund, which annually receives from the company a sum equal to 5 per cent of its net earnings (without deduction of dividends to stockholders).

Every employe, after three years of service, is entitled to participate in the fund, and now more than 99 per cent of those eligible do so. Each one of them deposits 5 per cent of his salary, up to a total deposit of $150 a year, in the fund. The amount contributed by the company is prorated by the employes—in other words, each employe shares in the company's contribution according to the proportion which his deposits bear to the total deposits of the employes.

Company's Liberal Terms.

Last year for every dollar deposited by an employe the company gave $3.26. Its total contribution was $1,077,833.19.

And the money does not lie idle. So far as practical, it is invested in Sears, Roebuck stock and continues to earn added increments for the participants in the fund. This is why an employe earning $25 a week, and depositing 5 per cent of that, or $1.25, in the fund every week, will have, according to present calculations, $19,044.26 at the end of 20 years, though his own contribution will be only $1267.50. At the end of 10 years he will have $4,414.25.

A depositor who has completed less than 10 years of service is permitted to withdraw only the amount he has deposited in cash, plus interest at 5 per cent, compounded semi-annually. An exception is made in the case of a woman depositor who, after five years' service, leaves to become married. In that case she receives her full share of the fund. The same exception is made in the case of the death of a depositor. A depositor who has completed 10 years' service is entitled to withdraw all money and securities deposited to his account, including the company's contributions.

How System Works.

The fund is handled by a board of five trustees selected by the board of directors of the corporation. Three of them must be officers and directors and two employes.

Illustrating the manner in which this system of savings works out: An employe with an average weekly salary of $20, whose membership in the fund dated from its inception, July 1, 1916, had to his credit Dec. 31, 1918, a total of $593.52, made up as follows:

Savings of employe	$130 00
Company's contribution.	406 90
Earnings (of fund)	56 62
Total, Dec. 31, 1918..	$593 62

In addition the company maintains a monthly payment plan by which employes may buy stock and an "anniversary check" system. By the terms of the latter employes receiving less than $1500 a year receive on their fifth service anniversary a check for 5 per cent of their annual salary. On the sixth anniversary this check becomes 6 per cent and increases in the same ratio up to the tenth anniversary of service, when the check amounts to 10 per cent of the annual salary. Thereafter it remains on that basis.

The "additional compensation plan" of the Guaranty Trust Co. of this city, announced Jan. 15, this year, provides two funds of a profit-sharing nature. The first is only for employes and is to assure them of some additional compensation even in years when officers of the company may receive nothing in addition to their salaries.

This first fund consists of 3½ per cent of the company's net earnings for the year and is distributed pro rata among the employes.

The second fund was instituted so that in more prosperous years employes and officers shall have an increased share in the prosperity of the company. The sum of the earnings of the company after deducting the money for the first fund and 10 per cent on the stockholders' money invested in the company. This second fund is divided as follows: 40 per cent among employes! 40 per cent among senior officers chiefly responsible for the production of business and the conservation and management of the company; 20 per cent among other officers.

The employes' share of the fund, together with the entire 3½ per cent fund, is pro rated according to length of service and the "relative value of service as indicated by salaries."

Of the senior officers' share of the fund, one-half is to be pro rated among them and one-half placed in a "Special Service Fund" for payment to senior officers selected by the Board of Directors "as deserving special recognition for services rendered." Two-thirds of the fund for other officers is to be pro rated, and one-third placed in a similar "Special Service Fund."

The Eastman Kodak Co. maintains two distinct plans for the benefit of its employes. Since 1911 it has paid a "wage dividend" out of the earnings of the company, and it is now inaugurating a scheme by which shares of stock will be sold at par to its employes, though the market price is nearly six times par.

Under the comparatively simple wage scheme 35 per cent of the rate of all extra dividends above the regular 10 per cent common stock dividend is applied to the wages of all employes in the service of the company five years or longer.

For instance, last year extra dividends of 35 per cent were paid. Thirty-five per cent of this is 12.25 per cent. If an employe was continuously employed from 1914 to 1918 and his wages for that time averaged $1500 a year, he received July 1 of this year 12.25 per cent of $1500, or $183.75. If he had been employed only one year, he received one-fifth of 12.25 per cent, or 2.25 per cent of $1500, or $36.75. If he was employed two, three or four years his "wage dividend" would be in proportion.

The stock-purchasing plan of the company was made possible by the donation of 10,000 shares of common stock, with a par value of $1,000,000 and a market value of about $5,700,000, by George Eastman, president of the company. This was an outright gift to the employes, as the money paid in by the employes who purchased the stock will go to a welfare fund to be used for the benefit of all employes.

The stock is to be sold at par to all employes who, Jan. 1, 1918, had been continuous in the service of either the Eastman or one of its allied companies for two years or more. Each employe has the right to buy an amount of stock equal to 2 per cent of the total wages paid him or her during five years of continuous service before that date.

Eastman's offer to the Board of Directors of the company was made April 2, this year, and he coupled with it the condition that the company set aside and issue to more recent employes 10,000 shares of unissued common stock, of the same value as that donated by Eastman. Eastman's condition was met, and the plan has been announced to the employes.

The Title Guarantee Trust Company of this city has for some years maintained alternate systems of extra compensation for its employes. The "extra compensation because of the high cost of living" is limited this year to employes making less than $2000 a year. For employes making this amount or more there is "extra compensation based on profits." Employes making less than $2000 a year may choose between the two plans, and, very naturally, take that which yields them the more.

Added Weekly Wage.

With some exceptions, the first plan provides that every employe receiving $11 a week or less is paid $1 extra a week. From $12 to $14 the extra compensation is $1.758 a week, and from $15 to $20 inclusive it is at the rate of $1.50. For those receiving over $20 a week the extra compensation is 7½ per cent of their salaries.

During the past two years there has been no "extra compensation based on profits" because this is not paid until the regular dividend of $1,000,000 is appropriated, but this year, officers say, prospects are excellent for a distribution under this plan.

After the $1,000,000 dividend is paid, one-fourth of the remaining profits of the company are set aside as additional compensation for officers and employes in the employ of the company for at least a year. One-half of it is pro-rated according to salary, except that those in the service of the company from one to three years are treated in the computation as if their salaries were only one-half of the actual amounts. The remaining one-half of the fund is pro-rated in somewhat similar manner, except that greater weight is given to length of service with the company.

24,000 AMERICANS TO BE BURIED AT ROMAGNE

Other U. S. Cemeteries in France, but This Will Be Largest.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LE MANS, France, July 3.—Romagne Cemetery, to which place the bodies of American soldiers will be taken and buried, stands out above all other monuments as a memorial of what United States sacrificed for the world cause. This spot, which marks the burial place now of nearly 10,000 American soldiers, killed in the Argonne during the closing days of the war, has been consecrated by Gen. John J. Pershing to the memory of the 24,000 American dead who will eventually be buried there.

Romagne is the natural selection for a location of a memorial cemetery, for during the days between Oct. 4 and Nov. 1 it was the scene of hotly contested battles. The land on which the cemetery is located was finally captured by the Thirty-second American Division, Oct. 10, with the Third American troops passing through the remnants of the town of Romagne a few kilomters to the right.

Prisoners Working on It.

Today an army of German war prisoners are working to complete the cemetery, and as soon as all preparations are ready more bodies will be moved there until the capacity of the cemetery, 24,000 graves, is reached.

This will be the largest American cemetery in a foreign land and in the days after the war parents and friends may be able to locate them. A chart will show the exact location of the burial place of each body.

The site is particularly attractive, being on the hillside. It was given to America by the French Government. It is at present without any park or natural beauty, but through the work of the prisoners gardens are being built and winding roads constructed through the place.

All the Graves Marked.

Immediately following the fighting in the Argonne burying details gave proper burial to all the dead troops found on the field, and hastily constructed crosses were erected to mark the places of interment.

Details working under the direction of the registration service have charted all the fronts into one kilometer squares and carefully searched each square of ground, carrying the American bodies from their improvised graves to the new burial place. So far, only a fraction of 1 per cent of the bodies remain unidentified, and by tracing the movement of companies and regiments it is expected that all the dead will be identified.

This will be the largest but not the only American cemetery maintained in France. At Belleau Wood stands a pile of ruins, and here a cemetery is being erected by American troops. This will be the burial place of about 6000 dead, including many marines who were killed in the Belleau Wood attack. Other large cemeteries are located near Chateau-Thiery, Thincourt and near Beaumont.

CORONER SCOLDS 5 YOUTHS WHOSE AUTO KILLED MAN

Mascoutah (Ill.) Young Men Freed After Testifying They Tried to Dodge Victim.

After a jury had returned an open verdict yesterday, Coroner Renner of St. Clair County scolded five young men of Mascoutah, Ill., whose automobile killed Fred Duecker, 22 years old, near Belleville, early in the morning on July 1, and discharged them. Duecker's body was found at daylight lying in the road.

The five men testified that the light on a motor cycle Duecker was riding was so dim that it appeared blocks off when, in reality, it was only a few feet distant. James Randle, 17 years old, testified that he swerved into the ditch but felt a scraping as if Duecker's motor cycle had brushed the automobile. Randle said he looked back, but saw nothing and drove on in the belief that the motor cycle had escaped. The others in the car corroborated the story.

Social Leader Berenson Says Separate State Would Only Make Bad Situation Worse.

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1919, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

WARSAW, July 5.—Leon Berenson, leader of the Jewish social reform society of Assimulators has granted an interview to me on the Jewish-Polish question. The Assimulators have been active for 60 years and the larger Jewish communities have been under their influence. They have founded schools and shops and, while engaged in real uplift work, have usually voted with the Orthodox party. They are nationalist patriots.

Leon Berenson's attitude is that of an impartial judge with a mass of evidence.

"The Jews are not so much threatened with death in Poland as they are maltreated," Mr. Berenson said to me. "We are suffering general mistreatment everywhere all the time. The historic good relations between the Poles and the Jews have gone and now the Poles are constantly abusing the Jews for the most part in minor ways.

Jews Show Resentment.

"The Poles will not let the Jews occupy seats in crowded trains, they cut the Jews beards, mock their clothing and make insulting remarks to them, all of which renders the Jews' life miserable. The Jews break out in resentment occasionally and that makes matters worse. The Poles are in a bad state of mind and are getting worse.

"What gives the greatest concern to me is not that one Pole, not a Government newspaper or a public man has raised his voice against this Jew baiting. We need just one thing more to make the present situation insupportable, and that is to have the peace conference agree to the 14 paragraphs about minorities in the new nations. This would create a Jewish state and perpetuate a state of affairs which might otherwise pass. The passage of the 14 points would solidify Polish sentiment against the Jews, and make life one prolonged misery for the 4,000,000 Jews who probably will be incorporated in the Jewish state. Half a million might emigate, but what about the others whose ancesteors have been living here for centuries?

Must Foster Common Interest.

"The situation is now so disagreeable that I cannot offer a solution of it, but the solution must lie along the lines of making Poles and Jews feel that they have a common interest as citizens of the same state and that they must regain their old mutual tolerance. The 14 points would render that permanently impossible. As things are now, every time the Poles read of meetings in New York to favor such a separation, or read that the Poles are treating the Jews brutally, some Poles go and take vengeance on the nearest Jews they find. All this makes a vicious circle."

"What disturbed the ancient good relations between the Poles and Jews?" I asked.

"The change in the old tolerance began with the great influx of Russian Jews who were driven into Poland by the Czars," Mr. Branson answered "The Jews are made Russian, kept the Russian language and rubbed the Poles the wrong way as the Polish Jews have never done. This has been the cumulative situation over a course of years. Then came the war. Russia lost Poland, but here the masses of Jews kept on speaking Yiddish, which to the masses of the Poles is the same thing as German. The Poles considered the Jews Germanophile and all Jews were sweepingly declared to be German spies. For however little the Poles liked the Russians, they hated the Germans more.

Branded as German Agents.

"The Germans meanwhile found the Jews useful in buying through them to ship to Germany. You can imagine what effect that had. It branded the Jews in the popular mind as unquestionable German agents, as some actually were, but the odium fell on the whole race. Then on top of the war came Bolshevism, and because many Russian Jews in Poland were Bolsheviki and took part against the Polish national cause, another score was set against the Jews.

"A certain part of the Jews is not without fault, but injustice and maltreatment are visited on all and many of them are wholly loyal Poles. Eventually this may pass and the Jewish race here may regain its former tranquillity, but what is needed chiefly today is active resistance to mistreatment by the Poles. This would come with a more settled state of affairs, but never if the Jews insist on holding themselves, with their schools, their language, their whole life, apart. The Jews of New York might as well insist on speaking only Yiddish, on refusing to become Americans and on living under their own laws. That would not take long to make a serious situation in New York. Add a situation like that to one already bad here and you have what Poland would be if the 14 points are accepted. The worst of it is the fear that the 14 paragraphs will be accepted, for they have very powerful support among the Jews of other countries, who mean to do well by us, but who do not understand what harm they are doing us."

ST. CLAIR SALARIES INCREASED

County Employes Will Get 15 Per Cent More.

The pay of all employes of the St. Clair County Courthouse at Belleville yesterday was raised 15 per cent by vote of the board of supervisors. The board said its action was to help the employes to meet the advancing costs of living.

ALIENS TAKING MILLIONS OF DOLLARS TO EUROPE IN RUSH TO HOME SOIL

Passenger Vessels Are Crowded With Foreigners Who Stayed in United States During the War.

NEW YORK, July 5.

An after-war situation which the Government is studying minutely through various agencies in search of an alleviation before it has a vital effect on industry is the tremendous alien exodus from the country. It is a back home movement of our European element that threatens to create a serious loss of man power.

Ethelbert Stewart, Director of the Investigation and Inspection Service of the Department of Labor in Washington, has been making a nation-wide inquiry into immigration of aliens to their own countries, and this inquiry has shown that 1,300,000 were preparing to leave these shores. True, many of them are of the lowest class of foreigners, but they are the ones who have been a large part of the pick and shovel power in the country.

Many who have delved into the emigration figures since the armistice was signed believe that Stewart's estimate of the number that will leave the country is far too small. Steamship men, basing their estimates on inquiries for passages, think the number will far exceed the Government figures.

There are now 60,000 applications of aliens who are seeking to leave the country on file at the local office of the Customs Intelligence Bureau.

The Department of Labor statistics on those that are leaving give the following percentage of nationalities:

Rumanians	64.29
Serbs	36.90
Russians	35.70
Slovaks	34.50
Austro-Hungarians	28.02
Croatians	21.75
Poles	15.04
Italians	11.00
Greeks	11.00
Lithuanians	9.72

This means that more than half the Rumanians in the country are going back to their native clime and that more than one-third of the Serbs, Russians and Slocaks are planning to leave here.

Figures at the port of New York, through which the greater part of the outward tide of humanity is flowing and will continue to flow show, however, that 90 per cent of the aliens leaving at present are Italians. The rest in the past few weeks have been Greeks, Serbs, Croatians, French and British. The Poles to leave have been very few, but reports from the various Government agencies and steamship companies show that many more Poles are preparing to sail shortly.

75 Per Cent of Them Aliens.

A test of the nationalities emigrating from here recently showed that three-quarters of them were aliens. This inquiry was made by Peter Bradley of the local Customs Intelligence Bureau, of which E. R. Norwood is chief. The figures of the bureau show the increase in emigration, particularly since the armistice. By months since last fall it has been:

September	4,113
October	5,050
November	8,285
December	10,000
January	13,278
February	16,854
March	21,774
April	23,773
May	26,812
June (to 23d)	24,395
Estimate for June	28,500

These numbers represent the capacities of the passenger ships. The number of departures is limited now only by the sailings and the permits to leave.

Last Monday was the biggest single day in emigration with 2500 departures, most of them on two Italian liners, the Duca degli Abruzzi and Dante Alighieri. These departure figures were based on permits obtained by the heads of families. Many of them took their wives and children with them, so that the number of persons who left the country for Europe last Monday was far in excess of 3000.

Dearth of Labor Possible.

The places of departed thousands have been taken by men thrown out of work through the closing of the war munition plants, but all who have studied the labor problem agree that the peace industries under the reconstruction boom would absorb all the unemployed. So with the flow from the country only started there looms the possibility of a dearth of labor, even wage competition among the mills and resultant higher prices than ever.

This labor problem has led the Department of Labor to consider using the negroes of the South to fill the gap in the North, East and West, where are the manufacturing centers. Negotiations to this end have been carried on with the Division of Negro Economics.

Sections chiefly affected by the loss of foreigners will be Chicago, the Pittsburg district, Detroit, the mill cities of New England and the coal regions.

The reasons for these workers going to the lands of their birth are varied. Government officials in Washington say that no aliens are leaving on account of prohibition. Frederic C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration here, is one who believes some are leaving the country because of prohibition. Steamship men say many are.

Many Go to Visit Old Homes.

Many and perhaps most of those leaving are going back to their old homes in war-ridden Europe. The ban against transatlantic travel during the war prevented them from going abroad and it has been impossible for them to get to Europe for nearly five years. They want to see relatives and the scenes of their birth.

The high cost of living is also driving many away from the country. While the earnings of the laborer have been greater than ever he has been unable to save as he could when he paid less for food and lodging.

Patriotism is taking some home. These men were too old to fight for the countries of their birth, but they are not too old to work when their countries need all the man power in reconstruction that they can muster.

Others are going to seek wives of their own nationality and return here in the fall with them. They want their own kind for helpmates.

Perhaps One-Half Will Return.

How many of those who leave will return is impossible to even estimate. Perhaps half of them will eventually—perhaps even more.

"I have worked here 10 years and saved enough to do as I please when I get home," an Italian said as he was about to board ship. "Maybe I come back and maybe I will stay. I will not come back if they won't let me have my glass of wine. Why should I live in such a country? You call it free. I cannot see that it is any more."

Another said he was going to Trieste and look for relatives he had not heard from for three years. If they needed him there he would stay there. If they did not he would come back, as he felt he could earn more money in this country.

"I am going back to my country in the hope that conditions have changed and that it will be more to my liking than it was in the old days," said an Austrian. "I feel it is my duty, besides, to do all I can to help my country and its new government."

Many Greeks have said they wanted to return to their country as they felt they could be happy there now whereas they could not before. Russians who have gone away have been a silent lot on the whole. The Government inspectors feel that many of them have gone in the desire to share in Bolshevism, and expressed no regret over their leaving. The Poles and Slovaks leaving are imbued with an idea of returning to their countries under flags of freedom instead of oppression.

A tall, lanky Pole who stood on a pier last Monday replied when asked why he was going away:

"I was a spinner in a mill in Fall River; who knows but I may be a politician in new Poland."

Not a small percentage of the Greeks and Spaniards who are leaving came here only for the period of the war. They came here to earn the big wages offered and to get away from war-ridden Europe.

Many of the Italians who have presented themselves for departure permits have shown Liberty Bonds and receipts for Red Cross contributions.

A few of the Italians have acknowledged they did not respond to the military call of their country and openly stated they were going back to Italy to answer to courtmartial.

Thrifty Have Saved Thousands.

Many of the men are taking away with them several thousands of dollars apiece. Some have been unable to send money to relatives in other countries for nearly five years. Estimates have been made that the average amount each emigrant will carry away is about $3000. Probably that is too high, although the wages of the foreigners here have been far higher in the past few years than ever before and their big pay has enabled them to accumulate quicker a tidy sum on which they could live in comfort in their native lands. Big shipyard and munition plant wages have done this to a large extent. The indications are, though, that many will find when they reach other shores that the cost of living has gone up materially there as well as here, and that the cost of a loaf of bread or a pound of meat in Europe will cause them to return here.

On one day 10 Italians, Serbs and Greeks who appeared at the Custom House for permits to leave had $28,000 in cash. That was before the Treasury Department got busy and collected income taxes from those departing.

The alien who wants to leave the country now has to go through a quizzing before he can secure permission. He must apply first to the alien permit agent, who usually is the immigration inspector nearest to the alien's last place of residence. A provisional permit is issued upon oral application. An enemy alien has been required to make a written application to be forwarded to the State Department in Washington. This permit, received two weeks later, then went to the central office of the Customs Intelligence Department at the port of departure with the passport. If nothing against the applicant was found in the suspect file a vise was granted and the final debarkation permit issued.

A citizen makes out a written application for a passport which is sent to Washington. Then it is vised at the consulate of the country he is going to. After that the Intelligence Office passes uon it.

Income Tax Receipts Required.

All aliens are required to show income tax receipts from the Internal Revenue office before a debarkation permit is granted.

Some of the enemy aliens who were released from internment camps have been going home through this port in the last few weeks.

The personnel of the Customs Intelligence Bureau here is 500 men. They have searched ships, examined baggage and done passport work during the war. Of them 300 were enlisted from outside the regular customs service. A notice has been received from Washington that these outside men will be discharged after July 7. What the bureau will do without their services is puzzling the local officials. The regular force will not be able to handle the foreign travel with the increasing customs work.

There has been talk of the Department of Immigration taking over the travel work, but then there is the question of getting the income taxes from those departing. The customs men are in the Treasury Department, along with the Internal Revenue, and they have been working together. The Department of Immigration is under the Department of Labor.

With the conclusion of peace, drastic war passport regulations will automatically go out of force, but the Government will find some way of collecting income tax from the man who attempts to sail away without paying it. Officials have considered this point and are determined to continue to collect the money due the treasury.

From April 2 to June 23, inclusive, there were 36,165 delinquent returns of income taxes collected from aliens who were about to sail from New York to foreign countries. This tax amounted to $887,593.05.

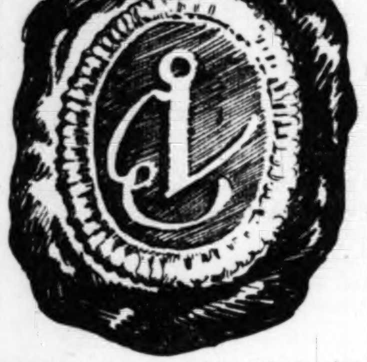
There also were 858 delinquent returns from American citizens who were leaving the country. Most of these persons had lived abroad and came here from Europe only to dodge the war conditions there. The tax collected from them was $367,424.27, so that the total income taxes collected by the diligence of the Government officials at this gateway of the country alone has amounted to $1,255,017.32.

This work is being carried on here, in the office of Collector of Internal Revenue William H. Edwards, by Col. Daniel L. Porter, Supervising Internal Revenue Agent. It has had the forceful support of Commissioner of Internal Revenue Roper in Washington.

About 1500 aliens trying to get out of the country are being examined by the Internal Revenue men at the local office in the Custom House each day, and an average of about $16,000 is being collected from them each 24 hours.

One of the great difficulties besetting the officials is that it has been plain many of these foreigners have been coached how to answer these questions to avoid payments. There have been instances of aliens having paid money for such instruction to the "sharks" who prey on foreigners.

SHORTHAND SEAL RING PRESIDENT USED SIGNING TREATY



The accompanying illustration shows the seal ring with which President Wilson signed the peace treaty. It is a most unusual inscription to be attached to such an extraordinary document. The President's name is engraved on the face of the ring in stenographic symbols.

The ring is so unusual that it is included in the book on "Rings" written by Dr. George Frederick Kunz, the jewel expert of Tiffany's, who obtained an impression from the ring made by the President himself.

The ring is made of part of a nugget of gold which was sent to him by the University of California when the announcement was made of his engagement to the present Mrs. Wilson. It was sent with the request that the wedding ring be made of it, and after that had been done there was so much gold left over that the President had it made into a seal ring.

When Dr. Kunz heard of it he asked the President for permission to reproduce the impression made by the ring in his book and visited Washington for that purpose. President Wilson himself made the impressions in sealing wax and they were photographed in the White House by Dr. Kunz and the picture was reproduced in his extensive work on the history of rings. In writing of it, he says:

"A novel idea finds expression in the ring of President Wilson, on which he has engraved his name in stenographic symbols. This is in thorough agreement with his aim to utilize business methods in the administration of national affairs, to do away with routine and take the most direct route to the solution of national problems."

The President is something of a shorthand expert and often makes notes so he can economize time. He also uses the typewriter to write his speeches and messages.

BIG PROBLEMS STILL MARK PATH TO PEACE

Continued Uncertainty as to Her Demands Keeps Italy in Nervous, and Even Dangerous, Condition.

PARIS, July 5.—Hesitation and confusion once more mark the proceedings of the peace conference. The hesitation is due perhaps to the desire of the allied Governments to see what happens now in Germany before proceeding with the other treaties. The confusion doubtless is due largely to the general lassitude following the disposal of what everyone considers the principal treaty. The fact remains that Bulgaria, Austria and Turkey have yet to be dealt with, and until they are Europe is bound to continue in a more or less chaotic state.

Of the Bulgarian treaty no one speaks. The Turks have just been sent home, presumably on the theory that the near Eastern question cannot possibly be resolved until it is definitely known whether or not the United States will accept mandatories over Armenia and Constantinople, and this can only be known through action by the United States Senate.

Italy is in a nervous and perhaps even dangerous condition because of the continued uncertainty as to practically all of her demands. Foreign Minister Tittoni has arrived in Paris and is reorganizing the Italian delegation on a new and more unified plan. He will act as a sort of president of the council, with De Martino, a veteran diplomat, as chef de cabinet, and the other Italian delegates in somewhat the same relation to Tittoni as are Ministers to a premier. It is expected by this means to attain cohesion which never existed under Orlando and Sonnino.

Asiatic Question Urgent.

The Adriatic question is as urgent as ever and no nearer solution. M. Tardieu still seems to think that his plan may be adopted, but nobody seems to agree with him. The correspondent understands that Tittoni's first act is likely to be the publication of the official text of the pact of London, thus signifying his intention of standing firmly on this document.

Meanwhile, the remainder of the Austrian treaty is scheduled to be handed to the Austrian delegates on Monday. The treaty is not really concluded. The military and certain political clauses may be made the subject of later agreements in order not to delay the signature of some kind of a treaty any longer than is absolutely necessary. The new Council of Four seems to think it can rush the Austrian treaty through now within a few weeks, but most observers consider this doubtful.

Even the financial clauses, which were supposed to be ready Monday, are still being revised continually. At the present time it has apparently been decided that the empire's pre-war debt must be borne entirely by Hungary and Austria. However, of the empire's War Department, which alone reaches some $12,000,000,000, the liberated peoples who constitute two-thirds of the empire's former population, will be required to assume 20 per cent, while the remaining 80 per cent will be left to Hungary and Austria, the present population of which is about one-third of the empire's former 58,000,000 souls. The newly liberated peoples will be entirely exempted from reparation charges, which must all be shouldered by Hungary and Austria.

Britain and the United States are apparently demanding a share of Austria's ships; France is demanding money and ships; Italy money, ships and railway stocks; Serbia, the same, while Rumania is demanding financial reparations. Indeed, everybody is asking for something where there is apparently very little available for anybody.

Priority for Italy's Claims.

It is generally recognized that Italy's claims against the former empire of the Hapsburg's should have priority. Thus, when France tried to claim $200,000 worth of stock in the Southern Austrian Railway, on the ground that a certain amount of French capital was invested in it, Italy protested that this railway was one of the few real assets available for damages, and that as a considerable part of the railway will henceforth run on Italian territory, Italy should be allowed to acquire full ownership of the entire system. On Italy agreeing to reimburse the French shareholders her point of view was accepted.

Still another point which has been causing difficulty is at what rate the Austrian crown shall be accepted in regulating payments between the various countries of the former empire. The latest idea seems to be to accept the crown at the rate that was quoted at the time of the armistice, although it has since fallen far lower.

The foregoing examples of the present problems indicate that the conclusion of the Austrian treaty may be much less rapid than the optimistic prediction.

JOFFRE EXPLAINS FAILURE TO DEFEND BRIEY BASIN

Marshal Tells Critics It Was Impossible to Halt Enemy Until Forces Were Adequate.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 5.—Marshal Joffre appeared before the Chamber of Deputies Committee of Investigation of the Metal Industries during the war today and replied to criticisms made before the committee by certain generals of the failure to defend the Briey iron mining district and the failure to provide for an attack by the Germans through Belgium.

The Briey basin, the marshal said, was not included in the covering positions because it was impossible to prevent the Germans from taking it. The plans of the general staff were made to follow every step of the invasion with the end in view of not engaging in battle until it could do so with a totality of forces which at the beginning were 2,300,000 bayonets.

British military aid was provided for, Marshal Joffre told the commission in a secret military agreement. He said he had counted upon six English divisions. Referring to the defeat at Charleroi, the marshal declared it was the most terrible day of his existence. Generals who were his best friends were broken because they were not equal to their task in consequence of which certain units fell back in disorder. Marshal Joffre explained that the abandonment of Lille was because it could not be defended.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Secretary Glass announced today that the Treasury had waived price restrictions contained in an agreement between the United States and Great Britain for the purchase of 200,000,000 ounces of silver. GERMAN ROCKETS USED TO CELEBRATE FOURTH 48-Gun Salute and Athletics Also Figure in Army's Day of Fun in Coblenz.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, July 5.—A salute of 48 guns—one for each state in the Union—flashed over Coblenz at noon today from the ancient walls of the fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, echoing up and down the Rhine and Moselle Valleys as the first part of the army's program in celebrating the Fourth in Germany.

This was the first time that American artillery barked from the famous fortress which tops the 400-foot rock promontory on the east bank of the Rhine opposite the point where the Mselle joins Germany's most famous river. The salute was fired from 75's of the Seventeenth Field Artillery and the roar of the same guns was heard before by Germans who opposed the Second Division at St. Mihiel in the Champagne and in the Battle of the Argonne. The salvo today, however, did not disturb the Germans, as the army's plans were well advertised in the newspapers.

The Fourth was celebrated throughout the American occupied area today, all duty being suspended except what was absolutely necessary. The afternoon was filled with athletic activities such as boxing, track meets and ball games, and the evening was devoted to theatrical performances and pyrotechnic displays at the headquarters of various units. For the Coblenz district, Ehrenbreitstein was again the center of attraction in the evening, the Seventeenth Field Artillery putting on an exhibition of fireworks surpassing anything ever dreamed of by the Germans. American, French, English and even German fireworks were used, consisting of colored rockets, parachute lights and flares which were used at night as signals in warfare. Rockets abandoned by the Germans after the armistice were used in this way.

The Fourth Engineers also staged a fireworks display on the east bank of the Rhine opposite army headquarters here, thousands of Americans and civilians lining the promenade along the river to watch the blaze of glory in celebration of American independence.

25 POLICEMEN, 21 FIREMEN LET OUT IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Lack of Funds Forces Commissioners to Adopt Resolution Closing Two Engine Houses.

The Board of Fire and Police Commissioners of East St. Louis, at a meeting last night, adopted a resolution closing two fire engine houses, giving 21 members of the Fire Department leave of absence without pay, granting six policemen indefinite leave of absence without pay and unconditionally discharging 19 policemen. The resolution remains in effect until such time as funds are available to re-employ the men.

The commissioners dismissed the men who were the most recent appointees. The fire engine houses which are to be discontinued are to be provided with a day and a night watchman at each place. The board offers these positions to members of the department who have been dismissed. One of the fire engine houses is at First and St. Clair avenue, across the street from the property of the National Stockyards Co., which is outside the city limits. The other is at Fifteenth street and Missouri avenue.

One of the members of the Fire Department to be dismissed was Charles Heilig, secretary to Fire Chief Donahue. Among the policemen let out was Sergt. John Hubert.

The police commissioners and the municipal commissioners say that the dismissals were necessary because of lack of funds, a condition brought about through prohibition, which cuts off about $180,000 a year from the city's revenue.

DR. NORTHCOTT IS SENTENCED

Gets 10 Years to Life Imprisonment for Murder of Nurse.

By the Associated Press.

REDWOOD CITY, Cal., July 5.—Dr. Ephriam Northcott was given an indeterminate sentence of from 10 years to life imprisonment today for the murder of Miss Inez Reed, United States army nurse.

Superior Judge George Buck, in pronouncing sentence, said there was no doubt in his mind of Dr. Northcott's guilt. Judge Buck overruled motions of a new trial and for arrest of judgment. A notice of appeal was filed. The body of Miss Reed was found March 8 in a ravine near San Mateo. An autopsy showed she had died from the effects of an illegal operation.

TWELVE FAMOUS U. S. WARSHIPS TO GO TO JUNK PILE

Oregon, Which Made Historic Run Around the Horn, Included in Those Declared Obsolete by Navy Department.

MISSOURI AMONG DOOMED FIGHTERS

Some Will Be Broken Up for Metals and Others Will Be Used as Targets for More Modern Types.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Decision of the Navy Department to break up and sell for junk or use for targets 12 obsolete battleships, marks the passing of a fleet of vessels long identified with many of the most glorious achievements of the new American navy. They wrote many bright pages into this counttry's naval history during their years of service, and four of them have participated actively in two wars.

The doomed ships, including the famous old Spanish-American war squadron consisting of the Oregon, Iowa, Indiana and Massachusetts and the more modern but hardly less famous Kentucky, Kearsarge, Alabama, Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio, Missouri and Maine, composed one of the most, if not the most, powerful battleship fleets in the world more than 15 years ago.

Foremost among the achievements of these famous old fighting craft is the part they played in the Spanish-American war. The Oregon, which had been commissioned at San Francisco in July, 1896, was at Mare Island navy yard in 1898 when the message was flashed to her commander that the United States was at war with Spain. On March 6, 1898, the famous old ship cleared the Golden Gate, bound for the West Indies, on what proved to be the most epoch-making battleship voyage ever undertaken. With decks stripped for action and gun crews at their stations the Oregon plowed around Cape Horn, up the east coast of South America and arrived at Key West on May 26, ready for action, having made the 14,000-mile voyage in 68 cruising days. Capt. C. E. Clark, the Oregon's commanding officer, was ordered to take his ship to Santiago and there join the blockading squadron which was awaiting battle with the Spanish fleet.

Other Ships Off Cuba.

In the meantime the Iowa, Massachusetts and Indiana, sister ships of the Oregon, were attached to the North Atlantic fleet and had already arrived off Cuba, the Massachusetts being part of the famous "flying squadron" under command of Commodore Schley.

The Oregon, already famous throughout the world for her successful voyage to join the American fleet in time for the impending battle, gained greater glory in the action off Santiago de Cuba on Sunday, July 3, 1898, when Spanish sea power was forever humbled and the liberation of the Philippines and Cuba assured. In that now historic sea fight the Oregon ran the Vizcaya, prize of the Spanish fleet, ashore after riddling the craft with hits from her eight and 13 inch guns and then engaged in a running fight with the Colon, which surrendered after having been cut off from the open sea by the Oregon and forced to head for the beach. A shot at the Colon from one of the Oregon's 13-inch guns was the last shot fired during the battle.

Both the Indiana and the Iowa participated in the battle at Santiago, the Massachusetts having gone to Guantanamo to coal on the day of the engagement. The crew of the Massachusetts, much disappointed at having missed the fight, gained revenge the next night when that vessel and the old battleship Texas engaged and sunk the Spanish cruiser Reina Mercedes as that vessel attempted to escape from the harbor at Santiago.

Massachusetts Flagship.

The Massachusetts was the flagship of the naval vessels in charge of convoying American troops from Cuba to Porto Rico for the Porto Rican campaign. A few years ago the Texas, later renamed the San Marcos, was used as a target for later battleships at Tangier Sound in Chesapeake Bay.

After the Spanish American war the Oregon returned to the west coast where the glorious old ship, then in the height of her fame, was received with tremendous demonstrations. She remained there on duty with the Pacific fleet until a decade ago. Her usefulness gone, she was placed in reserve commission.

The Iowa, Massachusetts and Indiana participated in the home-coming of the victorious Atlantic fleet after the Spanish-American war and remained on duty in home waters for many years. After the Oregon had been placed in reserye the three sister ships were for several years used as training vessels and conveyed the midshipmen from the Naval Academy abroad each summer for a practice cruise. Finally they too were moored to the docks in navy yards, apparently to rust away.

In the meantime a later class of ships had been launched to add to the might of American naval power. The Kearsarge, Kentucky, Illinois, Wisconsin, Maine, Missouri and Ohio, launched between 1898 and 1901, formed the nucleus of the new "steel" navy that was winning the United States an assured place among the great naval Powers. These ships, then unsurpassed in the world, carried the American flag into the ports of the world for many years and in 1907, when the mighty United States fleet left New York for the historic cruise around the world to demonstrate in all lands the might and power of the American navy, they held their places with their more modern sisters throughout that memorable voyage. Greeted with remarkable demonstrations in South America, the west coast of the United States, Australia, New Zealand, the islands of the Pacific, far eastern ports and points in the Mediterranean, the great fleet completed the most comprehensive cruise ever undertaken by so large a body of ships of war.

On the return of the fleet to this country the older ships were forced into the background by the "new" navy and were sent to the back channels of the navy yards to join the Oregon, Iowa, Massachusetts and Indiana.

Called Into War.

The entrance of the United States into the world war brought a demand for every ton of sea power the United States could command, and again the old navy was called upon to defend the flag. All of the 12 old vessels were outfitted, modern fire control appliances were installed, new coats of "war paint" were applied to their time-scarred sides and they were called out to join the fleet.

The Oregon saw service on the west coast throughout the war as a coast defense vessel and training ship for enlisted personnel. The Massachusetts, Iowa and Indiana were used for a time as station ships at Newport, R. I.; Norfolk, Va., and New York, respectively, and later were ordered south to join the main fighting force which already included the Kearsarge, Kentucky and the other vessels of ancient fame. For the remainder of the war the historic old ships took part in the operations of the Atlantic fleet along the coast and rendered valuable service as training ships.

After the armistice the Iowa, Massachusetts and Indiana were sent to the navy yard at Philadelphia, where their colors were hauled down for the last time and they were consigned to the graveyard of ships. The Oregon suffered a similar fate on the Pacific Coast. The other ships of the old navy remained temporarily on duty, most of them for use as troop transports, but they will soon be relegated to the scrap heap.

The Oregon has been offered to the State of Oregon for such use as the State may see fit to make of it as a training ship and naval historical museum, the only condition being that the commonwealth keep the old sea fighter in good condition as befits a time-honored pensioner of glorious history. The Iowa, Massachusetts and Indiana will probably be broken up in order that the valuable metal contained in them, particularly copper and brass, may be utilized in the construction of more modern vessels. Several of the other old ships will be used for targets and the rest junked.

Three other vessels, famous forever in American naval annals, the Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship at Manila Bay; the New York, Rear Admiral Sampson's flagship, and the Brooklyn, Rear Admiral Schley's flagship, also saw service during the world war and are still on active duty in various parts of the world. It is probable that in a very few years all of these historic ships will be placed out of commission for good. They will never, however, be scrapped, in the opinion of naval officers.

Warm Weather Is Here

RATHER warm, isn't it? Even out on the shady porch in the breeze of an electric fan, with an iced drink at your elbow, you sigh when you think how hot it is.

And there are going to be a lot of warm days this summer—days when it will seem as if every cool breeze that ever blew had retired to some other part of the world, and Mary will say, with just a trace of irritation in her usually placid voice, "John, for pity's sake, close that ice-box door. Do you want Junior's milk to be sour?"

Ever think about the kiddies in this town of ours who haven't shady porches or electric fans or cold drinks—who don't even have good, wholesome milk or a supply of ice to keep it sweet, and whose lives are a constant struggle with poverty, misfortune, suffering and disease? Ever wonder how long little Mary and John Jr. would keep their rosy cheeks and sturdy little bodies if they had only stuffy, inside rooms on narrow streets to live in?

Probably you've wondered just what the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund is for anyhow. Well—its purpose is to alleviate just such pitiful conditions in our own tenement districts. It is maintained through benefits by the children and contributions from the public, and right now it is in the midst of a campaign to give the babies a "Victory year." Got an extra dollar you want to give to help somebody who needs a lift over the rough places in life?

The Post-Dispatch will receive your subscription, no matter how small, if you mail it, or bring it in, to the cashier.

PHELAN WOULD BAR JAPANESE ENTIRELY

California Senator Says They Are Making a Silent Conquest of Western Hemisphere.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Cancellation of the so-called gentlemen's agreement with Japan and prohibition of all immigration from that country was urged before the House Immigration Committee by Senator Phelan, Democrat, of California, who declared the Japanese were rapidly making a "silent" conquest of the Western Hemisphere. America's next war, he said, would be "on the Pacific and not on the Atlantic."

"The Huns of the East have come," Senator Phelan declared. 'Already they have spread over California and are stripping the State of its Americanism. They have invaded South America, and have obtained a firm foothold in Mexico, where they are protected and are a part of the Carranza machine. Some day the Mexican and Japanese problem will come to smite us with united force."

Senator Phelan said he had no sympathy with the "percentage" plan of immigration which would permit Japanese to come into this country at the annual rate of from 3 to 5 per cent of those already here.

"The Japanese are not to be compromised with," he asserted. "They must be eliminated entirely like a swarm of locusts, which they alone equal in economic destructiveness. Not 1 per cent should be allowed to come; not even a quarter of 1 per cent. Legislation should be enacted to bar them entirely. This might hurt Japan's feelings, but America comes first.

"The sore spot of the world is in the Orient. It is the place which we must watch, zealously and unceasingly."

Senator Phelan urged also legislation to prohibit Japanese from owning or leasing land in this country and to make "picture bride" marriages illegal.

The greatest danger from the Japanese, the Senator said, was caused by their "innate and deep-rooted desire to become land owners."

"The Japanese refuse to work for anyone else when it can be avoided," he declared. "When they acquire a piece of land they work 18 to 20 hours a day. For that reason Americans are being driven out of the State."

Land owners of California are apathetic, Senator Phelan said, because they are able to obtain from the Japanese far more for their land than they could make by leasing or selling it to Americans or by working it themselves.

"The American laborers are not so fortunate, however," he said. "They are deprived of their means of livelihood. Can you wonder that many have joined the ranks of the Bolsheviki, the I. W. W.'s and the radicals?"

Labor unions of the west coast are beginning to realize "the seriousness of the question," the Senator added, and to make determined efforts to have all Japanese excluded.

Senator Phelan said he had aided in obtaining the State Department's disapproval to the proposed sale by Mexico of 800,000 acres of land near the American border to a Japanese corporation for colonization purposes.

"But who knows when other and more successful attempts will be made?" he asked. "We must be on our guard continuously."

MISSOURIAN HONORED FOUR TIMES REAL MEDAL WINNER

Stark City Banker in Pershing's "One Hundred Best Stories of War."

STARK CITY, Mo.—Sergt. Waldo A. Hatler, at the time of his enlistment in the army, cashier of the Stark City Bank, is back from France as the most decorated hero of Southwest Missouri. He is the winner of the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Distinguished Service Cross and in addition has been cited for two French medals for bravery.

The Congressional Medal of Honor was bestowed on Sergt. Hatler for a deed performed Nov. 8 in the Argonne-Meuse drive. At a point on the Meuse River, where 300 marines had been killed and wounded a few days previous, it was necessary to build a bridge, although the position was under continual shell fire of the Huns. No airplanes were available to reconnoiter the district on the further bank of the river and a call for volunteers was made to swim across the river in the face of the murderous fire and get the lay of the land. Hatler and another soldier made the attempt.

The other man was drowned, but Hatler got across, secured the desired information and swam back again. Through the information that he secured it was possible for the Americans to build the bridge and send troops over it within two days. This feat is included by Gen. Pershing in his "One Hundred Best Stories of the War."

Hatler was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for an act performed at Bois de Bantheville on an earlier date. In company with a Captain he was out on patrol duty and when within a few feet of the German lines encountered three Hun soldiers.

"We thought too fast for those fellows," said Hatler in discussing the incident. "The Captain grabbed one and sent him "west" in quick time. I got a grip on one of the others and, holding him, shot the third. I also had to shoot the third one, as he tried to get me. It was fairly dark at the time and, combined with the noise of a German battery a few feet away, prevented the Germans from seeing or hearing us and we hustled back to our own lines in safety."

BILL FOR UNNEEDED HOSPITAL LOBBIED THROUGH CONGRESS

Surgeon - General Said to Have Called Hines Building in Chicago "Worst He Ever Had Known."

3 TO 5 MILLIONS OF DOLLARS INVOLVED

Secretary Glass May Resort to Courts and May Demand Inquiry Into Part Played by Former Congressman.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Congress has "directed" the Secretary of the Treasury to take over the Speedway Hospital, Chicago, designed, partly built and owned by Edward Hines, the lumber merchant. The amount of money required for this proposition, if carried out, may go above $10,000,000. A former act, dealing with this project, authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to sign a contract for the construction of a hospital building if in his discretion it was to the best interest o fthe Government. The Secretary was investigating the matter when, for some unexpected reason, a demand was made on Congress to direct him "to acquire and complete immediately" the hospital, which is located at Broadview, Cook County.

The bill providing for the taking over of Hines Hospital, known to Congress as the Speedway Hospital was lobbied through by former Representative W. S. Bennet of New York.

Some unseen influence was at work in Congress for the Hines hospital measure. At the outset many Republicans opposed the plan to have the Government take the project launched by the timber king, but agreed with Secretary Glass that it should be carefully looked into before final action was taken. Later, however, under the lash of party whips, many Republicans reversed themselves. Among those who changed their views was Representative Good, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Scheme Denounced.

In a speech on the floor of the House, denouncing the scheme to take over the hospital, Good said: "I am not willing while I occupy the position of chairman of the Committee on Appropriation to shirk duty of trying to prevent an expenditure of an appropriation of $9,000,000 when the Secretary (of the Treasury) says to you and to me that he does not need it."

Ten days later, after Hines had been here and the Republican steering committee of the House had met on the proposition, Good rose in the House and urged his colleagues to vote for the Senate amendment.

Bennet, after conferences here with Hines, canvassed Congress thoroughly for the plan to take over the hospital. He saw many house members and Senators. Using his privilege as an ex-member, he went to the floor of the House to urge the passage of provision covering the Hines hospital. He has spent much of his time here for two months on this matter. He was so persistent that he would have gone before the conference committee had not serious objection as to the propriety of the thing being raised.

Hines lost a son in France. The young man had gone over to fight, but died of pneumonia.

Memorial Proposed.

"My good friend here, who has just finished speaking," said Representative Byrnes of South Carolina, pointing to Representative Rainey of Illinois, "says that this proposition originated on the part of a gentleman who wanted to commemorate the death of his boy. His boy, from all accounts was a fine fellow. It is a laudable purpose for this gentleman to commemorate the services of his son. But, if that be true, and $500,000 will complete the hospital, why does he not complete it and turn it over to the city of Chicago in commemoration of his son's services. This act proposes to ask the Government for $2,500,000 for this incomplete building, the statement being that the building as it stands is worth $4,000,000 and therefore it is a donation of $1,500,000 by Hines. There has never been a greater fight to get the Government to erect anything in all my experience. I ask if it is to commemorate the memory of a son, why is it necessary to employ lawyers from New York to come down here and force the Government to take $1,500,000 from a man. I never yet saw a man employ lawyers to force one to take $1,500,000. They do not do it. They employ lawyers to take a million and a half from you."

Secretary Glass, in his testimony before the Senate committee said Byrnes, referred to a newspaper clipping from Chicago saying: 'Write your Congressman and write your Senator. This thing means an expenditure of $10,000,000 in Chicago.'

An Adverse Report.

"Of course my friend knows who is responsible for these statements," Byrnes continued. "It may mean an expenditure of $10,000,000. When this proposition was urged here originally and the 'soft stuff' was resorted to to take over the hospital, it was stated it would take care of at least 2000 beds. The supervising architect says it will take care of 850 beds, equal to $5924 per bed. Does the Surgeon-General recommend it be taken over? No. After he inspected it he recommended that it be not taken over. The supervising architect says it will take $1,915,000 more than the $3,000,000 provided for a hospital in Chicago."

Secretary Glass may resort to the courts to keep from following the direction of Congress in this case. He may also ask for an inquiry into the part former Representative Bennet played in the legislation.

"Perhaps the Secretary of the Treasury will not be blamed for wondering why it is necessary for a man to employ an attorney to make the Government take a gift of a million dollars," said Glass, "and why it even seems desirable to carry on the most extraordinary species of propaganda that I have ever encountered in my public life to make the Government take a gift of $1,500,000."

Glass declared that the Surgeon-General said the Hines building "was the worst specimen of hospital architecture he had ever known."

TWO ARMY CORPS IN RACE FOR SEDAN BEFORE ARMISTICE

Great Rivalry for Capture of City Developed Between French and American Troops in Sector.

GERMANS EVACUATED UNDER FIRE OF U. S.

Speed With Which Pershing's Men Moved Surprise to Allies in Last Days of Fighting.

By JUNIUS B. WOOD,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN EUROPE, May 25.—Undoubtedly the most spectacular single operation in which American troops were engaged in large numbers was the dash toward Sedan in the closing hours of the great war. Historians and novelists will find it a fertile theme for years, and camp fires will be regaled with arguments over its many dramatic incidents so long as any of those who took part in that phase of the drive survive. Already thousands of words have been written telling how this or that division "captured" the famous city. In fact, the claims for the honor of its capture started the hour that it was sighted from the tops of the distant hills across the Meuse.

Who Captured it? Nobody!

The actual fact is that nobody "captured" Sedan in this war. It was evacuated by the Germans under the American fire and after the armistice went into effect French troops peacefully entered it. Four American divisions and one French division were actively in the race to capture the city. Two of the American divisions—the Seventy-seventh and the Sixth—did not come within view of the city. The other two—the First and the Forty-second—fought their way to the hills overlooking the city, preparatory to taking it the following day when orders to withdraw came from Marshal Foch. The pleasure of taking peaceful possession of cities was a function the French reserved for themselves. Sedan, where Napoleon III surrendered, with 100,000 men, was too rich in memories to permit its capture by Americans. That night the Fortieth French Division relieved the two American divisions. It camped on the hill and, according to the French inhabitants, it was Nov 14, three days after the armistice, when their troops marched into the city.

Aviator Starts the Story.

However, the official communiques did not let such a small detail as that deter them from capturing the city. The Americans "captured" it first in their communique. The most famous of our aviation "aces" had been sent out on a reconnoissance that day to find how close we were to the city and brought back a report, "I dropped newspapers to the American doughboys in the streets of Sedan." He had mistaken some other village for Sedan, a mistake which aviators had made before. Consequently the Americans "captured" it in their communique on Nov. 8. That was particularly displeasing to the French, who had planned to avenge the Napoleonic disaster themselves and already had ordered the Americans back to clear the way. Consequently the best they could do was to "capture" the city in their communique of Nov. 9. In the end a couple of days did not matter.

This clerical error, laughable now, does not in the slightest detract from the valor of those brave men—both French and Americans—who advanced on that city and drove the enemy beyond, so that its capture was merely a question of hours. Signing of the armistice made further fighting unnecessary. If that contingency had come, the city would have been captured, for the Americans always made good their communiques in the rare instances when they anticipated the news.

Pushing Out the Enemy.

Sedan, which is 12 kilometers (7.2 miles) from the French-Belgian border, became a definite objective in the latter days of the continuous plugging of the American First and Second Armies in the Argonne-Meuse offensive. The capture would leave the enemy only a bare foothold in eastern France, force his further retirement on the front farther west and be of immense moral value on account of the historical associations around the city.

At one of the many conferences between Gen. Pershing, commanding the American armies, and Gen. Maistre, commanding the French group of armies operating on our left, the capture of Sedan was discussed. At the time of the conference Sedan was many kilometers beyond our most advanced line and the Germans were fighting stubbornly in every hill and village between. It was certain, however, that the steady, regular drive would soon bring us within striking distance of the city. Both French and American forces were swinging gradually eastward in their advance so that the variation of a few kilometers would throw Sedan in either the French or the American sector. Eventually it was in the French sector. At the time of the conference, however, it was not absolutely certain where it would fall and Gen. Maistre said that on account of the military importance of the capture of the city, regardless of the patriotic fervor of the French to capture it themselves, he was willing that the Americans should capture it if they could.

Americans Show Speed.

Action started almost immediately with this historical prize offered as a reward. That the Americans would move so fast was a surprise to the allies even though they had seen the Americans do the supposedly impossible before. It was also a surprise to some of the American commanders. On November 5, 1918, at 6:30 p. m., the following message came to two corps commander from Lieut. Gen. Hunter Liggett, commanding 1st army:

"Memo for commanding generals, 1st and 5th corps:

"Subject: Message from commander in chief.

"1. Gen. Pershing desires that the honor of entering Sedan should fall to the 1st American army. He has every confidence that the troops of the 1st corps, assisted on their right by the 5th corps, will enable him to realize this desire.

"2. In transmitting the foregoing message your attention is invited to the favorable opportunity now existing for pressing our advance throughout the night. Boundaries will not be considered binding.

"By command of Lieut.-Gen. Liggett."

The last sentence made the event a free for all and the race was on. Maj.-Gen. Joseph T. Dickman commanded the 1st corps and Maj.-Gen. Charles P. Summerall, the 5th corps. Each corps had three divisions, but each corps commander selected one to make the actual race on which he pinned his hopes, the other divisions to follow as they could. The hopes of the 1st corps were with the 42d division, which was the nearest of any American outfits to Sedan. The veteran 1st division was the entry for the 5th corps.

20 AUTOS DESTROYED IN FIRE

Twenty automobiles were destroyed, and nearly 20 others were badly damaged in a fire of unknown origin yesterday morning in the Eastern Auto Garage, 618-620 Walton avenue. The fire was discovered by a mechanic. Firemen were prevented from getting the machines out by the explosion of gasoline tanks.

Henry Stice, manager, would not attempt to estimate the loss, but stated that the buildings and the cars were covered by insurance. Firemen estimated the loss on the automobiles at $18,000 and on the building at $2600.

Jack Dempsey Could Have Leveled Willard, When at His Best, Declares Wray

Post-Dispatch Sporting Editor Says Former Exhibited Most Remarkable Punch in Punishing Power—Utah Marvel Crossed Rival at Outset of Contest.

By John E. Wray.
Sporting Editor of the Post-Dispatch

TOLEDO, O., July 5.—Jack Dempsey is champion of the world today by virtue of a tremendous punch.

It is true that Jess Willard was 37 years old, four years out of the ring and in only fair condition; but set this all aside. Had he been the Jess Willard of April 5, 1915, when he defeated Jack Johnson at Havana, he would just as surely been leveled and overthrown as he was yesterday at "Tex" Rickard's enormous arena, with 50,000 or more persons looking on.

Dempsey Landed Nearly 6 Blows to Willard's 1

TOLEDO, July 5.

TEX O'ROURKE, who kept count of each blow struck, says that Dempsey landed 62 to only 11 for the champion in nine minutes of actual boxing.

Over at his hotel today Jack Dempsey is going about his affairs without the slightest scratch to indicate that he fought for the world's title only the day before. The former champion, however, will not be a presentable subject for motion pictures filming for more than a month, owing to the terrible beating to which he was subjected during the short nine minutes of the fight—a bloody, savage nine minutes which no living man could have withstood with any better success than did Willard.

Dempsey exhibited the most remarkable punch in punishing power that has ever been seen in the ring in recent times. If a bolt of lightning had struck Willard he could not have crumpled up more completely than he did in the opening round when Dempsey landed his first solid smash. From a towering, confident titan, Willard was in two minutes cut down to a groping, gasping, bewildered, utterly helpless mammoth, with no possible chance of recovery. The transformation was effected so suddenly, so quickly and in the face of such enormous physical disadvantages on the part of Dempsey as to leave the majority of the spectators present utterly dumbfounded. It was a final answer to the much discussed question: "Can a good little fighter defeat a good big one?" For Dempsey, size is absolutely immaterial—his victory yesterday is ample testimony to this.

Wonderful Drama.

It was a wonderful drama that was enacted in Bay View Park here yesterday afternoon, where a blazing sun shone down into the heart of that great frame crucible reducing the 50,000 occupants of the next largest arena to the ancient Roman Coliseum to a sweltering sunburned mass, waiting for hours through endless preliminaries for the zero hour of the big show. This came shortly after 4 o'clock, when both fighters entered the ring within a few seconds of each other, Dempsey looking even less than the 195 pounds claimed for him and Willard appearing in about the same physical condition as during his last training workouts—slightly thick about the waistline and with a tendency to quiver about the abdomen and upper leg. However, many persons present remarked upon his seeming fitness for the fray.

Willard Confident.

Confidence was stamped on every lineament of the title-holder's features. Having saluted the 50,000 persons present collectively, he strode, condescendingly, over to Dempsey's corner as if conscious that the movie men were cranking up at the rate of 16 exposures per second, and shook hands with the challenger. Dempsey half rose from his chair and shook hands, barely glancing at his visitor. He had the air of a man who wished the preliminaries were over so that he could begin the business in hand at once.

No time was wasted in useless introductions and 10 minutes after the fighters entered the ring the gong starting the first round rang.

From the beginning there was a surprise. Dempsey did not dash in, McGovern-like, to storm the justly celebrated Willard citadel. Instead, he stepped slowly and watchfully toward the champion, waiting to see what the title-holder would do. Willard was quoted the night before as having said that he would not wait for Dempsey to rush him, but would start activities himself. As a matter of fact, it was Willard who began the attack, leading with a tentative left hand, which landed lightly on Dempsey's forehead. Willard was not carrying the fight in any stormy sense, however, and his was a rather tame attack. Both fighters were stepping around each other watchfully. There was none of the smile on Willard's face, such as he was accustomed to wear in his training bouts, although he did not show any signs of concern.

Willard led again, this time scoring lightly with a right and left, drawing forth a response from Dempsey in the form of a feeler for the body—probably to see what defense Willard had for a body blow. The champion then stepped in close and landed a fairly hard right-hand chop to Dempsey's face and Dempsey countered for his opponent's head, a clinch following.

Both were Cautious.

It was cautious work on both sides; but shortly after they "broke" Willard took the lead and landed four or five rights and lefts in rapid succession to Dempsey's head. They were not hard blows, however, and were much more like mere cuffs. Jess, thus far, had not cut loose with one blow that had the power to cripple his opponent, even had it landed flush on its objective.

The title holder looked very good at this point, however, because Dempsey was merely marking time pending the arrival of his opportunity. However, the Willard men about the ring were already gaining confidence and one or two bets were being placed when the storm broke—a hurricane, for Willard.

It came shortly after the title holder had just finished some close-quarters work, cuffing Dempsey but not hurting the challenger, who was too close in for the full power of Willard's arms to be brought into play.

Suddenly the Dempsey pistons began to work. A left sunk into the fatty part of Willard's abdomen. Jess bent slightly forward with the unexpected pain in his pantry region and as he did so Dempsey first uppercut him with the right, then swung the left up from the body to the jaw, landing flush on the mark.

The big man-mammoth did just as have all the smaller men that felt the power of Dempsey's tremendous hooks, he crumpled up and went down prone; then rose to a sitting posture, with his eyes glued to the referee, dazed but still conscious of the impelling necessity of getting to his feet in time to beat the referee's count. The referee with his eye on the timekeeper, was tolling off the seconds slowly, it seemed to the excited throng, which was already on its feet cheering the supposed winner.

All But Helpless.

Jess took the count of seven and rose all but helpless, barely able to lift his hands. The tiger Dempsey swarmed all over him, landing solidly first to body and then to the head. To reach Jess on the jaw the challenger had to reach high, as Jess tried vaguely to recall his training camp stunt of leaning back out of reach and rolling his head. But the brain refused to respond and the TNT of Dempsey's right and left brought him down a second time. He rolled over on the floor, raised himself up with the aid of the ropes barely getting to his feet on the count of nine.

Dempsey stormed him again and deliberately aimed and timed his punches. There wasn't the shadow of resistance left in Willard. He could hardly raise his hands. His right eye was already closed and the right side of his face had begun to swell from contact with the terrible hooks with which Dempsey scored him.

As he backed stumbling around the ring, Dempsey again brought him low with a body punch, Willard plunging half through the ropes and luckily falling inside the ring. Again he took the nine count.

It was murderous to look at. Referee Pecord grimly counted into Jess' ear, determined to give him every chance, and once again Willard arose at the last count.

It did not seem possible that he could last out the round. From the time the first real thud of Dempsey was driven home, to the time the gong rang, ending the round one, was two minutes approximately. In that time Willard was floored six times and took a total count of 51 including one of 7, 4 counts of 9 and one (the last) of eight. The final knockdown looked as though Willard were done for good.

He was prone upon his back but was trying to lift himself to a sitting posture when the bell rang. The count at this time was reported by Billy McCarney to be eight. So palpable to the crowd was it that Willard could not respond in 10 seconds that the arena became a pandemonium. The crowd figured that Willard was knocked out and started to cheer the new champion.

Many rushed for the ring in the hope of being able to shake his hand. The guards had to fight the crowd back to prevent them from interfering with the press workers.

Willard was dragged to his corner and patched up while Manager Jack Kearns climbed up and shouted for Dempsey to come back and get into the ring before the gong sounded the start of the next round. Dempsey hastened back and took his seat and fortunately, was ready to continue. What would have happened had he not been able to respond to the bell is hard to say. Technically Willard might have raised an argument and claimed the fight, although it's probable the timekeeper would never have rang the gong until Depsey was back in the ring.

The minute rest did not do much for Willard. When he came out for the second round he was still very badly dazed and scarcely able to offer a defense. One eye was closed and he must be given considerable credit for his gameness in continuing at all. Many a referee has stopped a fight for less punishment administered than Willard took in that two minutes.

The second round was rather tame. Dempsey, tired from his own exertions and probably disappointed at having to come back into the ring and finish an unpleasant task that he had thought was already completed, did not storm Willard as savagely as in the first round. He stepped around carefully, studying the ruin in front of him, as if picking the right spot to dynamite. He took so much time that Willard began to recover and the Dempsey supporters began to worry. Dempsey, too, seemed to underestimate the reserve power of the human mastodon and wade in "wide open" On two occasions Willard showed he had fight in him by slipping through right uppercuts, one of which jarred Dempsey and made him fall into a clinch. When he came out of it he started punishing Willard savagely and soon had him bleeding and groggy. He did not knock him down in this round and Willard, with one minute's rest, came up for the third round better in appearance than for the second, although the right side of his face was a pitiful sight, swollen hideously, with the right eye completely closed.

Holders of $60 Seats Paid $6.66 a Minute to See Dempsey Whip Jess

HOLDERS of $60 seats at the Willard-Dempsey fight in Toledo yesterday paid at the rate of $6.66 a minute to see a new heavyweight champion crowned, there being just nine minutes of milling. This total does not take into consideration the railroad fare, hotel expenses, food and incidentals.

On the other hand Willard drew $11,111.11 a minute for the nine-minute beating. Dempsey's share for each minute was $3,055.55.

It was not long before it became worse, and it was fortunate that the women's boxes were placed at the furtherest extremity from ringside, else there might have been a fainting episode or two. Dempsey, refreshed by the minute's rest, set sail for the championship and battered Willard all over the ring. Rights and lefts to the head and body followed with bewildering frequency. Once he swung his right mitt into the champion's flabby abdomen and it seemed as though it must come through on the other side. Then he swung his left up to the champion's mouth and cut his lip. The blood spurted forth and dripped off his chin. His mouth, half open, looked like a bloody gob. A crimson stream trickled off his chin on to his breast. The entire right eye was closed tighter than most St. Louis saloons. It was the most deplorable spectacle that was ever presented by a champion in a world's title bout—it was a slaughter house. A left hook on the sore mouth caused blood to spurt anew and Willard spat teeth onto the ring floor. Human nature could not stand the punishment and Willard gradually caved, beaten from rope to rope. He staggered helplessly about the ring and was a shining mark for Dempsey when the ball rang.

Seconds worked over Willard hard during the minute intermission, but to no purpose. The champion was dazed and sick. At 37, with four years absence from the ring, there is nothing left to be recuperative power; the title holder thought discretion is the better part of valor and consented to have his secretary, Ray Archer, toss the towel in the ring in token of his surrender.

The crowd had not been expecting this. They figured that the world's champion would not surrender the title without at least going the limit of his endurance. Many in the crowd had bets that Willard would last a certain number of rounds, and these showed a tendency to take Willard's quitting badly.

For the most part, however, the objectors' cries were lost in the whirlwind of acclaim that went up for the new champion, who had showed his wonderful prowess to such great advantage. Conceding 54 pounds in weight, he had conclusively proved that size makes no difference in the ring if a fighter has the "kick."

Not the Slightest Doubt.

There is not the slightest doubt that Dempsey has it.

Dazed and battered as Willard was when the referee had held up Dempsey's hand, the dethroned title-holder rose painfully from his chair and walked over to Dempsey and took his hand, mumbling a few congratulatory words. As he took his seat he almost fell into the chair—indicating the degree to which he was exhausted.

The fact that Willard failed to come to the scratch for the fourth round not only embittered many of Willard's followers who held that a real game man should have come out for the fourth round and taken the knockout, like a regular fellow, but has already started discussion among those who wagered on the fight. The bout will be written into the guide books as a technical knockout in the third round, Willard having failed to appear for the fourth.

As stated earlier the one primary reason for Willard's downfall was Dempsey's punch. This beautifully muscled young man couples with tremendous clouting power an adamantine desperation. Not once was he flurried or flustered. Cool and collected he bided his time, picked his opening and delivered his best.

It was enough.

Condition or No Condition.

In opinion of the writer Willard never saw the day when he could

"It Was a Whole Lot Easier Than I Thought," Says Dempsey; "The Better Man Won the Bout, I Have No Alibi"—Willard; "Left Hook in First Round Settled Championship," Says Referee

By Jack Dempsey,
Heavyweight Champion of the World.

TOLEDO, O., July 5.

IT was a whole lot easier than I thought, my defeat yesterday of the champion, Jess Willard. I knew I had him right off the reel in the very first round when I cracked him clean and true on the jaw with a left hook.

I saw Jess shiver and stagger on his feet and I felt then and there that I was the heavy-weight champion of the world.

After I popped the big fellow on the jaw with the left he hit me twice with his right uppercut. I wasn't hurt, not even troubled, and then I was sure I was the winner.

So I walked right into him and shot my right across at a spot on his jaw I have been aiming at for three months. The blow went right along the groove and I heard it smash against his jaw.

Willard staggered away from me, stumbled backwards and went down. That was a sweet fall to me. Months ago when this match was first talked of I often thought of this very moment. I knew I was going to sock the champion like that and I was sure I was going to drop him. I thought perhaps I might get excited in my joy, but do you know, I never had the slightest feeling.

As I saw him go down I felt as easy, as comfortable and as cool as that day out at the Overland Club when I drove Bill Tate to the floor.

When Jess got up at the count of six I determined to crack him next with my left. And things went just as I planned. I easily slid by Willard's left and slammed him on the side of the jaw. I thought he was going out on that punch. He went down, but he was game and staggered to his feet. I was no longer afraid of anything he could shoot at me, for I could feel his blows weakening.

I hit him with the right on the chin and he went part way down, but I knew he wasn't ready for the count, for his feet still held him.

I looked up at Jess from my crouch and I could see the beaten look in his eyes. He was all through, but he wouldn't stop. A left dropped him the fourth time and another hook from the old southpaw did the trick the fifth time.

I believed the fight was over when Referee Pecord was counting, but at the call of seven there was confusion at the timer's table and then the whistle sounded. I thought I was the champion. I was ready to leave the ring when Jack Kearns called me back. I didn't hear the bell and I couldn't hear the whistle. But I wasn't a bit flustered. I knew I had Jess and that it was only a question of a round or two.

In the second round and again in the third I didn't tear into the champion, but contented myself by walking in slowly and aiming my blows.

Did you notice me slide to the right of the champion? That was to get on the side of his closed eye. The big fellow was an awful muss, with blood streaming from his right eye, his nose and his mouth. I was finding him so easy for my left that I hardly bothered to use my right, though I knew he would have been as soft for one as the other.

I was sure I was going to finish Jess in the fourth, and I was all set to pop him off when I saw Jack Hempel fling the towel into the ring.

The fight was over when I hit Willard in the first round with my left hook. I knew it at the time. And the finish proved my conclusion.

I didn't bother much with Willard's stomach because he was such a cinch for either left or right to the jaw. After I hit him once his punching power was gone and I had nothing to fear. It was only a question of time, and that time would have been the fourth if the ragged, old towel hadn't come crumpling into the ring.

Former World's Heavyweight Champion.

TOLEDO, O., July 5.

I HAVEN'T an excuse in the world to offer. The better man won in a hard, fair fight. The pitcher went to the well once too often. Youth was served.

In the advantages of weight, reach and stature given to me by nature, I believed I was invincible.

I learned my mistake yesterday as Jeffries learned his in Reno. Perhaps it would have been better if I had trained differently, but I don't think so. I assumed full responsibility for my own training, for the direction of my fight and for everything connected with it. There is not a precaution I could think of that I failed to take. I had a loyal group of men around me and they served me devotedly up to the last.

I can't remember exactly when I began to slip. It must have come with Dempsey's right to the jaw early in the first round. After that I was dazed and could not get my bearings. Once in a while I felt my head clearing and instinctively stuck out the long left that had served so well in previous fights. When I saw my opponent slipping easily past that protection and felt him pounding my body I realized for the first time that unless I landed a lucky blow I would surely lose.

I did try again and again to land such a punch, putting all of my ebbing strength into right uppercuts, but the luck was not with me and not one of these got home.

Then the loss of blood from my wounded eye commenced to affect me. My right was almost closed and was useless to me. I could see a dancing shape before me, but it was impossible to note its movements closely. My breathing became labored and apparently my nervous system became disorganized.

To all purposes the fight ended in the first round. After that I was merely in there fighting on my nerve. Ray Archer and Walter Monahan wanted me to quit long before I did. After the third round, when I felt my strength slipping away swiftly and surely I gave my consent to their action in tossing a towel into the ring.

As I say, I may have reduced too fast and too much. But I have not a single alibi in that respect. I would not say a word if I could to detract in the slightest from the glory won by Jack Dempsey. He fought a grand, fearless battle.

As for my future, that is something for tomorrow to decide. My heart was never in the fighting game. I was made a fighter. I have never had the fighting instinct nor the fighting temperament. I only was roused to fighting pitch in my previous fights after I had been hurt, and today I was virtually knocked out before I had fairly started.

I will probably go to my home in Chicago for a few days and later to my farm in Lawrence, Kan. After this, in all probability, I will be plain Jess Willard, citizen.

TOLEDO, O., July 5.

JACK DEMPSEY'S first left hook settle the world's championship. It was that wallop in the first exhibition or blows that slowed the big champion when he whipped it across. A moment later Dempsey whipped over another that sent the champion to the mat. I could feel the floor of the arena shake as he hit and saw the dazed look Willard had on his face as he realized that his crown had gone glimmering.

I started to count over him, while Dempsey, coolly heeding the instructions I had given him before the bout started, stepped back. When I reached the count of six the champion started to come out of his daze and slowly clambered to his feet, only to be met by another onslaught of the challenger. This time Jess tried to fight back, but his famous left went sliding over Dempsey's shoulder and the challenger went crashing into him, sending him down again. I counted five on this occasion. Again it was the wicked left that turned the trick. When Jess was on his feet again he was a pitiful spectacle. His right eye was almost closed and he was bleeding from the mouth. On his feet again, the champion tried to hang on. Dempsey was excited and tried to push him away. I had to tell them to break and then pull at both of them before they cleared, and Dempsey wasn't doing the holding. He looked appealingly to me to keep the champion clear, so that he could tear into him, and when I broke them there was a smash and I was over Willard counting again. He said something which I took to be a request for a louder count. I shouted four, and Jess was up again.

Once more I was forced to count five over Willard before the break which nearly ended the fight in a riot. This occurred in a neutral corner when Willard was bleeding profusely from the mouth. His breath was coming in jerks that I could hear. Dempsey had downed the big fellow and I was counting over him. Suddenly I heard a shout and glancing at the timers I saw them waving and shouting. The bell had rung for the end of the round but I hadn't heard it. I was counting seven when I made out the shout that the round was over. I waved Dempsey to his corner and called for some one to help Willard. I saw the crowd rushing toward the ring. They all thought the fight was over. Dempsey's second thought the same thing. Dempsey was hurried from the ring. I had trouble getting them back together. Dempsey's manager thought the same thing.

It was the tightest corner I was ever in during my ring experience. I finally explained things and the timers secured a whistle.

In the second round Dempsey held back, but was shaken by two short right crosses. the steam was all gone out of Willard and his punches did not carry a knockout.

At the start of the third, Dempsey started after the champion. Jess' mouth was bleeding again. I saw that the fight couldn't go more than four rounds then when Willard went to his corner he was all in. The tossing of the towel didn't surprise me but I never would have stopped it unless the judges had warned me to. That Willard was taking a licking was outstanding, but to have stopped the fight would have been a most unsatisfactory ending. I'm glad the towel was tossed in. It showed excellent judgment and saved the champion from making a worse spectacle of himself.

How a New Heavyweight Champion Was Crowned at Toledo Independence Day

"GREAT FUTURE IS BEFORE DEMPSEY," WILLARD DECLARES

Defeated Boxer Says That if Utah Boy Needs Backing He Would Help Him—Could Whip Any Living Man.

By John E. Wray.
Sporting Editor Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., July 5.

SORE in body and sick in spirit, former heavyweight champion Jess Willard still had enough human sentiment left to say a kind word for the young giant killer who yesterday twice virtually knocked him out and deprived the Pottawatomie Goliath of his world's championship crown.

Willard was not visible to the army of newspaper correspondents who besieged his residence, but one of his entourage quoted him as saying a few nice words about the 24-year-old package of T. N. T. that dethroned him.

"I hope Dempsey steers clear of the pitfalls that lie in the way of all successful pugilists, especially young ones," Willard commented. "He has indeed a great future if he takes care of himself. If he ever wants backing I think enough of his ability to help him myself. Dempsey has fighting spirit and the power to whip any living man, and I say this because no man ever before was able to do to me what Dempsey did."

Much Unpleasant Comment.

Despite the spirit of fairness shown in this estimate of his opponent's ability, Willard today was the subject of much unpleasant comment on the part of those who saw the fight yesterday. In a measure, this may be viewed as a recording vengeance and the unpleasant harvest of what he himself sowed as world's champion.

Half the writers who sat at the ringside, and most of the spectators were denouncing the former champion for "quitting." With frank brutality they asserted that the quivering, bleeding hulk that squatted dazedly on his chair after the third round of yesterday's terrible slaughter, should have staggered to the center of the ring and taken the coup de grace. The thought is inhuman, for never has a worse punished champion been seen in the ring.

Little sympathy is expressed for him, however, and his worst detractors today are those who supported him prior to yesterday's fight. "Yellow," "quitter" and "joke" are some of the epithets hurled at him.

Willard a Disappointment.

So passes Willard, the most disappointing world's champion of all time. A man who had never done anything prior to winning his laurels, who took the title from a middle aged old darky 30 pounds overweight and who surrendered while still conscious to a young fighter, whom he outweighed by more than 50 pounds.

During his career as champion he never defended his title in a decision fight, prior to yesterday's contest; he fought but one no decision contest and paid no attention to the demands of the public that he risk his honors. His interest in the game was commercial and that he capitalized his victory over Johnson for nearly $500,000 without risking his laurels, but once is testimony that if he is not a world's champion fighter, today, he still is the ring's world's champion money getter.

Willard, like his wife seems to be glad that he is out of the pugilistic career for which he was so poorly equipped. Jess was a "made" fighter. His size alone recommended him and his first contests were jokes. Yesterday was not the first time he quit the ring refusing to continue. Jimmy Bronson, of Joplin, who refereed Willard's bout with Joe Cox several years ago, has several times told how the leviathan crawled through the ropes refusing to continue, after six rounds of punishment had been handed to him.

Refused to Help Soldiers.

Willard stepped on the corns of the soldiers by refusing to take part in many boxing benefits, although he did help out more than most fight followers believe. Several army newspapers have carried editorials scoring the champion heavily and asking all soldiers to remain away from the title contest. The worst mistake his managers made was in wiring to President Wilson volunteering to aid in army work and then, called upon to make good letting Jess back out offering excuses that he was too large and too old.

At no stage of his career, with the exception of the Havana fight, has he given the public its money's worth or done anything pugilistically to create a popular following. His downfall caused little more regret than the overthrow of Jack Johnson.

"What will he do with it?" is the question on every lip here, today, in connection with the Colorado mountain lion, Jack Dempsey, and his recently acquired world's heavyweight championship title and the belt that goes with it. Will he put his new honors in escrow for four years, while he "cleans up" financially; or will he defend his honors when challenged by responsible men, as befits a real fighting man's pride in his high[illegible]?

Would Fight at Any Time.

Jack himself is willing. He would fight at any time, any place, if the honor or even a little money were involved. He is a fighter first and a money getter afterwards. In contrast to the lumbering Goliath whom he overthrew here yesterday, his heart is in the game and his instinct is for conquest. He is the first heavyweight champion since John L. Sullivan's day to embody all the essentials of an ideal fighter. Heart strength, punching power, enough skill and wonderful speed. These unite in him to make a real king of the ring.

The graying veteran, William Muldoon, said today that Dempsey reminded him of John L. when Sullivan was 25 years old, but other old timers who saw Dempsey yesterday thought that John L. in his heyday was a mere posing roughneck compared to this swordfish of a Dempsey.

With the desire to fight, and the ability as well, there are still two things that may keep Dempsey from the ring for some time to come. One is his manager, Jack Kearns, who may elect to glean all the rich financial fields before him; the other is the lack of opponents capable of giving him a real fight.

Dempsey Investigating Contract.

Not again will the public pay $60 a seat and as much more in other expenses to see a broken old hulk quit in three rounds, even though they call it a championship.

The money end of the game has already thrown its lure about the Dempsey camp. Contracts involving $120,000 for 12 weeks' work have already been tendered. Dempsey and Kearns are now investigating their reliability. No doubt, the vaudeville, the motion picture and even the circus promoter will be after Dempsey, and it would be superhuman in his handlers if they resisted the lure of gold.

It is unlikely that Dempsey will be seen again in a title fight for a year. For at present there is none to face him. Fred Fulton, Billy Miske and Willie Meehan are the three men who naturally come in for consideration. Kearns said today that Dempsey would not only defend his belt, but would take on any or all of the men named if the inducements were made right.

Miske gains first attention because he is the fighter who twice has faced Dempsey in 10 and six round contests without having been torpedoed. Willie Meehan has fought six four-round fights with Dempsey and has gained two decisions over the present title holder, three draws and once he was out-pointed. The memory of his fights with these two men is not pleasant to Dempsey now that he is champion, and no doubt he will some day be brought to close quarters with them.

Fulton Can Be Considered.

Fred Fulton is the third fighter who can be considered as a possible title opponent of Dempsey's by reason of the fact that he was stopped in 20 seconds of their encounter. Fred "howled watch" after this contest, and said that his defeat was due to a "double cross." It was due to a right cross following a left to the head, as we get it.

However, there are great men who held that the doubt about Fulton's status in the championship world ought to be cleared up through a second match with the champion. Dempsey has no fear of any of this triumvirate. The probabilities are that not one of the three can be lured into the ring with the champion for a long contest. Miske might clinch his way through a short fight, but Meehan has nothing back of him except some tricky shiftiness. He is totally devoid of any punishing punch. Fred Fulton twice all but flattened him in short fights, and Dempsey would surely reach him in 10 rounds.

Kearns Eliminates Carpentier.

Georges Carpentier has practically been eliminated from the field of contenders by Manager Kearns, who said that he placed no confidence in the reported $50,000 offer of the National Sporting Club. This bout would be a mistake from a fight standpoint, although the fact that the opposing fighters represented different nations might lend some glamor to it. Carpentier is simply not in Dempsey's class and his record reveals this fact plainly. He is reported a shell shock victim and not fit for further ring campaigning. Unless some new heavyweight unexpectedly comes up to dispute Dempsey's throne with him there is a strong possibility that Dempsey will face nothing but easy marks.

At the age of 24, when the primrose path lures, Dempsey is facing a danger of decline and disintegration for want of ring activity and over popularity.

Ollie Pecord, the Toledo Boxing Commission's referee, came in for some very severe criticism at the hands of the experts for his method of handling the first round. Pecord is accused of having Dempsey to win the fight twice, although the responsibility would seem to be divided.

Forest Park Golf Favorites Tumble Early in Tourney

Bockenkamp, Lynch, Manion and Conway Eliminated in Title Affair.

WHOLE BROCK TEAM OUT

Koob, Kossman, Pep and John Manion Surprise Public Links Rail Birds.

Upsets in form came thick and fast in the first round of match play of the Forest Park Golf Club championship tournament over the 18-hole public course in Forest Park, Friday and yesterday.

Each of the four members of the team that represented the club in the Brock Trophy competition at the recent Trans-Mississippi tournament met with defeat. These four players were generally supposed to form the title squad of the club. The first round probably resulted in a greater "dope" reversal than has ever occurred in the municipal competition.

Even Frank Lynch, who only a wee kago established a course record with his 73 qualifying card, had to bow to a lesser famed opponent. George Koob won over the medalist, but only after 20 holes of strenuous play.

The second tumble in form occurred when John Manion defeated his brother, James, 4 up and 3. James has held the State title, club title and municipal title, but yesterday his titleless brother took him into tow rather handily.

Bockenkamp Eliminated.

Richard Bockenkamp, the 18-year-old youth who was runnerup in the T-M and Western tourneys, was no exception. Walter Kossman put Bockenkamp out of the running by a one up victory. The fourth member of the Brock team to lose was Fred Conway, who went into the Consolation Class by a three to one count, with Pep doing the counting.

Other results in the championship play were as follows: R. C. McMahan defeated C. B. McQuoid, seven and six; L. J. Hamel won from Paul Buesse, one up, 19; C. P. Roan defeated John Pepp, three and two; Frank Donovan won from E. Reagan by default.

The second round of match play will be held today.

DEMPSEY COULD HAVE DEFEATED WILLARD AT BEST

have beaten this fighter, condition or no condition. No man could have taken what Willard received and survived and the miracle is that he lasted as well as he did.

Although Dempsey purposely was cautious in the early seconds of the fight, Willard did not deliver the stuff that he had been showing in training camp. His blows absolutely lacked steam. It was as though caution or fear had robbed them of their power. His uppercut, which he twice landed on Dempsey fairly, did not have any of that lifting power which marked his training camp exhibitions. Willard's record nowhere shows that he possesses an alarming punch, and the fight yesterday upheld his record.

Dempsey crossed the Willard camp in one respect—he was far from being the shining mark for Willard's blow that had been predicted. He did not rush in head down as he had done against big Bill Tate in his practice workout and Willard's constant practicing to meet this form of attack was therefore wasted. Dempsey did no rushing until his man was helpless, but cautiously felt his way round like a man looking for the right opening.

Willard's condition, age and absence from the ring all figured in his defeat, but only in a minor way. Perhaps a few fights immediately prior to the title bout would have lent confidence and steam to his punches. Perhaps condition and youth might have enabled him to last a little longer. But it would have only prolonged the inevitable and caused the champion to take more punishment and succumb a little later in the fray.

Jack the Giant Killer wielded the bigger stick that won the fight.

St. Louis was strongly represented at the fight.

Left Hook to Jaw in First Round Won World Title for Jack Dempsey, Says Edgren

By ROBERT EDGREN.

TOLEDO, O., July 5.—Fighting with the fury of a bull dog tearing down a mastiff, Jack Dempsey knocked out Jess Willard here yesterday afternoon in one round. The second round never should have been fought, and never would have been fought but for a series of amazing blunders caused by having amateur officials. Technically the knockout was scored at the end of the third round when Ray Archer threw the towel into the middle of the ring.

It was the most one-sided fight for a title ever seen in any ring. Willard, smiling and apparently confident, landed the first two blows before Dempsey went into him like a thunderbolt. Half a minute later the biggest of all champions was a reeling, battered bulk, dazed, smashed out of all resemblance to anything human. The effect of Dempsey's blows was startling. They landed so fast the eye could hardly follow the flying gloves.

At each crunching, crashing clout Willard's face was changed as if Dempsey were a sculptor dissatisfied with a portrait in clay and deliberately obliterating its feature by feature. Cuts and huge bruises showed every time Dempsey's hand snapped back to position for another drive. Carl Morris in Madison Square Garden in the tenth round with Flynn, Battling Nelson in the fortieth with Wolgast at Port Richmond, were no more terribly beaten than Willard in a single round with Dempsey.

Has Shown the World.

Whether it was a one round fight or three, Dempsey has shown the world that he is one of the most remarkable fighters that ever clouted his way to a championship. He is of a new type. They were right when they called him a "bone crusher." He fights like no other champion. Beside his action in a real fight his training work was merely play. Cool when the fight was actually started, terribly grim and determined, he was like a bulldog taking his grip never to be shaken off. His speed was startling and his attack so sudden and furious that nothing could stop it. Yet when Willard rallied for a moment Dempsey stepped toward him. Pantherlike, he feinted and stepped aside to make Willard follow and leave an opening. He was not simply a plunging, battering fighter. He was cold, calculating and sure of the effect his blows would produce.

It was just four minutes before 4 o'clock Dempsey stepped into the ring, accompanied by his training staff, who were to second him. Dempsey was pale under his deep coat of tan. His face looked drawn and he was evidently under an intense nerve strain. But he took his corner immediately and sat down, while Bill Tate raised a big green umbrella over him to protect him from the sun.

"Goose Flesh" on Legs.

Within a few seconds Willard came into the opposite corner and stood there leaning against the ropes. Like Dempsey, Willard was pale. Close to him, I saw that the "goose flesh" showed on his legs and when he stood still there was a slight twitching of the muscles of his thighs. I could see the throb of his heart under the tight-drawn skin that covered his ribs. He stood in the corner looking around over the crowd and in a moment the signs of nervousness disappeared. A sun shade was raised over him, too, and he stood there at ease, leaning against the ropes and looking around the ringside to nod and smile at his friends. Willard was a picture of a trained athlete. On the outside, at least, he was a perfect specimen of a man.

There was a striking contrast between the men. Willard, huge, fair-skinned, slightly browned by the sun, smoothly muscled, might have been some ancient Greek Apollo come to life. He was still smiling his friendly smile. Confidence, smooth, smiling confidence, radiated from him. He seemed pleased that he was about to give an exhibition of his skill.

But Dempsey was entirely different. He was the fighter, from the squarely set feet of him to the lowered head and scowling brow. He was burned black by the sun, like some fighting aboriginal from some strange savage land under the equator. He was indescribably grim, unsmiling. He stood squarely facing Willard, legs slightly spread, broad shoulders hunched, arms drawn up as if he was already preparing to launch the blows that were to beat Willard down. His eyes were staring straight ahead. Willard had smiled around at the crowd. Dempsey saw only one man, and that was the man he must beat. It seemed to me that he didn't even listen to the instructions of Referee Pecord, and that he went to his corner reluctantly to await the ringing of the bell that was to begin the fight.

At last they stood there in opposite corners. Dempsey was still staring straight at Willard, head lowered. Willard was staring at Dempsey, eyes drawn to narrow slits. The smile was gone.

After a delay because of a poor bell, they were together. Willard jabbed Dempsey twice. The champion was standing straight up, smiling again and staring easily. He didn't put much behind his jabs, and Dempsey hardly noticed them. Dempsey was crouching and moving swiftly. As Willard advanced Jack turned and stepped swiftly away to draw Willard on, turning like a flash to meet him. Willard stopped. Again Willard stepped forward and Dempsey turned half away, only to whirl and slip close under Willard's left arm and drive a terrific right hook to Willard's side just over the heart. Instantly Dempsey stepped away. Over Willard's ribs a round red mark showed where Dempsey's crushing blow was landed.

Blow Cuts Eye.

Annoyed, perhaps, because his careful guard had failed, the big champion stepped forward apace and, missing a jab, followed with a short right that landed lightly and didn't move Dempsey's lowered head back an inch. Twice more Jess jabbed and tried a short right as they closed, but without hitting Dempsey effectively. Dempsey swiftly turned away again, flashed back and leaping in drove a solid right squarely into the pit of Willard's stomach before the big fellow could make a move to defend himself. The blow brought Willard up standing and in an instant, while their bodies were almost touching, Dempsey whipped that curving left overhand blow over Willard's lowered arms and caught him on the right eye. It was the same blow that stunned Fulton and made him easy for a first round knockout. It didn't put Willard down, but it settled the outcome of the fight then and there. The effect of it was as if Willard had been struck with a hammer. His eyebrow was gashed and in an instant the eye and the whole side of his face puffed out of shape.

Then Dempsey cut loose with the full fury of his attack. He no longer turned deftly to avoid Willard's punches and draw him on. Standing close, toes square to the front, balanced on both feet and leaning in, he hit as fast as he could hit with both hands. The gloves crashed on body and jaw. Startled, amazed, 50,000 spectators gasped at the sight of Willard beaten back along the ropes, beaten across the ring, reeling, trying with bulk and strength to stand up before that cyclonic furious rush.

Willard was being beaten down like anyone of the 20 men Dempsey has knocked out in a single round. The champion was being beaten down. He was reeling backward, weaving from side to side as no Fitzsimmons and no Ketchel weaved. Shifting lightly, Dempsey at last threw all of his splendid youthful strength into a crashing right, caught squarely on the chin. Willard fell with a thud. His right eye was closed. His left was popped wide open. In stunned realization that at last he had been knocked down, that a referee was counting over him, that he was being knocked out of the world's championship.

Dempsey Is Cool.

Dempsey stood back, not dancing, not eager, not excited. Pecord counted seven and Willard pushed his great bulk up from the floor and was on his feet, but he was no longer towering. He was bent over, crouching, reeling back and Dempsey was after him, driving blow after blow, taking no blows in return, grim fury in his set face and scowling brows, the power of a kicking mule in his flying fists. Willard was tossed back by blow after blow. Nothing human could have stood against the storm. He was game enough, but what good was gameness when every blow threw his head back until his neck nearly snapped and his huge bulk shook like an oak with the woodman's axe at its roots.

Willard went down again, and again and again. Each time he touched the floor and rose more slowly and heavily. The first knockdown was in Dempsey's corner. If the spots where Willard fell were cut from that ring canvas there'd be little left. At the end of the round he was down in another corner and the count had reached seven again when Timekeeper Barbour blew the whistle and tinkled the gong desperately and everyone near Barbour shouted to Pecord that the time was up. Pecord waved Dempsey to his corner and stopped counting.

Men leaped into the ring from every side. Seconds reached Willard and dragged him, half conscious, to his chair, to work on him frantically. Pecord followed Dempsey and laid a hand on him, and Jack Kearns wildly excited exclaimed to Dempsey that it was all over. Dempsey looked around and stepped from the ring to run to his dressing room. The whole crowd was on its feet. Men were in the ring. Willard's seconds were trying to revive him. Pecord was trying to clear the platform.

Barbour, eyes on his $500 watch, tinkled the bell and nobody heard it. He blew the whistle. In the roar around the ring that was lost, too. Pecord, running around, was shoving everyone out of his way. Confusion everywhere except in Willard's corner. There faithful Jack Hempel and Walter Monahan were working hard to revive the champion, and Willard, smashed, bloody, stirred to consciousness and sat up. Smelling salts were shoved under nose. Someone flagged Dempsey, who rushed back into the ring. Barbour was tinkling and blowing the whistle, and waving to Pecord. The second round was beginning, and still Willard sat in his corner and Dempsey, just back in the ring, stood irresolutely, hardly knowing what to do, and so, when more than two minutes had elapsed since the fallen champion was dragged to his corner, Willard stood up and walked unsteadily across the ring, hands in position, ready to fight again.

To the amusement of the crowd Willard refused to fall. His head was driven back and his distorted face became more distorted under the punishment, but he was going in. His one open eye glared with desperation. He crouched and hit with all the strength that was in him.

Willard's uppercuts drove Dempsey's head back again and again as they came together. Willard jabbed and hit as best he could, but the strength had gone out of him with the terrific battering of the first round. There wasn't a knockout in his big arm and solid fist, no matter how he landed.

Willard Makes Stand.

I have said in previous articles that Dempsey was overtrained. There's no doubt about it. Under the mauling and the strain of trying to put Willard down to stay he weakened and Willard began to fight better. It even seemed possible that through sheer desperate courage he might recover. But he was in fearful shape, his right eye closed, the whole side of his face puffed out, his mouth opened as he gasped for breath. Dempsey steadied himself again, sidestepped and turned away, only to flash back with deliberate blows that shook Willard, no matter where they landed. Willard was desperate now. He felt the championship being torn from him. He knew his only chance was to land one blow that might put Dempsey down, and he tried, with all the heart that was in him, walking in without defense, hitting wildly, landing now and then but almost always being driven back by Dempsey's faster traveling fists.

He was hurled on the ropes, to hang there while Pecord began to count again, for Willard's arms were down and his gloves on the floor. It seemed impossible for him to recover this time, but he did, and at the end of the second round Willard was fighting still. He caught Dempsey with a hard left on the jaw and Dempsey's knees bent. He caught him with rights, straight rights and uppercuts. Dempsey was weary of the putting that huge bulk down.

There was one minute's rest after this round. Barbour blew the whistle and Willard came out, a pitiable sight, to meet the worst that Dempsey could do to him. I'll say that whatever else Willard may be, he is game.

Dempsey Tries for Knockout.

Jack Dempsey has Indian blood in his veins, quartered with the Scotch and Irish, but I think that he pitied Willard, and tried to end the fight without hurting him any more. He started this time with deliberation; there was only cold calculation in the blows he struck. Perhaps like Fizsimmons, he thought a knockout the most merciful thing. Again and again he landed clean punches on Willard's chin, and Willard, who had rallied, slowly, lost his speed, and could only paw out blindly. Dempsey had him in a corner, and with the utmost deliberation measured him for the knockout blow. When he landed Willard held his feet. He lunged forward, and struck out with all the strength he had, still trying to put over one hard blow.

Dempsey hammered him back, and followed close. Willard was a fearful sight. Reeling around the ring, he sunk finally under a storm of blows, to sit on the floor looking up at the grim destroyer who stood looking down at him. There was no joy in Dempsey! He was just plain fighter, a victorious bull dog would have had more expression, and there the round ended. Again Willard was helped to his corner. His seconds were around him with smelling salts and all the rest of it, and the crowd around the ring was shouting to Pecord to "Stop it."

Pecord might have acted if Willard had come up again, but Ray Archer, his friend and adviser, turned and tossed the water soaked, bloodstained towel of defeat into the middle of the ring. The fight was over, and Jack Dempsey was champion of the world.

This time Dempsey stayed in the ring, while a mad rush of admirers tore down the press benches and overturned the writers who sat at them. Willard, reeling to his feet, walked heavily across the ring to where Dempsey stood, reached out and took the new champion's hand. He tried to smile.

"When I Picked Jess to Win I Thought He'd Have Two Eyes to See With"

Ring Lardner Says Jess Should of Practiced Falling, as He Certainly Looked Awkward—Advises Carpentier to Stay in France Until New Champion Dies.

By Ring W. Lardner.

BAY VIEW ARENA, TOLEDO, O., July 4.—Well, gents, here is Ring at the ringside and the battle all over, and it didn't last long, but at that Willard thought it lasted a week. I don't know what he is going to do tonight, as he can't read on account of his eyes being shut and he couldn't see a show if he went to it and he don't care for music. Maybe he can have a good time thinking about that 100,000 berries, which is more comfort than I can get. But at that, I don't know if I would of took what the big fellow got for any such pin money as that.

I spose you gents will want me to kind of explain how I came to pick Jess to win the fight. Well, gents, it was just a kind of practical joke on my part, and to make it all the stronger I went and bet a little money on him, so pretty near everybody thought I was really in earnest. As a matter of fact, I knew all the while that Jack would knock him for a gool. You can't expect a man 37 years old to lick a man 24 years old. Beside, I kind of felt all the time that Jess wasn't in no shape to put up a fight. He didn't train right, and he ought to of practiced falling down, as he certainly looked awkward when he tried it the first time.

The experts around here told me the big fellow went to the mat seven different times in the first round, but personally it seemed to me like he went down just once and stayed down for the duration of the war. He was still down yet when the gong rang and a lot of people said the bell saved him. I would say the bell ruined him, as it made him go out there for two more of them awful rounds. Well, they was such a noise going on when the gong rung that they couldn't nobody hear it, and who ever was keeping time had to tell Referee Pecord that the round was over. The general public, including Mr. Dempsey, thought the big fellow had been counted out, and one fat gentleman jumped up into the ring and kissed Jack on the cheek, so you can't say the new champion didn't take no punishment.

Well, as soon as Dempsey had recovered from the kiss, he climbed down through the ropes and started home, thinking the afternoon's amusement was over, and Manager Jack Kearns had to chase him and bring him back to finish the job. At this stage, I offered Geo. McManus my bet for 10 cents, but he was deaf on that side.

Now, just a word about the big fellow, gents. When a bird gets knocked for a gool seven times in one round, and comes back and took what Jessica took for two more rounds, you can't exactly call him yellow. After seeing what he went through I would say Fred Fulton was Lucky. During the second and third Jess did not know if he was in Toledo or Lawrence, Kan., but wherever he was he stayed there and tried to enjoy his visit. And another thing you can't say, and that is that the big fellow wasn't in condition. If he hadn't been they would now be naming his honorary pallbearers.

As for Dempsey, I have kind of changed my mind about him. Before I seen him fight I didn't know if he could or could not. Now I kind of think he can and if I was Georges Carpentier I would stay in France till the new champion dies of old age.

The regular experts will probably give you a description of the fight by rounds. Personally my mind works kind of slow and I couldn't keep up with what Dempsey done. The first thing that happened was Jess leading with his left. He didn't come close. Then he led again with his left and landed and Jack must of thought a flea had bit him.

About this time Jack took it into his head to do a little leading, and he landed with all five of his gloves at once. Next thing you know, the big fellow was setting on the carpet looking kind of half witted. His eyes was aiming in my direction, but he didn't seem to recognize me. Mr. Pecord begun counting out loud and Jess sort of woke up and acted startled, and he clumb up on his feet, but he didn't seem to like it so well standing up, so he tried setting on one of the ropes; this wasn't comfortable, so he got up again and stood a minute and then thought he better give the floor another trial. But no matter where he was, on his feet or on the ropes, he seemed uneasy. He finally got the idear in what was left of his head that maybe it wouldn't be so uncomfortable on the south side of the ring. Up to this time he had did all his setting down over near the northeast corner. Well, he started kind of edging around the west ropes and as I was setting three rows back I felt kind of nervous for the fear he would pick out my lap for his next resting place. Well, Dempsey knocked him down twice on the way around, but he didn't hit him as hard as he could and he stayed in the ring.

He dropped him a couple of times more when he got over to the South limits and the second time he went down over there he wanted to stay the rest of July, but as soon as Mr. Pecord made it known that the gong had rang Walter Monaghan and whoever else was his second, made him get up and take a chair. While he set there they throwed water on him and kept rubbing a sponge over his face, but they couldn't wipe off Dempsey's punches. Dempsey never knocked me down seven times in his life, so I don't know how the big fellow felt when they told him it was time to go out and take some more of it. Anyway he pretended like he was willing and maybe he figured Jack had already delivered 12 whole rounds of wallops and wouldn't have no more left. But they hadn't stood up there for more than a second when this here devil-dog completed the task of shutting the ex-Champion's right eye. Jess only seen half of the rest of that round. A couple of times Jack showed a little mercy, and hit the big guy in the tummy instead of the map. This must have been a big relief. By this time they was corpuscles splashing all over the place. Dempsey was all bluggy, but it wasn't his own. As for Willard's face it looked like they ought to of hung a sign on it saying: "Fresh Red Paint."

There wasn't nobody in Mr. Rickard's arena that would of bet a transfer that he could last through the round, but he held on some way mostly by either clinching or turning his back. The spinal punch must of been barred, becaused Jack never made no effort to smash him while he was looking the other way, but just the minute he kind of began to turn around to see where Dempsey was parked, Jack would take aim and fire at his jowls or the place where his eyes used to be.

Personally, I think it would of been pretty good judgment for the boys in the big fellow's corner to of tossed in the towel a round sooner than they did, and it would of been even better judgment to of throwed it in right after Jess sat down for the first time.

Well, the third round was the second round's twin sister, only Jess didn't lose quite as much blood, as he didn't have as much to lose. They tell me that he found out along about this time that his jaw was broke. I don't know yet if it's true or not, but if he thought that he couldn't chew on a steak for a few days it's no wonder he got kind of discouraged. Anyway he hadn't been setting in his chair more than a few seconds after the third gong when Mr. Monaghan rose up and flang the towel in the general direction of midring.

The towel looked like it might of been raised in the old Pike House at Niles, Mich., but even a dirty towel means defeat.

Well, a bug that had been standing on my back and screaming, now thought it was about time to smash my hat, and everybody else seemed to go nuts at once, and for half an hour what I have nicknamed Pandemonium reigned. I am sorry to say that I didn't get a chance to see Maj. Biddle or Tex Rickard after the scrap to find out what their decision was, but I will take it on myself to say Dempsey had the shade.

Now gents, when I said the big fellow should ought to win, I thought he was going to have two eyes to see with. But something happened to one of them about two seconds after the two guys got together. A whole lot of experts had also told me that Jack was too little to reach Jess' features, but as far as I could see they wasn't none of them he missed.

It must of been a great sight for the ladies, as they couldn't of saw more blood if they had of went through the Union Stockyards. Nobody can say that the big fellow didn't have whole lot red blood in his veins before the battle, mother, as he left enough of it on Dempsey and the floor of the ring to stock a whole family of champions.

Well, when Walter Monoghan tossed the towel in at the end of round three, some bugs behind me that had also bet on him stood up on their hind legs and hollered quitter. Well, gents, if I had took what the big fellow took, why, even I would of quit.

At the hour of going to press maniacs of all kinds is up in the ring cutting off little pieces of rope to take home for souvenirs. Personally, I wouldn't give a nickel for a piece of rope unless it had been used to hang some bird for murder. And then it would have to have a few drops of blood on it before I would value it very high.

Sothoron Pitches Burke to 6-2 Win Over Fohl's Crew

Right-Hander Would Have Earned Shutout but for Gerber's Error in Ninth.

HI JASPER IS BUMPED

St. Louis Boy, Hurling for Cleveland, Is Found for Five Runs in 6 Innings.

Allan Sutton Sothoron turned in another flashy hurling exhibition for the Browns yesterday, and as a result, the Burkeviki broke their three-game losing streak by defeating the Cleveland Indians at Sportsman's Park, 6 to 2. It was Sothoron's fourth straight conquest and his third since the Browns returned from their extended road trip. About 7500 fans saw the victory.

Sothoron in the last four complete games he has twirled has permitted only eight runs, an average of two per contest. He also worked three rounds as a relief flinger, and handed the White Sox ciphers.

The right-hander, who is Burke's winning boxman for the season, had a shutout up to the ninth inning yesterday, when a wild throw by Walter Gerber off Harris' slow roller put him off on the wrong foot. The bobble was followed by two singles, and resulted in the lone markers for the Indians.

Sisler Plays Star Game.

Close to Sothoron as far as the limelight went, was George Hahold Sisler, Michigan graduate. Sisler pulled a play in the fourth at the expense of Larry Gardner that did not seem on the books. Gardner shot what looked like a sure single to right, but Sisler went over, scooped up the ball and with the same motion tossed to Sothoron on first, completing the play. Sisler also counted two hits and tallied a pair of runs.

Hi Jasper, St. Louis boy, was on hurling hill for the Fohlmen, but did not do very well, he being bumped for a run in the first round. Another St. Louisan, Harry Lunte, played short for Cleveland. He is covering the position because of an injury to Ray Chapman. Chapman has a strained ligament in his back and will be out probably for another month.

The Browns started off right at the very start. Ausin, first to face Jasper, punched a single to center and advanced on Gedeon's martyr death. Tobin came through with a smash to center, and Austin tallied. Sisler forced Tobin, but stole second. Williams, however, ended the frame with a bounder to Wamby.

Sisler Raps Out Triple.

For the next two frames the Browns were rather tame. However, they opened up again in the fourth, when Sisler slammed a triple down the right field foul line. Williams put down a mean hopper to Jasper and went out at first, Sisler scoring. The Indians, especially O'Neill, kicked on Chill's decision, but it did no good.

The real storm came in the sixth, when the Browns chased three markers over the plate. Tobin beat out a bunt and Sisler got an infield hit. Williams poled a double to right and Tobin crossed the rubber. Earl Smith's bounder to Wamby put Sisler over, while Williams tallied on a wild pitch.

Kenneth Williams' wide awakeness gave the Burkeviki their final run off Uhle in the eighth. One gone, Williams sent a single to center. However, when Tris Speaker loafed, Williams went down to second. He advanced a peg when Uhle threw wide trying to pick him off second and scored on Smith's infield out.

Gerber's Error Hurts.

Starting the Cleveland ninth, Harris went up for Lunte and hit a slow roller to Gerber. The shortstop fielded the ball cleanly, but threw wild and Harris was safe. Evans ran for him. Johnston singled, Evans going to third, while Johnston made second on the throw-in. O'Neill promptly singled the pair home. Thomas, up for Uhle, hit into a double play and Smith rolled out.

For the second game of the series today, Burke will likely send Carl Weilman to the hill. Guy Morton is due for the visitors. Play at 3 o'clock.

St. Louis-Kansas City Pair Win Women's Tennis Title

Miss Corinne Gould, Local Champion, and Miss Louise Hammann, Visiting Star, Capture Central States Doubles Championship.

The tennis championship of the Central States in women's doubles will be held jointly by St. Louis and Kansas City during the coming year. Miss Corinne Gould, the local champion, and Miss Louise Hammann, of Kansas City, defeated Misses Lottie Hagemeyer and Etta Roever of this city in the finals round match at Triple A, yesterday afternoon, 7-5, 6-1.

The 1918 championship was won by Miss Gould and Mrs. W. W. Yager of Los Angeles. When Mrs. Yager failed to enter last week's tourney, Miss Gould paired with the Kansas Cityan.

The first set of yesterday's play produced some of the hardest contested women's court play that has been exhibiting in a St. Louis tournament for many seasons. The contending teams were well matched, and as a result a great number of the points resulted in countless returns before being decided.

As the score will indicate the opening set was a gruelling affair. The first game went to the ultimate losers, but the count was immediately evened by the champions. Misses Gould and Hammann would then forge ahead, but their lead would be short-lived.

Local Team Falters.

After the set had been deuced, 5—5, by some clever playing on the part of Misses Roever and Hagemeyer, it seemed as if they would win out. However the local team slipped here, losing the two deciding games, 8 points to 1.

The loss of the first set apparently took the hearts of the losers as their play immediately deteriorated. They won the first game, but then became wild and banged the remaining six into the net and out of bounds.

The point score shows a total of 82 for the victors whereas the losing couple scored 63. Eight of the 21 games played were deuced. One of the contests in the opening set was 13 points to 11. It might be stated that the losers beat themselves rather than being beaten by earned points of the St. Louis-Kansas City combination. A small minority of the points were decided by other than faults.

The runnersup appeared to depend entirely upon defensive play. Their's was a lob attack when it did assume the proportions of an attack; but it usually was the scheme of attempted returning and placing. On the other hand, the champions stroked very often, showing a far greater knowledge in tennis tactics. Although Misses Gould and Hammann have played together only one week, they fell into line with each other's play and showed smarter team work.

Directed at Miss Hammann.

Early in the contest it was evident that Misses Roever and Hagemeyer had decided to focus their attack on Miss Hammann. Practically three of every four returns were directed at her. She faltered for a while under the concentration of attack and many of the lost points were attributable to her faults. However, it must be considered that she did not content herself with a mere ping-pong defense, but gave smash for smash and volley for volley. Later in the match she bore up and better than held her own.

The scores by games were as follows:

FIRST SET.

Gould-Hammann—

Roever-Hagemeyer—

Detroit Rally in Fourth Beats Sox

Ty Cobb Goes All the Way to Third When Faber Tosses His Bunt Wild to First.

CHICAGO, July 5.—Detroit staged a rally in the fourth inning today, and by bunching hits, one of which was a triple by Dauss, with a sacrifice, an error and a successful squeeze play, made enough runs to defeat Chicago, 6 to 3. The fielding of Young and Veach, and Cobb's base running when he went from first to third when Faber tossed his bunt wide to first base were features.

Schupp Relieves Dubuc in Ninth After Home Run and Two Singles.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—After Callahan hit a home run in the ninth and Baird and Meusel singled, Schupp relieved Dubuc and stopped Philadelphia's rally today, New York making it three straight, 10 to 8. After the locals tied the score in the fifth, Pinch Hitter King's double in the sixth put the visitors ahead again. Philadelphia tied the score a second time, but could not keep pace with New York's run making. Score:

BROOKLYN, July 5.—Brooklyn won two games from Boston today, 4 to 2 and 15 to 3. The first was a pitchers' battle between Pfeffer and Keating, the latter having the Superbas shut out until the seventh when they bunched four hits and a pass and took the lead.

Larry Cheney of Boston attempted to beat his former team mates in the second game, but was taken out after seven runs had been made off him with one out in the first inning.

Cincy Reds Pound Goodwin in First, Whip Cards, 8-4

Bolden Takes Hill With Sacks Loaded and First Ball Is Hit for Two Bases.

LUQUE GETS "BREAKS"

Rickey's Men Land on Cuban Frequently, but Hits Are Not Timely.

CINCINNATI, O., July 5.—Branch Rickey's men were more than glad to escape from Cincinnati. They didn't care to associate any longer with a crowd so inhospitable that they took 12 games out of 16 from the Cardinal tribe, and they were thankful that some considerable space of time will elapse before they meet the Reds again. Yesterday's game was another brick thrown by Pat Moran and delighted the local populace, especially as New York also won and a defeat would have shoved the Reds back quite seriously. The Reds won, 8 to 4.

If the Reds hadn't indulged in a wild orgy during the first frame, the battle would have gone into extra innings as a draw. That one inning was a crusher for the handsome aviator, Mr. Goodwin, and one of the toughest affairs of the season for him. After the Cuban cuckoo, Adolfo Luque, had retired the Cardinals in the first session, Heathcote made a dizzy catch off Rath. Daubert singled. Groh spotted the first pitch for a furious triple. Rousch stopped a wandering curve with his Indiana shape. Neale walked and Goodwin also walked—out and away from there.

Bolden Also Routed.

Bill Bolden, the pride of Tennessee, ascended the hill and Kopf combed his first offering for a two-bagger that sent in three people. Bolden, after this explosion, rested in peace for a little while. In the second, Luque singled, Rath sacrificed, Daubert broke out with a three-bagger. Exit, mourningly, Mr. Bolden. Lee Meadows replaced him, and got along nicely till the fifth. In this stanza Rousch saluted him with a two-masted biff and came all the way home on a wild pitch. In the sixth, Wingo singled, Luque sacrificed and Rath broke off a hit. Daubert planked one over third a mile a minute and sent in two runs, after which the Reds ceased bothering.

Luque was hit plenty, but unluckily. Nothing doing in the scoring line till the fifth, when Hornsby doubled and registered on a whack by Heathcote.

In the sixth the hits rattled like hail on a tin roof. Smith, Miller, Stock and Hornsby all belted the ball, the first pair scoring. Heathcote went up to drive in the herd, and would have done so if Quigley hadn't said "Three strikes" before the youth could select a pitch that suited him.

Ten Hits for 13 Sacks.

One more came in the eighth on Miller's booming triple and Stock's ground out. In all the Cards made 10 hits for 13 bases, but Senor Luque didn't give a pass. The Reds got only nine hits, but five free tickets were issued and one hit batsman found his way around.

Heathcote looked much better in right field than he ever did in center He faced the sun fearlessly, and made five nice catches, two of them real dazlers that cut off triples.

The Cardinals, when they realized that it wasn't pass day for Senor Luque, began banging at the first ball with much vigor. They converted several of the Senor's initial offerings into hits, but couldn't make much progress. Five of them fanned, three with the bases populated.

It was the most kickless game of the season. Even the birds that were called out on strikes squawked, not at the umpire, but at their own carelessness, and nobody started any walls that lasted half a minute. Perhaps the intense heat subjugated them.

Speaking of the heat, it was like a bake oven. A cake of ice, which was being carried to the Cardinals water cooler caught fire en route and was a total loss.

Before the battle Maj. A. J. Drexel-Biddle, who was judge at the big fight Friday, led a squad of Marines through a bayonet drill and mock raid on the trenches.

Farewell, Demon Rum.

THE curfew tolls the knell of parting booze
The gang leans sadly up against the bar;
Then slowly filing out by ones and twos
They hike for home aboard the owl car.

Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight,
And everything is silent as the tomb:
The corner buffet shows no beacon light,
And all the world is wrapped in solemn gloom.

Mayhap some red-nosed derelict may say:
"Alas! the melancholy days art come;"
His liberty is gone, but let me say,
No more he'll be a slave to Demon Rum.

The manacles that bound his hand and limb
And handicapped him in the race of life,
At last have all been stricken off of him
And he will be a factor in the strife.

So requiescat in pace, Demon Rum,
We'll dance a farandole around your grave;
Although his liberty is on the bum
To you no longer he will be a slave.

15 St. Louisans Entered in State Golf Title Event

Wolff, City Champion, Expected to Be City's Leading Contender for Honors.

TWO WOMEN TO COMPETE

Mrs. Dyer and Mrs. Corbett to Take Part in Kansas City Tourney Opening Tomorrow.

Only two entrants from St. Louis will compete in the Missouri Golf Association women's championship tournament to be held over the course of the Kansas City Country Club, starting tomorrow morning.

The local players to compete for the title are Mrs. George L. Dyer, Sunset Hill Country Club, and Mrs. James A. Corbett, Ridgedale Country Club. Both entrants have been prominent in local feminine links play for the past few years.

The qualifying round for the championship will be held in the morning; and a round of match play each day for the following four days. The title is at present held by Miss Carolyn Lee, a resident of Kansas City. During the three previous years, St. Louis players had won the championship. The total entry for the tournament is 100.

15 in Men's Tourney.

The local entry in the men's championship which will be held over the Mission Hills Country Club, Kansas City, July 9—12, is also smaller than usual. So far only 15 St. Louisans have sent in their entries. They are: R. B. Howd, Gilbert Candy, E. P. Richards and W. H. Whitton, Midland Valley; Bonner Miller and E. A. Limberg, Triple A; G. L. Dyer, Jesse L. Carleton and Eberhard Anheuser, Sunset Hills; Stuart Stickney, E. A. More and C. L. Holman, St. Louis Country Club; J. W. Ford Jr., Normandie; T. B. Boyd, Algonquin.

Stuart Stickney's entry was received over a week ago. Since then, however, he has stated that he would not play at Kansas City. His place as a championship contender will be taken by Clarence Wolff of Algonquin, city champion. Wolff's entry has not yet been received, but his assurance of playing has been.

Gov. Gardner Enters.

The entry of Gov. Frederick Gardner, as a representative of the Jefferson City Country Club, was received yesterday. O. R. Barnett, champion of the University of Missouri, will represent the State institution.

The entry list for the tourney has now almost reached the 200 mark. A large number of these players, however, are Kansas Cityans.

Bonner Miller, secretary of the State association, left last night for Kansas City, where he will prepare the final arrangements for the competition. All entries should now be sent to Bonner Miller, Muehlback Hotel, Kansas City.

Washington took the second game, 11 to 5, by scoring eight runs off Russell in the first inning after two were out, on six hits, including Menosky's home run and five New York errors. Score:

BASCOM BEATS SERRANO

Defeat of Former City Champion in Straight Sets Is Only Surprise of Day.

By Davison Obear,
State Field Secretary Western Lawn Tennis Association.

Twenty-nine singles matches were completed yesterday in the first two rounds of the twelfth annual Central States tennis tournament being played at the Triple A Club. With the exception of those in which visiting players take part all other first round matches will be played today. There are 92 players in the singles and the entry list includes all of the leading players in the city.

Only one upset occurred yesterday. Bill Bascom sprang a surprise by winning from Ed Serrano, former city champion, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—3. W. R. Schneider took the first set from Ed Harris, the Kirkwood star, at 6—4 and lost the next at 6—3. Harris finally won the third set 10—8 but was forced to the limit to take it.

Drewes, Josties and Wray Brown came through their first matches in easy style. Drewes won from J. S. Casey, 6—0, 6—2; Josties defeated Robert Jones, the Reservoir Park player, 6—1, 6—3, and Brown disposed of B. P. Bogy, 6—0, 6—1.

Of the 29 matches played only four took more than two sets. George Finger won from Al. Reiman, 6—3, 5—7, 6—0; Pasmore defeated W. H. Bronough, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4; J. L. Hawkins beat Gordon Fennel, 3—6, 7—5, 6—1, and Harris won from Schneider in three sets. Hollinshead and Lynn won the only two defaulted matches of the day.

A number of first round matches will be played today and probably a few second-round matches. Adoue and Rees, the Texas stars, will arrive Monday morning. The doubles will start Tuesday.

DOWNTOWN STORE BUILDING SOLD FOR $140,000

Famous-Barr Company Acquires Five-Story Structure at Southwest Corner of Broadway and Franklin.

MUTUAL BREWERIES SITE REPORTED SOLD

Real Estate in Vicinity of Grand Avenue Is Active With Businesss Property and Rentals in Big Demand.

By Berry Moore.

The chief event of the first week of July in real estate transactions was the acquisition by the Famous-Barr department store of the five-story building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Franklin avenue, formerly occupied by Schaper Brothers as a department store. The consideration was $140,000. The grantor was the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., which was represented by Cornet & Zeibig. Famous-Barr was represented by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co.

The building will be used as a warehouse for the Famous-Barr department store. It has a frontage on Broadway of 185 feet by an irregular depth of 100 feet and 135 feet, the former being along Franklin avenue. It is equipped with eight elevators and a modern sprinkler system. Title to the property was taken in the name of L. B. Sher, attorney for the Famous-Barr store, which is operated by the May Department Stores Co.

While the deed has not as yet been filed for record, it is understood that one of the foremost industrial concerns of the city has purchased the ground occupied by the Mutual Breweries at the southeast corner of Forest Park boulevard and Boyle avenue, and will improve it with an extensive plant. Negotiations were conducted through the Mercantile Trust Co., which has the exclusive agency of this block. R. King Kauffman, vice president and real estate officer of the trust company, is engineering this sale.

Has Track Facilities.

The site has a frontage on the south side of Forest Park boulevard of 400 feet by an extraordinary depth extending southwardly to the Wabash tracks, which provides the requisite shipping facilities for a plan on a large scale. It is surrounded by high-class manufacturing plants. The price paid in this instance, it is understood, was $200 a foot for the Forest Park boulevard frontage.

The northeast corner of Forest Park boulevard and Boyle avenue, 300x177 feet, is another site in the manufacturing center of Forest Park boulevard which is receiving decided attention from industrial interests having plans for new big plants. This site, which is owned by Herman C. G. Luyties, president of the Sanitol Chemical Co., is also listed with the Mercantile Trust Co. It is just north of the home of the Sanitol plant.

Soft drink purveyors are bidding freely for stores on central Grand avenue, including many places now occupied by saloons, which will eventually be closed, with the final enforcement of prohibition.

A record offer of $10,000 a year has been submitted for the ground floor space occupied by Halpin's drug store at the southwest corner of Grand avenue and Olive street, but negotiations, it is understood, are progressing favorably whereby the store will be at an annual rental of $12,000. This store occupies only a small part of a three-story building having a frontage of 50 feet on Olive street, and 150 feet along the west line of Grand avenue. The building comprises two other stores of similar size, used in one instance as a restaurant and in the other as a saloon. The owner of the property is Thomas Halpin, the pioneer druggist of this district. The upper stories are occupied as an apartment.

Realty Is Active.

There has been much activity in realty in this section of Grand avenue recently. A fortnight ago R. King Kaufman, vice president and real estate officer of the Mercantile Trust Co., sold the southeast corner of Grand and Lucas avenue, occupied by the Girls' Catholic High School, to the Missouri Theater Co. The site is to be improved with a theater structure, which it is understood, will be operated by the Famous Players Co.

Oreon E. & R. G. Scott, representing a client, purchased at partition sale Friday the property at 1103 Olive street, this being a five-story building at the northwest corner of Eleventh and Olive streets, owned by several heirs. The price paid was $75,250, as against $75,000 bid by the Mercantile Trust Co. on behalf of R. King Kauffman of the Mercantile Trust Co. on behalf of a client.

By virtue of the extraordinary provisions under which the sale was made, the Scotts' client will get half of the rental of the entire building, although the corner part of the building is supposed to be worth more than the inside or west half. All the elevators and the stairway are in the half purchased by Scott.

The heirs owning this property include Miss Halderman of New York, Mrs. Athana of New York, Mrs. Moore of London and Mrs. Jeremiah Murphy of Los Angeles.

Home in St. Louis County Bought by Grand-Leader Official

LEO C. FULLER, assistant treasurer of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., has purchased Edwin S. Pillsbury's home at 6444 Ellenwood avenue, in Skinker Heights, said to be one of the handsomest in St. Louis County. It has 12 rooms and three baths, a hot-water heating plant, and hardwood floors and finish throughout. The premises also include a modern garage.

The sale was made by Cornet & Zeibig, Ernest Edwards of that agency conducting the negotiations.

UNSOLD HI-POINTE LOTS TO BE ADVANCED IN PRICE TUESDAY

Ten Sites Sold During Past Week, and Ensuing Three Days Expected to Be Active Ones.

The Broadway Savings Trust Co., agent for Hi-Pointe announces that the 30-day sale of lots will close next Tuesday evening at which time all remaining lots will be increased $10 per front foot.

Since the start of this final sale many people have selected lots to take advantage of the advance in price, and last week 10 lots were sold.

It is expected that the next three days will be the busiest since the subdivision was opened, and all the remaining lots are likely to be sold before the closing of the sale.

The many attractive buildings under construction have added greatly to the value of the Hi-Pointe property.

PRICE ADVANCE NOTICE STARTS RUSH FOR AMES PLACE LOTS

Mississippi Valley Trust Co. Announces Plan to Finance Building of Homes.

As a result of the Mississipi Valley Trust Co.'s announcement that prices of lots in Ames Place are to be advanced after July 15, sales of sites in that addition have quickened. The remaining lots are now being offered at $52.50 a foot.

The trust company announces today that it has worked out a liberal plan by which it will finance the erection of homes in this addition.

The price of the lots includes the highest type of street and surface improvements, as well as all municipal advantages.

The plat is virtually an extension of Parkview and is ideally situated, with Washington University on the south.

EFFICIENCY BUNGALOWS ATTRACT HOMESEEKERS

Plans for Ten Modern Residences at Kenwood Springs Interest Many Families.

Hundreds of homeseekers visited Kenwood Springs Friday and Saturday to see the plans of the 10 efficiency bungalows to be erected in this subdivision by A. A. Fischer, architect and builder. Six bungalows have been sold from the plans. Construction will be started at once and completed within 60 days, according to present plans.

These attractive little homes are being offered on terms of $100 cash and $36.87 a month. They are to be financed by Herman C. G. Luyties, who subdivided and improved this tract on a handsome scale, as a haven for the salaried man or wage-earner. Through the philanthropy of Luyties, who has large resources, hundreds of families have been enabled to build homes in this verdant addition, which is beautifully embellished with trees and which has all improvements of the best type.

Plans for the proposed efficiency bungalows contemplate in one instance a modern building of five rooms, with seven-room efficiency. This will include a living room with an L extension available for a music or a lounging room, and containing what is known as a California couch bed. The bedroom will form a combination of a library, sun room and sleeping porch, with disappearing bed. The kitchenette will have a Pullman breakfast corner and built-in refrigerator.

Another plan shows four rooms with six-room efficiency. It includes a large living room, as in an apartment, a lounging room with a disappearing bed, also a full-size bedroom with disappearing bed, a kitchenette with a Pullman corner with built-in breakfast table and benches. This will have six-room efficiency.

The subdivision is rolling and the streets are oiled. It is on the Natural Bridge road, a three-minute walk north of Suburban Garden and is only a short way west of the site selected for extensive plants for the General Motors Co., which will give employment to not less than 25,000 persons.

The Bethesda Church has purchased a site in Kenwood Springs for a $30,000 edifice.

HIGHWAY MEETING NEXT WEEK

Scenic Road Division to Be Organized at Cape Girardeau.

A meeting will be held in Cape Girardeau July 15 for the purpose of organizing the south central division of the Mississippi River Scenic Highway, a tourist and military road stretching from Minnesota and St. Paul along the Mississippi River to New Orleans. Delegates from the territory adjacent to the projected route west of the Mississippi River will attend, each county being entitled to 10 voting delegates.

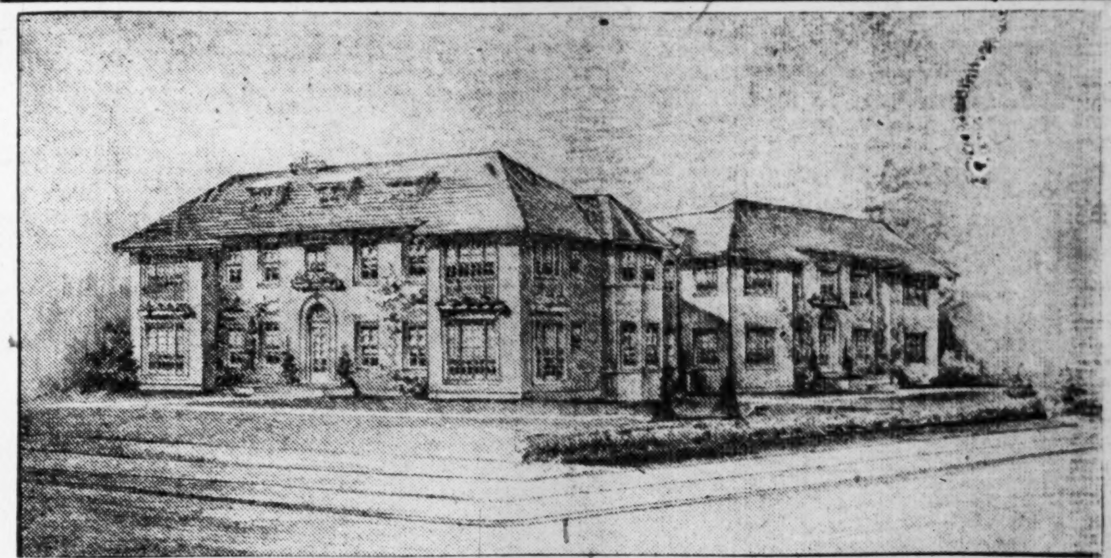
Financial arrangements have been made to finish the road to St. Louis, and the North central and Northern divisions are engaged in constructive work. A contest for the route by commercial organizations east of the river is expected.

Handsome Theater Nearing Completion at Grand and Florissant Avenues

THE Northland Theater, which is rapidly approaching completion at Grand and Florissant avenues, will be an attractive improvement for that intersection. It will have a seating capacity of 2285 and a stage equipped with all the requisites of a home for the spoken drama. It will be operated as a link of the chain of theaters conducted by the Greater Amusement Co., of which Sam Hamburg Jr. is the guiding spirit, and will be under the management of William and Maxwell Goldman, managers of the Maffitt Lindell Theater.

The corner store of the building, which is of attractive design, has been leased for a drug store and ice cream parlor, and negotiations are pending for other stores and rooms on that corner, the renting of which is under the management of the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co.

Camouflaged Group of Apartment Buildings for Hi-Pointe



HENRY WRIGHT, architect and landscape artist, has completed plans for a group of apartment buildings to be erected in Hi-Pointe, at the northwest corner of Clayton and Skinker roads, which will be an innovation in St. Louis. They will embody ideas gained by Wright while a member of the Town Planning Department of the Emergency Fleet Corporation of the U. S. Government.

As the perspective shows, these will be apartments building camouflaged as a high-class residence. Each will contain two apartments, with a living room, dining room, bed chamber, sun porch, sleeping porch, kitchen and bath. They will bristle with novel and attractive features and will be models for light and ventilation.

In the basement will be locker rooms for each tenant, laundry tubs and a large interior clothes-drying space occuping one entire half of the building. Single heating plant for each is well shut off from the remaining portion of the building. In the rear is a large playground for small children, and including, if desired, a croquet lawn. There also is space for four garages, which will be built and rented to tenants upon request.

The apartments will set well back from the street, the front being approximately 30 feet throughout, and this space is to be laid out in shrub lawn and walks.

The apartment, which will be completed by Oct. 15, will be under the management of the Broadway Savings Trust Co., represented by Charles De Largey, its real estate officer and director of operations at Hi-Pointe.

MAKES TRIP BY AIRPLANE TO CLOSE $250,000 DEAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex.—When William Livingston, head of the Livingston Oil Corporation, was in Fort Worth recently he received a telegram saying that his presence was urgently required here to close a big transaction that might be forfeited if he delayed coming even a few hours. It is 119 miles from Fort Worth to Wichita Falls. The morning train had gone and there would not be another until night. Why not go by airplane? He called up Capt. Will Erwin, an ace who had recently returned from France. Yes, it might be possible to get hold of an airplane, Erwin told him. They went to Barron Field and found a plane that was available for use. Mr. Livingston bought it and an hour and 30 minutes later was in Wichita Falls closing up the $250,000 transaction that had called him here. Mr. Livingston says that hereafter he will make all of his business trips by airplane. He has employed Capt. Erwin as his air chauffeur.

HI-POINTE

YOUR LOT WILL BE WORTH $10.00 PER FOOT MORE IN 3 DAYS

Letters Received From a Few of Those Who Sold at a Profit in Hi-Pointe

June 30th, 1919.

Broadway Savings Trust Company,
Broadway and Lucas Av., City

Gentlemen:—

I am enclosing herewith contract of sale of my two lots in Hi-Pointe which you will note I have approved. This sale nets me $10.00 per front foot profit on each of these lots, and I will be out Sunday to select two more lots before the rise in prices. Would suggest that you take my other lot, No. 21, off the market as I wish to build my home on this one.

Yours very truly,
ROY A. JACOBSEN

St. Louis, Mo., June 27th, 1919

Broadway Savings Trust Company,
700 North Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.

Gentlemen:—

I wish to acknowledge receipt of your check for the sale of my lot in Hi-Pointe. I owned this lot just six months and the sale netted me a profit of $400.00, or 100% on the amount invested.

I thank you very much for disposing of this lot for me and will be out to the subdivision within a day or two and will probably select another lot.

Very truly yours,
JOHN S. FLEMING, 3954A St. Louis Av.

Broadway and Lucas Av., St. Louis, Mo.

Gentlemen:—

I received your check today covering the sale of my lot on Clayton Road in Hi-Pointe and wish to thank you very much for your efforts in selling this property. I made $530.00 on my investment in a little more than five months and feel very well satisfied.

I wish you continued success in your enterprise, and remain

Yours very truly,
BERNARD P. SMITH, 2825 N. Union Av.

St. Louis, Mo., July 1st, 1919.

Broadway Savings Trust Company,
St. Louis, Mo.

Gentlemen:—

I just inspected Lot No. 7 on San Bonita Av. and wish to state that I will purchase this lot and hope I will be as fortunate with this one as the former one I owned. As you know I made $450.00 on that lot in five months and will be very well satisfied with the same profit on this lot. Please advise me when you will have deed ready, and oblige

Yours truly,
EDW. F. KERCHER, 7023 Berthold Av.

YOU HAVE 3 DAYS in which to purchase a lot that will positively be increased in value at least $10.00 per front foot.

This Is $400.00 Profit

On a Small Investment Within 3 Days

COME OUT AND STAND ON TOP OF THIS WONDERFUL HILL. On one side look over into beautiful 1400-acre Forest Park, which will be a perpetual playground for your children, and on the other side look right down over the top of Washington University, into the most beautiful residence sections of this City.

LOOK OUT TO THE WESTWARD for miles distant into the country, and you will immediately understand why this is called the most beautiful spot in St. Louis. You will understand why so many people have bought the first time they have inspected the property, and why the values have continually increased from the day the subdivision was opened up.

YOU WILL UNDERSTAND why no lot can be purchased from the different buyers without paying a substantial profit.

PEOPLE BOUGHT HERE TO BUILD THEIR HOMES AND LIVE, AND WILL ONLY SELL WHEN A BIG PROFIT IS PAID.

Five lots were sold last week at a profit of $10.00 PER FRONT FOOT.

INSPECT the splendid type of buildings that are being put up and compare the prices of these lots with lots of the same character to be had elsewhere in the city, and you will decide for yourself that the property is being sold from $15.00 to $30.00 per front foot below the real value.

THESE PRICES ARE POSITIVELY GOING UP WITHIN 10 DAYS, and your lot will be worth at least $10.00 per front foot more at that time.

IT IS A WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY WHERE YOU ARE ASSURED OF A PROFIT.

REMEMBER—$400.00 PROFIT WITHIN 3 DAYS

BUILDING IS CHEAP NOW

COMPARED TO THE FUTURE

Far sighted people are building now. Building prices are higher now than three years ago, but so are all prices. Wages are not going down, but up. Material shows the same tendency.

Every day you delay raises your building cost. Every day you delay makes it harder to get started. Every day you delay means that you are paying out more rent money.

Ask any architect, contractor or banker about the future of building costs. Ask any renter if he expects a reduction in his rent.

Look all over St. Louis—you can't find a ready-made house that will suit you. Therefore build, and build now. You will never do it so cheaply.

Build your home where the surroundings will do credit to it, where the restrictions are perpetual, where it is readily accessible and permanently worth its cost. There is only one such place in St. Louis. That place is

AMES PLACE

at $52.50 a Foot

Adjoining Washington University and Parkview
Between Pennsylvania and Kingsbury Boulevard

Contrast it with other ground and see for yourself.

And remember this. You can build an economical house on valuable ground but you can't build a valuable house on cheap ground. If its site is ill-chosen, you can never, never get the cost out of it either in living enjoyment or selling value.

After July 15th Not a Foot of Ames Place Will Be Obtainable at Present Prices

See Ames Place today. You will find our representative in the office at Pershing and Pennsylvania Avenues. He will give you full information in regard to lots for sale, restrictions and price per foot.

Financing Your Home

We have a liberal plan of financing your home in Ames Place. Pick out your lot and ask us to help you improve it.

RESIDENCES FOR SALE

WEST

A DELIGHTFUL HOME AND Business Opening for Sale

942 Laurel av., on high ground, healthful location, and no undesirables in this region. Street is asphalted, curbed, guttered and sewered, and has large forest trees on street line and in yards. Churches of all denominations, schools, movies and stores near by.

The lot is 33 feet front, extending back 125 feet to extension of Vernon av., only 200 feet west of Goodfellow.

Brick houses, 9 rooms, each having two or more windows; front and back stairs; oak stained floors; porcelain bath with good plumbing; Italian marble mantels; No. 48 American furnace; gas heater and hot-water tank in kitchen, also gas grate in dining room; large shelved kitchen pantry; marble sink in kitchen; electric showers and chandeliers, shades on all windows, also screens; a den at back end of front hall, well lighted and ventilated, with shelves for books, may be used for office or sewing room. Large front veranda, well shaded; large kitchen porch with concrete roof, with door from back hall on second floor, just the place for a morning sun bath or afternoon siesta; heavy copper guttering; well lighted basement with granitoid floor, having coal room, laundry, drying room, water closet, 18-inch walls, double 8-inch iron I-beam girders supported by heavy iron posts; one of rooms on third floor is 15x24 with 4 windows, just the place for billard table to keep your boys at home, or large enough for 4 beds if wanted for boarding your workmen.

This will make you a handy and pleasant home.

But the great value of this property lies in its location at the west end of Vernon av. This region of St. Louis is pre-eminently the homes of well-to-do people largely owning their own machines; probably 2000 autos pass daily on Goodfellow; these machines must be supplied with gasoline, oil and minor repairs. There is no auto repair shop in this vicinity.

On the back end of my lot I have a 2-story shop, 27x30 feet, under reconstruction for auto repairs.

The 200 feet on extension of Vernon av., from Goodfellow, west to my shop, can be largely used for parking waiting cars, thus making large grounds around shop unnecessary.

The proximity of shop to the house allows easy signaling after closing hours. It is one of the best stands for auto repair shop in the city.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

STRONG UPWARD DRIFT TO THE STOCK MARKET

Week's Gains Are Largely Influenced by Plans for Rebuilding France.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"This week's more or less tentative announcements, regarding the reconstruction plans of the French Government, and the engagements entered into by our own manufacturers, are highly interesting and significant signs of the times, but they need not have surprised anybody. The thing was certain all along, and the work was bound to be conceived on the very extensive lines indicated in this week's news.

"That the devastated districts of France and Belgium would be rebuilt, that it would be done as rapidly as material and labor could be obtained, and that the co-operation of our own manufacturers, on an important scale, would be absolutely necessary, everyone ought to have known before hand.

"Unhappily, it will never be possible to reconstruct in their former beauty the cathedrals, the town halls, even the quaint old peasant houses, on which the barbarian of our day laid his bloody and ruthless hand. But the ruined towns and cities must have dwellings in which to house their inhabitants; bridges, roads and railways must be rebuilt; the public offices must be housed again, and for all this there is a premium on quick work such as has perhaps never existed before.

The European Situation.

"Many people—not excepting some men of experience who have visited Europe since the armistice—have been mislead by the seeming lack of any initiative among people of foreign Governments. But that is not in the least remarkable. Until the German delegates had signed the treaty of peace, it was impossible to begin in earnest—partly because an adequate labor supply could not be commanded in advance of demobilization, partly because the financing of the enterprise was impossible with a state of war constructively in existence, and its renewal possible; partly because the indemnity had to enter into all interior plans. But the situation has now changed radically in all these regards, and the time has come to announce the program.

"Another preconception regarding the European situation has been that some Europeans are bankrupt, and therefore could not command the credit necessary to do the enormously costly work of reconstruction. But the short and convincing answer to this suggestion was that the work had to be done, that it had to be done at once, and that money invested for such a purpose in a country with industrious people and a settled Government is well invested, even according to the severest business test. Long before this European task is over we and every producing and manufacturing country in the world shall be competing to get a share in the contracts.

Outlook for Our Markets.

"Precisely what will be the effect on our own commercial, financial and industrial situation, it is not in all respects easy to see. Judging by all previous achievement, it is difficult to make out how, with their present facilities, our railways can carry to the seaboard, and the ocean fleet carry across the Atlantic, even the surplus of foodstuffs which we have produced and which are urgently needed in Europe.

"If to this there is to be added transportation of a great mass of American structural material, it is not too early to recognize a problem in the railway and shipping industries which may far overtop those of the one in 1917 and of the other in 1918.

"When (as must now happen very soon) the concrete plans for financing European reconstruction with American capital are unfolded, we shall be better able to judge whether or not the facilities of capital will be strained like the facilities of transportation.

"The cases are not in all regards identical. Advances of capital made to Europe will be reinvested in American production, thus creating new capital in America. But there will be this much of analogy. Just as the overcrowding of railway and steamship facilities with food and reconstruction materials for Europe may block the movement of ordinary trade and commerce, so the diversion of capital to this supreme purpose may leave the other branches of Government, speculation and investment with less than they had reckoned on.

"This cannot be surely predicted. The reservoir of American capital is at the moment unprecedented in magnitude. It may be said to have been overflowing for three months into the Stock Exchange. But we do not know to what extent this overflow occurred, because of delay in beginning this very work of placing capital at Europe's disposal, on a very great scale, which will make up the next chapter.

"Wide gains were scored by stocks on the week's trading, despite the July 4 holidays."

London Review.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, July 5.—In the city jubilation over peace has been restrained by the recognition that every country, not even excluding the United States, is now confronted with internal dissensions of various sorts arising from the upheavals of war. These may be aggravated by the inevitable effects of the aftermath of war on financial conditions. Moreover, it is impossible to tell yet whether the new German Government is able to insure the country's fulfillment of its treaty obligations.

"Germany's taxation program and resources are regarded here as sufficient to meet the requirements of the situation, if unity and order are maintained, but it is a big 'if.' Raising of the blockade will presumably follow immediately on the ratification of the treaty. Then, commodity prices are likely to rise further, with a consequent disturbing effect on Europe, while you are likely to benefit.

America's Problems Many.

"Nevertheless, despite indications of your prosperity, and the certainty that Europe's indebtedness to you will increase greatly during the next six months, it is recognized that you have your own problems, partly financial, partly political, connected with the magnitude of your commercial and financial undertakings.

"Our mania for 'nationalization' has received a salutary check through aroused public opinion. The transport bill has been greatly modified. Every nationalized undertaking is now showing a huge deficit.

"The precise character of your plans for financing Europe is not known here. It is assumed the War Finance Corporation, working with the Federal Reserve System, will undertake those cases where really long credits are required, while the Davis scheme will deal with conditions where shorter credits are needed. The task for both will be colossal.

"The progress of our loan has been handicapped by the absence of war enthusiasm and the demands for liquid recourses by general trade. Bankers have been embarrassed by trade demands coincident with the possibility of reduced deposits through loan subscriptions. Your plan whereby each Liberty loan meant the cancellation of short-term certificates of indebtedness has proved itself superior, insuring, as it did, a real zeal on the part of bankers, dictated both by patriotism and self inerest. Our markets's satisfaction over the reduction of outstanding Treasury bills has been lessened by the absence of ordinary commercial bills.

"Direct exchange dealings with Germany have not yet been resumed, though some German imperial notes have been dealt in recently at London."

NEW FIRST NATIONAL BANK TO OPEN DOORS TOMORROW

The new First National Bank of St. Louis, in enlarged quarters of the former Mechanics-American Bank and adjoining buildings at the southeast corner of Broadway and Locust street, will be opened at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. The bank has been formed through the consolidation of the St. Louis Union Bank, Mechanics-American National Bank and the Third National Bank. The capital and surplus of the institution total $15,000,000, deposits more than $125,000,000 and total resources in excess of $150,000,000.

The Broadway and Locust location, with 41,000 square feet of floor space, will be used as the temporary home of the bank until the proposed new structure at the northwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets, to be used exclusively by the bank and the St. Louis Union Trust Co., is ready for occupancy about Dec. 31, 1920.

Of the three institutions in the merger, the Third National Bank is the oldest. It was chartered as the Southern Bank in St. Louis by the General Assembly of Missouri for 1856-1857, with a capital of $1,000,000. The bank opened for business June 16, 1857.

DU PONT INTERESTS TO ENTER THE OIL INDUSTRY

NEW YORK, July 5.—Alexis I. du Pont and Charles Patterson, of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., with Sylvester D. Townsend Jr., attorney for these interests, Edward B. Rich and Simon L. Wolfe, well-known oil operators, have incorporated the Atlas Petroleum Corporation, with an initial capitalization of $5,000,000.

As nearly as can be learned, this is the first oil enterprise with which any of the Du Pont interests have become identified. It adds one more industry to the already long list of big corporations which members of the Du Pont family control or are heavily interested in financially.

The new company begins operations with producing wells, ample resources and over 37,000 acres of oil lands in West Virginia and Texas, completely equipped for an extensive development campaign.

It is understood that other large properties, including refineries, production and prospective oil lands are now under serious consideration, with the idea of making the present holdings merely a nucleus of a large independent developing, producing, refining and distributing unit.

ATTEMPT BY MEXICO TO BUY NEWSPAPER SUPPORT ALLEGED

State Department Studying Situation—Taking Advantage of Partisan Rows Suggested.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Reported attempts by the Mexican Government to purchase the support of American newspapers for spreading Mexican propaganda, in connection with a recent defense of Mexican policy toward American oil operators, issued by Gen. Candido Aguilar, son-in-law of President Carranza, have been called to the attention of the State Department. The situation is being watched by officials here. The Monterey (Mexico) organ of the Carranza administration, first to call public attention to it, said, in discussing the advisability of a propaganda campaign in the United States:

"Our chancellory should know all the details of this grave question, should sound all opinions and direct an active prosecution in the United States; this last is of the utmost importance. Not one thousand, nor one hundred thousand, but a million pesos, if it is necessary, should be spent in purchasing Yankee newspapers (there are those who will not refuse the business) so that they will defend us and in subsidizing writers of some prestige who will translate the arguments which our own chancellory will give them. It is necessary to prepare in the very bosom of the United States a great part of public opinion in our favor, taking advantage in order to do this of the political divisions between Democrats and Republicans."

Gen. Aguilar just before he sailed for Europe said that "the only order issued has been that the Mexican law be enforced."

ALLIED AND GERMAN EXPERTS TO CONFER ON REPARATIONS

Personal Negotiations Will Mark Change in Status—Germans Ask for Early Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 6.—Germany has indicated her desire to begin immediately her compliance with the terms of the peace treaty regarding reparations. Her request for oral conferences of German economic experts with allied experts has been granted by the allies.

The conference will begin early next week, according to present indications. A permanent reparations commission has not yet been appointed by the allies. Until it is constituted the commission which had been created to name various conference commissions will act in the German negotiations. The American member of the commission is John Foster Dulles. The fact that these negotiations will be personal marks the new status of the relations between Germany and the allies. The commission in charge of the execution of the treaty with Germany held its first meeting today.

SEASON'S HIGH PRICES SCORED IN CORN MARKET

Week's Trading Is Influenced by Record Hog Values and Hot Weather Over Crop Belt.

Corn prices aimed at the zenith here last week, influenced largely by the fact that the value of hogs rose again and again above all previous records. Compared with the previous week, corn quotations closed last week 8½c to 9½c up. Oats gained 3c to 4½c.

Although the effect of the signing of the peace treaty seemed at first to have been fully discounted by the corn trade, it soon became evident that one of the most vital aspects was still to be dealt with. Indications that export business in provisions would be enlarged were quickly reflected by urgent demands for hogs, a demand which in turn lifted sharply the cost of corn.

Besides, rainless hot weather was a source of anxiety; while at the same time, broadening out of European demand seemed to have virtually put out of question any likelihood of big shipments of corn to the United States from Argentine. Feverish buying of corn was the result until the holidays forced a stop.

An unlooked for increase of the visible supply prevented oats from sympathizing more with the advance of corn. Crop reports also were encouraging as the trading ended.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear daughter and sister, Regina Pittans, who departed this life July 2, 1913. Sadly missed by HER MOTHER, BROTHER AND SISTER-IN-LAW.

In memory of our dear father and grandfather, Fred Mosberger, died July 3, 1918.
Sad and sudden was the call
For our dear father, loved by all
We little thought that on that day
He would be called away.
Sadly missed by
HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In sad but loving memory of Ed. Peterson who departed this life July 7, 1913.
Thy noble spirit has taken flight,
Has soared aloft to realms of light,
To fairer, better, sweeter clime,
Where all is tranquil, sublime.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTER AND BROTHERS.

In loving memory of my dear daughter and our dear sister, Lulu Sinkemeier, who passed away July 3, 1917.
She shall never be forgotten;
Never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where she is laid.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND SISTER.

In loving remembrance of my dear husband Dr. Frank C. Barto, who passed away one year ago today.
No more his kind and loving face
Shall light the gloom of home.
Yet sweet the thought that we shall meet
When we shall cease to roam.
Sadly missed by his loving
WIFE

In loving remembrance of Mrs. Mary Pheil, who departed this life three years ago, July 5, 1916:
In the graveyard, softly sleeping,
Where the flowers softly wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly
In her lonely, silent grave.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother and garndmother Elizabeth Niederer, who departed this life one year ago July 6, 1918.
Dearest Mother how we miss you,
Since that day you left us all,
You are sadly missed by others,
By such a sad and sudden call;
But they little know the sorrow,
But we miss you most of all.
DAUGHTERS, SONS AND GRAND-CHILDREN.

In memory of my devoted wife and dear mother, Mary Lammlein of 5023 Alabama av., who departed this life July 7, 1918.
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we love is still.
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
A loving mother true and kind,
No friend like her on earth we'll find.
God called her home, it was his will,
But in our hearts she lingers still;
For all of us she did her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND SONS.

In remembrance of my beloved husband Peter Geiger, died suddenly July 5, 1918.
My heart in deep sorrow returns to the day,
As memory recalls how death bore you away,
And left me in tears, in grief and woe,
When I stood by your grave one year ago.
One year with all its change,
Since death strangely bade us part,
But dear husband all its changes
Cannot take you from my heart.
Gone in the best of his day,
Blighted in manhood's bloom;
Gone from a heart that loved him,
To sleep in a silent tomb.
Sadly missed by his WIFE.

BEST WAY TO KEEP EGGS.

ANXIOUS.—Of 20 methods of preserving eggs tested in Germany, the 3 which proved most effective were coating the eggs with vaseline, preserving them in lime water, preserving them in water glass. The conclusion was reached that the last is preferable, because varnishing the eggs with vaseline takes considerable time and treating them with lime water is likely to give the eggs a disagreeable odor and taste. There is, however, one drawback with eggs preserved in a solution of water glass, viz., that the shell easily bursts in boiling water. This may be avoided by cautiously piercing shell with strong needle. Directions for preserving by this method are as follows: Use pure water that has been thoroughly boiled. There should be 10 qts. water to 1 qt. water glass. Put eggs in jar and pour the solution over them, place jar in cool, dry place. What is known as commercial water glass is used for covering eggs, and it is much cheaper than the chemically pure article, which is required for more specific purposes. The commercial water glass costs about 10c a lb. and is commonly sold in 2 forms—a syrup-thick liquid or a powder. If the powder is used for the solution much less is required for the given quantity of water.

JIM.—Dr. Hawk and 3 of his assistants tell of their experiences in the use of ordinary bakers' yeast in boils, pimples and other skin disease, and in constipation. They give from ½ cake to 1 cake a day before meals. Sometimes the yeast was given alive, sometimes after being killed with boiling water. It was given suspended in water, beef tea or orange juice. In the 10 cases of constipation treated with it 9 were improved or cured. In some of the 76 persons treated with yeast, 2 cakes a day of live cells caused diarrhoea. In some of these cases killing the yeast with boiling water prevented it from producing diarrhoea. In some cases the symptom was overcome by giving a smaller dose. Even dead yeast in considerable doses was effective against constipation. The yeast treatment was kept up for a month or more in most cases. Yeast cells were not all killed in passing through the stomach and intestines

NOW for the real "hot weather clothes;" Palm Beach, mohair, cool cloths and crash suits, $3.95 to $8.75 "now on sale." There is no time in life that you get so "down and out" that you can't get into the "Land of Beginning Again;" "Start Anew;" we "Are Calling You" With our 5 large stores, 120 feet, filled with "bargains galore." If we don't get your "money for clothes" here you don't spend your "dough" right. What you "save when you spend your dough is your profit." "Install the Abrams' System" of clothes buying and save. Dress up, look prosperous. Don't go around looking "down and out." For 10 years we have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public. Be "awake" to the "fact" your personal appearance "must count." We have "placed on sale" hundreds of suits, pants, coats and vests, which means a big saving to you. We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor-made and from the best manufacturers. Can you wear 34, 36, 38, 43, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also, English and plain models, $7.50 to $15.00. I WANT "Mr. Scott" to "wait on me," he sold me clothes for 20 years. Don't "tread the old beaten path," where you have spent your money for "friendship" and not for "clothes." We'll sell you clothes "at the price, not friendship." Play the "new game." At our "close-to-the-shore-profits" policy; if your "dough counts," all we ask of you, "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." We are the only store in St. Louis showing "real" plain and silk-lined $30 and $35 blue, green, brown flannel waist-line suits at these prices: $19.98, $21.98, $22.98, $24.98 and $27.98. Don't spend "a dollar for clothes" until you see our "spring line." "Pay less; buy more." To the "Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop." Five big stores in one; 6c fare saves you $5 to $7.50; Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. "We've got the place, the goods at the price." A "price concession to our returning soldiers." "Sample suits," $13.30, $14.44, $16.66, $18.39, $19.45, $21.89, $24.85. Mohair suits, $12.98, $14.98; Palm Beach, $8.98 and $9.98. What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you: These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off, we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you $5 to $7.50. Sample pants, $2.48, $2.98, $3.46, $4.98; tailor-made suits cost up to $35; our price, $19.50, $22.50, $26.75. We again announce our "Trade-in-Sale" Department. "Drop It Out of the Window?" Shouted the Young Lady

She had left her purse in the street car and did not miss it until her seatmate held it up to her when outside. The purse thrown out, fell on the street in front of a car coming from the opposite direction but the motorman courteously stopped and let her pick it up.

Some articles lost are not as easily recovered and Post-Dispatch want ads are then appealed to. Why? Simply because nearly everbody hereabouts has two outstanding virtues, i. e. (1) being honest; (2) being a reader of the Post-Dispatch.

All of which means that lost articles advertised in the Post-Dispatch are recovered, and explains why the Post-Dispatch prints more Lost and Found Want Ads than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers COMBINED!

TRY A THREE-TIME AD—costs less, produces more, seldom fails to satisfy.

CALL at this office, at your druggist's, over your phone, or mail your ad.

Did You Ever Really Get Something for Nothing?

There are places you can buy a tire and get a tube for nothing.

There are tires we could sell you, and afford to throw in two or even three tubes—but we wouldn't expect ever to sell you another tire.

Some people will be attracted by such offers. Most people will know that they are paying for both the tire and tube.

We prefer to sell you a Goodyear tire at a fair price—a price that will not allow us to give away tubes.

The only inducement we have to offer is the quality Goodyear tires—the quality that gives you extra miles—the quality that enables Goodyear to make and sell 25,000 tires every day.

The sole purpose of this advertisement is to impress on you that our method of doing business is based on giving you the best possible tire, and rendering intelligent service, rather than by holding out a glittering offer of something for nothing.

We feel this is the best way to win your continued patronage and appreciation.

Yours very truly,

World's Strangest Animals

How a curious coincidence brought together in the Natural History Museum a group consisting of Giant Anteater, Echidna, Dik-Dik, Green Phalanger, Fossa Bear Cat, Pigmy Armadillo and Hero Shrew :: ::

WHAT are the world's strangest seven animals? An authority who ought to know thinks they were assembled the other day at the Museum of Natural History. The assembly took place not by chance, but through coincidence—which makes it stranger still.

They are terribly cramped for room at the museum and in a space-making rearrangment various things that had been crowded out elsewhere were thrust into an empty exhibit case in the Synoptic Hall. When stock-taking time came it was found that this showcase full of leftovers, through some freak of chance, consisted of seven rare and remarkable creatures from different parts of the globe which might well be classified as an excellent selection of the world's strangest seven beasts.

The first three belong to the anteater tribe. The metaphorical father of them all is the Giant Anteater from Venezuela. He is distinctive chiefly because of his exceedingly small mouth and his ludicrously large feet. The mouth is quite sufficient in size for the duties of a professional eater of ants, but it wouldn't do much good if its owner were entered in a contest involving the mastication of heavy meats or the crunching or bones. The queer creature has no teeth at all—his long jawbone is quite smooth. His mouth is merely an opening large enough to permit the operation of a long, sticky tongue, with which he catches ants, somewhat as a toad catches flies.

But his feet! They are extremely large and the fore extremities are armed with claws of such size and shape that the unfortunate beast must walk on the edges of the sole, a lumbering, club-footed laggard. There's a reason, of course: Nature fitted him out with big feet and heavy claws so he could tear open tough anthills for the benefit of his toothless jaws.

The echidna, the second of the anteaters, is an egg-laying creature. It comes from New Zealand. It carries and hatches its eggs in a pouch similar to that in which the 'possum carries it young. The echidna is of the monotremes, the lowest order of mammals. They are an extremely ancient type and today are represented by rare groups, as the duck-bill and the echidna. The egg-laying marks kinship with reptilian forms.

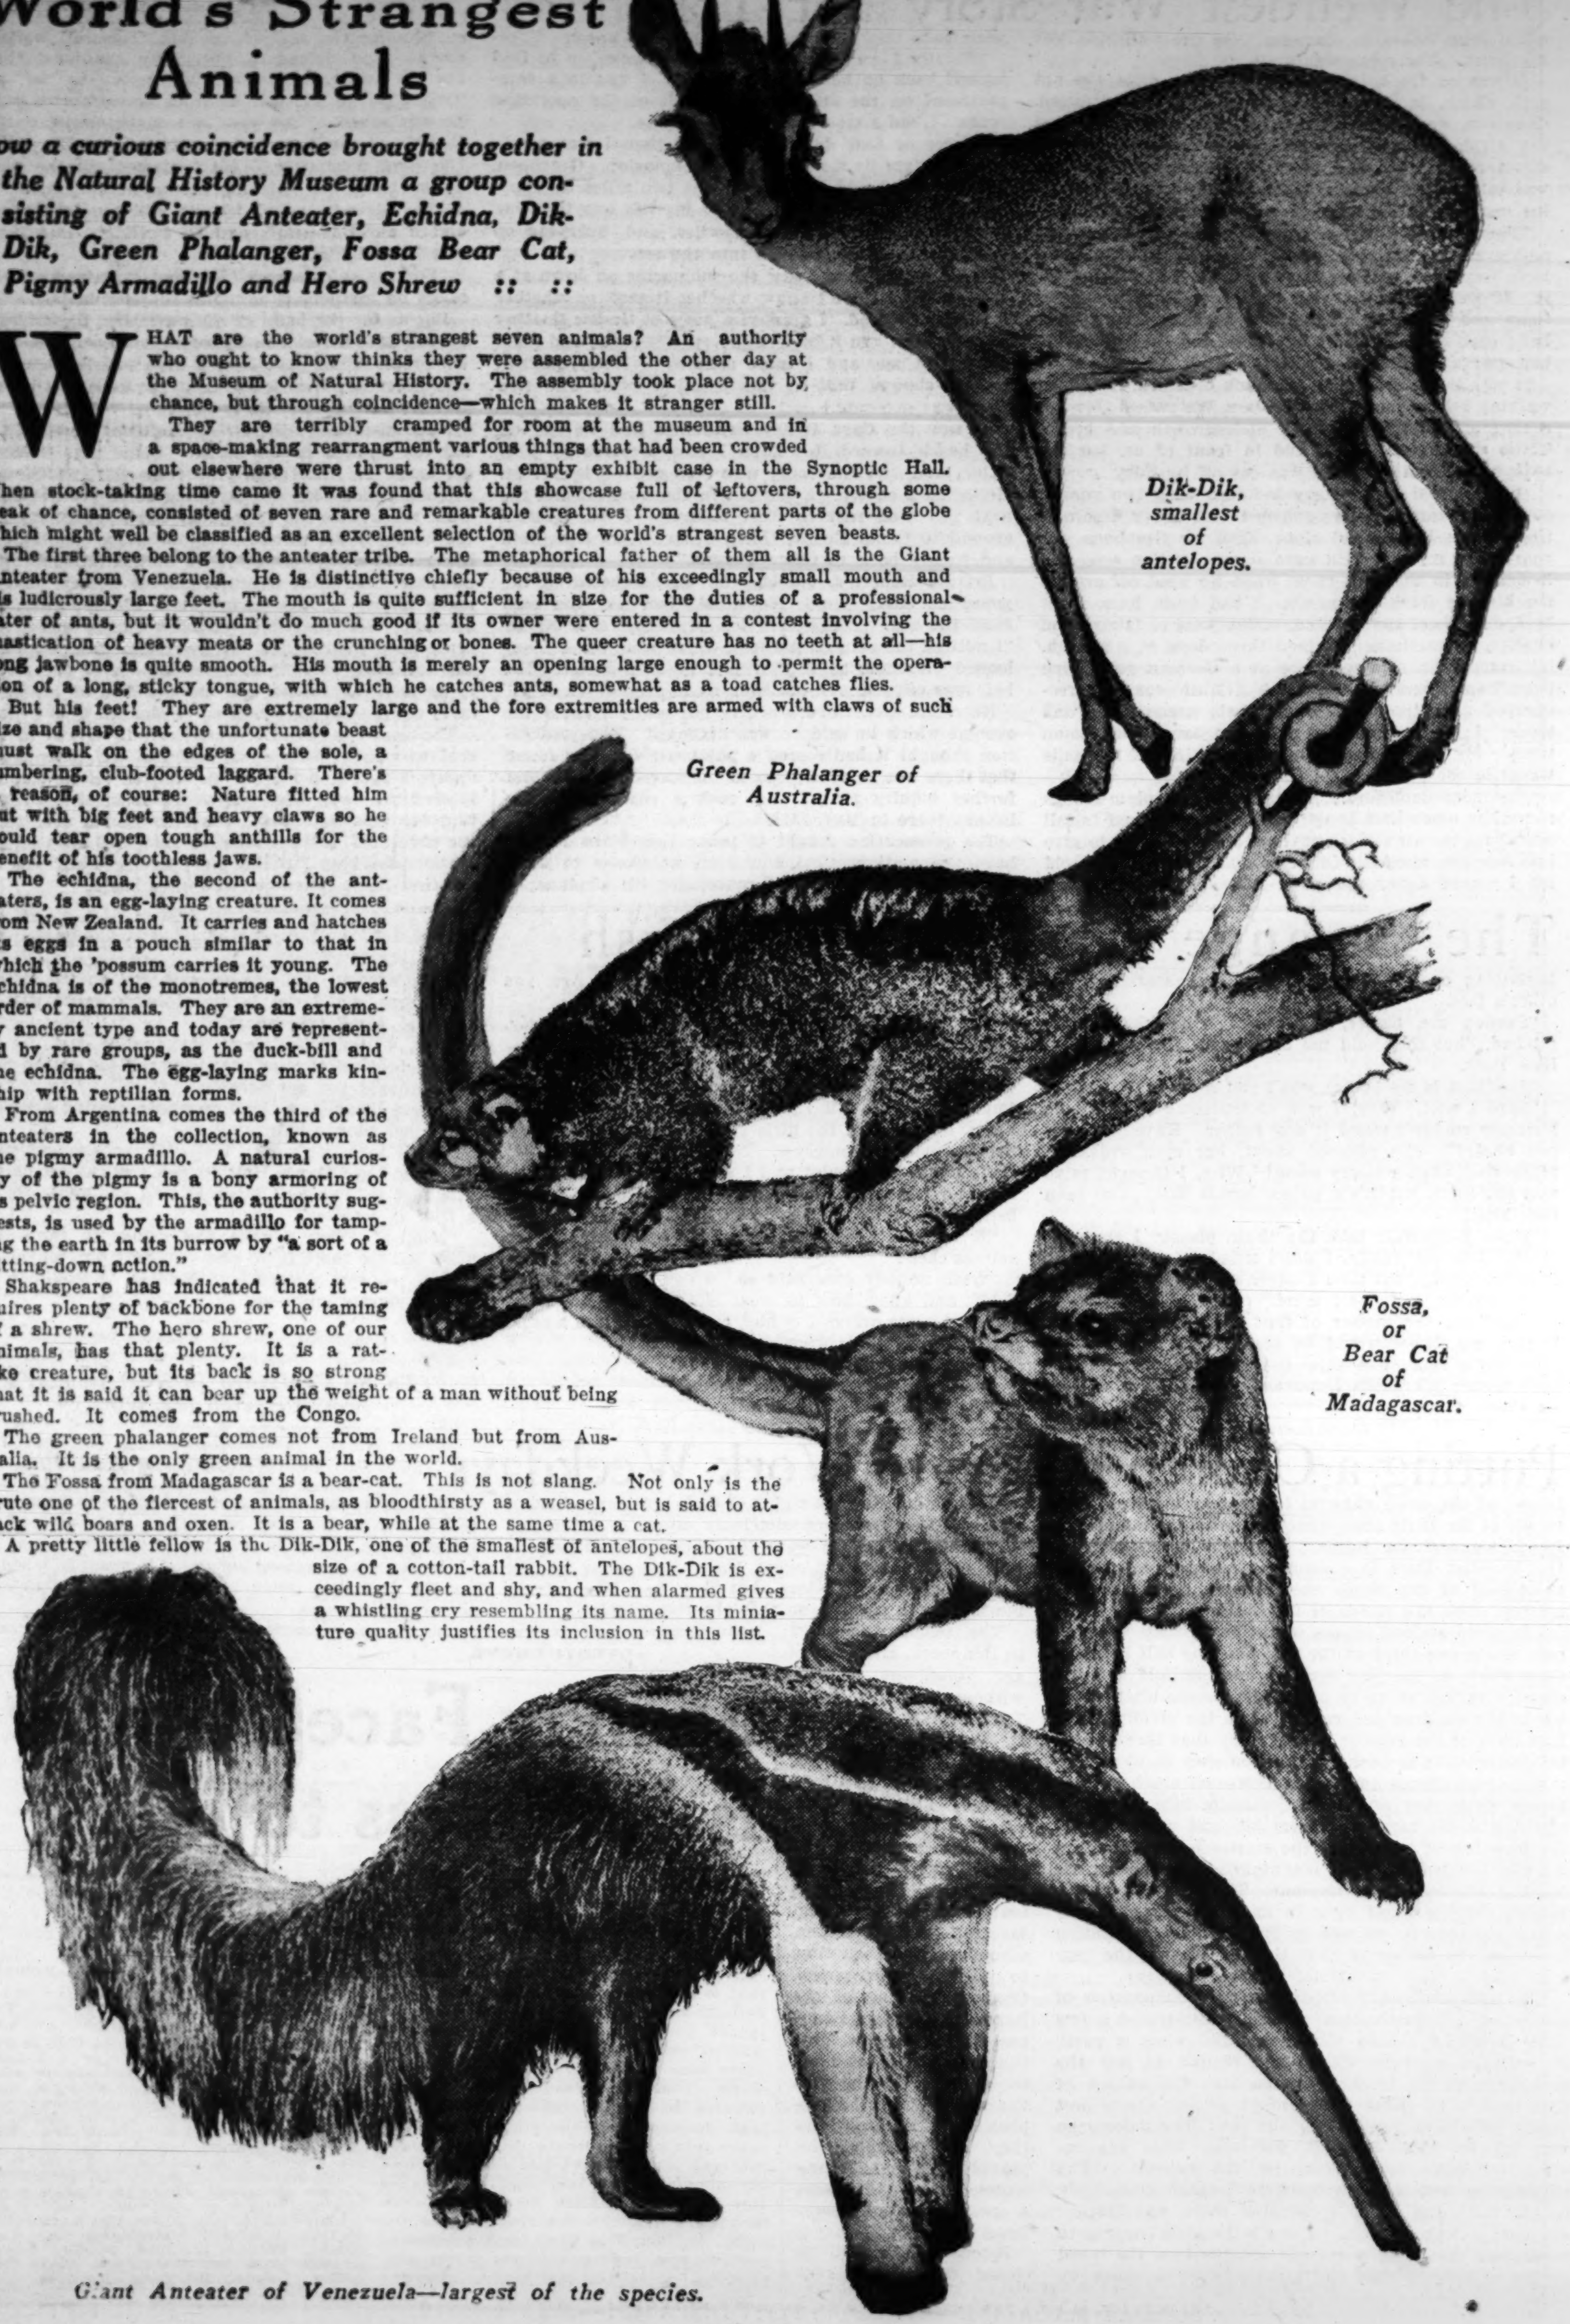
From Argentina comes the third of the anteaters in the collection, known as the pigmy armadillo. A natural curiosity of the pigmy is a bony armoring of its pelvic region. This, the authority suggests, is used by the armadillo for tamping the earth in its burrow by "a sort of a sitting-down action."

Shakspeare has indicated that it requires plenty of backbone for the taming of a shrew. The hero shrew, one of our animals, has that plenty. It is a rat-like creature, but its back is so strong that it is said it can bear up the weight of a man without being crushed. It comes from the Congo.

The green phalanger comes not from Ireland but from Australia. It is the only green animal in the world.

The Fossa from Madagascar is a bear-cat. This is not slang. Not only is the brute one of the fiercest of animals, as bloodthirsty as a weasel, but is said to attack wild boars and oxen. It is a bear, while at the same time a cat.

A pretty little fellow is the Dik-Dik, one of the smallest of antelopes, about the size of a cotton-tail rabbit. The Dik-Dik is exceedingly fleet and shy, and when alarmed gives a whistling cry resembling its name. Its miniature quality justifies its inclusion in this list.



Dik-Dik, smallest of antelopes.

Green Phalanger of Australia.

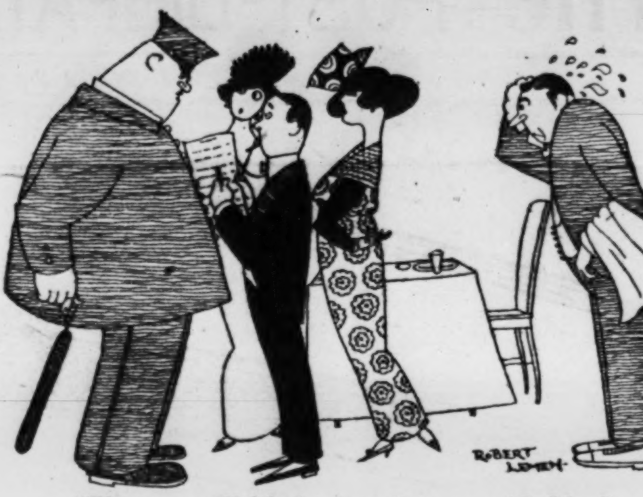
Fossa, or Bear Cat of Madagascar.

Giant Anteater of Venezuela—largest of the species.

DINERS AND THE DEMON RUM

Things will never be the same, the head waiter fears, and the only way out, he believes, is for food to be charged for hereafter at what it's worth—and he's afraid restaurant proprietors have forgotten how to do that :: :: :: :: ::

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.



"The cop will likely as not agree with him."

"IT WILL never be the same," sighed the head waiter. "They'll eat, just like they always did—most of 'em 'll eat more—and they'll be just as troublesome about payin' one-sixty-eight for a 18-cent lamb chop—but when they ain't lit, en' know they ain't lit, how you goin' to throw 'em out without their goin' to the Police Magistrate an' makin' trouble? That's what I want to know.

"It always used to be easy. Of course, we never pulled nothing rough up here. This ain't the kind of place where you go over the top with caraffes when a couple of rah-rah boys gets to singin' the 'Boolah' an hour after closin' time. That kind of tactics don't worry the customers of places frequented by sporting reporters and comic artists and night prowling actors. But we're genteel up here, and if our patrons was to be disturbed between courses by fragments of broken glass and the wails of the wounded they wouldn't come back. There's a sort of prejudice among the burgoyce diners-out against bein' around where the reserves is likely to come up with the wagon and tell all hands to go an' tell it to the Judge.

"The boss here conducts a nice refined place, with ice skatin' an' jazz, and everything but trained seals and William J. Bryan by way of entertainment. Prices, of course, is according, and I'll say for the widely denounced Demon that he acted like ether when it come to the painless extraction of large sums of money from people who take their meals at places recommended by all-night taxi drivers.

"Now, in the 'dear, dead days of long ago,' as the songs says, when we began pilin' up the chairs to make gangway for the scrubwomen, the giver of a dinner party would call me and say:

"'Garcon, the bad news.'

"When I gave him the check he would look at it and remark:

"'What! $75.20 for all that food for three whole people? Why, you're practically running an eleemosynary institution, ain't you?' And he'd begin peelin' bills off a roll.

"Then, like as not, his wife—if it was that kind of a party—would grab the check, take a look at it and say:

"Why, Elmer, this is an outrage. We couldn't have eaten all that stuff. I can run the whole house a week for less money than that and have enough left over for a new foulard.'

"But by that time of night, $75.20 would seem like practically nothing to a guy who was getting $75 a week, and without even looking at the items he would hand out a $10 tip and ask some member of the party to telephone around to a garage for a limousine.

"Of course, sometimes they got messy. In that case the sight of a police whistle usually brought 'em round, an' when they actually refused to come across it was easy to plump 'em quietly an' genteely in the stomach, and collect from one of the other birds while the bus boys was hurryin' for water to revive 'em.

"It was never necessary to get rough. One good, unostentatious punch below the belt will make almost any heavy eater cease from troubling, and always in any party of three or four the big majority is for peace at any price.

"You see, the knowledge that they ain't exactly responsible is always what newspapers call subconscious in restaurant patrons. Sort of haunting 'em is the newspaper headlines over the police court proceedings the next day, and the statement down at the end of the item to the effect that 'all of them had been drinking heavily.' That sort of news ain't pleasant reading to the old folks at home, and a man is never too far gone to know it. So as a rule they gave no trouble, and seldom it was that we had to revive the old, old days, when all of us was happy and carefree and the patrol wagon was always backed up around the corner waitin' for the business that was sure to arrive before the clock in the steeple struck 4.

"But it won't be like that any more. You take a man who has had nothing harder to drink than ice water for a whole evening, and hand him a check beginning with 50 cents a cover and windin' up with 25 cents a throw for a half an ounce of coffee, and he's going to be fussy about it.

And the old stuff won't go, either. A man in that condition will take out a lead pencil, figure out for you where a stuffed tomato quoted at a dollar and a half can't possibly cost more than 13 cents to serve, including the overhead, and defy you to prove that you wouldn't make Jesse James look like a Sunday school superintendent.

"And if you call in the cop on the corner, he'll show the cop the figures and the cop will likely as not agree with him.

"Yes, it's goin' to be a lot different. Most of the education a fellow gets in a place like this will be wasted. He'll be a good deal like the captain of a ship who has spent all his life learning to find the way over the waves, and then they suddenly ring in airplanes on him and all he knows suddenly ain't good for anything.

"I was 10 years perfectin' a method of tellin' a man who I knew was dining with his wife that a lady wanted him on the telephone. If he had an edge on he'd give me a piteous look, and I'd say I'd made a mistake and get a five when he went out. But if you worked that on a perfectly sober man you'd probably get arrested.

"Then once in a while when a guy showed up with a new girl and ordered wine, I'd ask him if he wanted the same kind of wine he had last night, and confessin' to another mistake was good for five or ten.

"I'll be out a tidy income by the change. Regular millionaires, as all waiters know, is usually tightwads. That's how they got to be millionaires. But the man who things temporarily that he is a millionaire, bein' led to that supposition by the contents of a few bottles, is loose as the driftin' sands.

"But what I'll be out is nothin' to what is goin' to happen to the boss. Just imagine a lad who hasn't been etherized with four or five cocktails lookin' at one of these modern bills of fares and ordering anything off it! I can see only one way out, and that is hereafter to charge what the stuff is worth. And I'm afraid most of the restaurant proprietors has long ago forgotten how to do that."

"What! $75.20 for all that food?"

THE MOVIE VAMPIRE GOING INTO ECLIPSE

By KARL K. KITCHIN.

"THE public is tired of vamps. Nakedness doesn't win a nickel. Heart kicks are what film audiences want—good, clean stories with both laughter and tears."

This, briefly, is what movie audiences want at the moment, according to John W. Semler. And as Mr. Semler spends all his time trying to find out exactly what kind of pictures the public wants, his opinion carries some weight.

Mr. Semler is a "movie scout." He is employed by a big distributing and export firm, to study the popular taste in pictures and report his findings to the producers who are under contract to them. His reports, which are made weekly from various parts of the country, guide the producers to a certain extent, for their efforts are naturally directed toward giving the public what it wants. Naturally many other things determine what kind of pictures are to be made, but the fact that various companies have "movie scouts" to get a line on the popular taste is significant, if nothing else.

Mr. Semler has just returned to New York from a six-months tour of the country from Maine to California and back. He has visited scores of cities and hundreds of motion picture theaters. He has interviewed hundreds of exhibitors and thousands of movie patrons, for his favorite method is to get into conversation with filmgoers and to find out their likes and dislikes at first hand. Consequently there are few better posted men on motion picture conditions, especially as to the public taste for films, than John W. Semler.

"It is hardly necessary for me to say that the motion picture business is flourishing everywhere as never before," said Mr. Semler to the writer.

"What is more important, there is every indication that the present prosperity will not only continue, but increase. Prohibition has already increased receipts of motion picture theaters 30 per cent, and with the coming of national prohibition this percentage will be doubled. In short, prohibition is the greatest aid the movies have ever had.

"Taking the country as a whole it may be said that the day of the vampire is over," continued Mr. Semler. "The public is tired of the Theda Bara type of movie. Clean pictures have the call at the moment. The public wants pictures that have good, well developed stories. Filmgoers want to laugh and cry rather than experience thrills. And they want pictures to which they can take their children.

"New York audiences were overwhelmingly in favor of clean pictures. I not only talked with exhibitors but I butted into groups of filmgoers so as to get a line on the situation. In the midst of a particularly good picture I'd complain to my neighbor that it was "rotten" and start an argument. In that way I got the real opinions of movie fans.

"In the East the highest-priced seats are in the front rows," Mr. Semler went on. "Out on the Pacific coast the rear orchestra seats are the most expensive. There are some theaters where the balcony seats are the highest priced."

"Who is the most popular film star at the present time?" I asked the movie scout, knowing full well that he would answer Charlie Chaplin.

"Well, 378 prints have already been made of "Shoulder Arms," he replied. "Even a very successful picture rarely runs more than 100 prints, so you can see that Chaplin is in a class by himself.

"One of the best bets in pictures today is Nazimova. Her pictures are breaking all records. Of the consistent best sellers, Norma Talmadge, Charles Ray, Bessie Barriscale and Sessue Hayakawa are near the top of the list. Of course, the Big Four really are the big four, but their productions are relatively few and far between.

"The great need in the picture game is better stories. The public has had enough salaciousness and sensationalism. It wants 'heart kicks' and movie makers have got to give the public what it wants."

After a fortnight's rest Mr. Semler will take to the road again and resume his investigations. For the taste in pictures changes without rhyme or reason and the "movie scout" must be on the job.

The Weirdest War Story Yet Told

about four inches in diameter. On the wall side was my bunk. The room was plain.

"I was on the boat from three to five days, I'm not sure which, because part of the time I was drugged. Greghoen was on the submarine, and told me he had the airplane plans safe. I did not see the outside structure of the U-boat until the night we landed. I was taken from my compartment through the operating quarters to the conning tower. It was dark.

"There was a gangway put out from the submarine, and over this we went upon the land. Nobody could have found the landing place who was not looking for it. It was walled in with timber and brush camouflage and ended in a clump of bushes. There must have been some kind of bay here, for the submarine had only a middling sea roll.

"I was taken around to the back of a hill, Greghoen walking behind me with a revolver. We passed through a ravine. There were thick undergrowth and brush. There was water behind and in front of us, but the view to the east and west was cut off by hills.

"We reached a one-story building with two rooms, and one-section windows guarded with heavy wire netting. Here I remained alone, save for Greghoen, for nearly five months. He wore a gray civilian suit, and locked me in the back room when he went off around the hills to fetch our meals. I had fruit, ham, roast beef, dried beef and chicken, which were of fairly good quality. Sometimes it rained three days at a stretch. My companion said we were at a German submarine base, 'somewhere' on the South Atlantic coast. I recognized pine trees and sage brush, green briar and vines. I did not see any palms or banana or lemon trees. My jailer and I occasionally took two-mile walks in the valley.

"Greghoen continually pestered me to explain things about the plans that he did not understand, and to tell him about the air service of the army. I refused to give him any information. Often he made threats, and told me I would never get away alive. Then he would promise to take me home if I told what I knew.

"Finally I was drugged again, and woke up to find myself back on board a submarine. I was in a compartment on the starboard side, aft of the operating room. I had a steel bunk, with springs.

"Three or four days passed, and then I was awakened at night by a shock, like an explosion. Greghoen, who was on board, told me it was two miles to shore, and that my only chance to save my life was to swim. I was already in my underclothes, and, hurrying up through the hatch, jumped into the sea.

"As I swam away I saw the submarine go down at a sharp angle. I don't know whether it sank or whether it just submerged. I grasped a piece of timber floating in the water, and it buoyed me up. The tide and wind were with me, and I came ashore." (Meteorological reports showed that in this detail of wind and tide Nace was accurate.)

"I saw the Cape Henry lighthouse and walked up the beach toward it. Then I saw a barracks with lights, and met the cook, who was getting breakfast. He called a sentry. I was put in the hospital and the next day was sent to Fort Monroe. I was shifted around to Camp Eustis, Camp Stuart, Fort Hamilton, and finally back to Camp Devens."

Private Robert J. Nagle, who was Sergeant of the guard at Camp Story, identified Nace as "the man from the sea." "The man looked tired," said Nagle. "I noticed the skin on his feet, which were bare. They looked bleached, as if they had been in water. His hair was clipped, and someone made a poor job of it."

Nace had mentioned a sentry box as being near the spot at which he said he was kidnaped. The prosecution thought it had scored a point when it was found that there was no sentry box at the spot indicated. But further inquiry proved that such a post was in existence there in May, 1918.

The prosecution sought to prove that Nace did not have the mathematical education necessary to draw such plans as he described concerning his airplane; if so, the motive alleged for his "seizure" would fall down. The defendant cheerfully confessed that he did not know as much about figures as he might. "What is the shortest distance between two points?" he was asked. "Can you, as a mathematician, answer that?" "I don't know," he replied, totally unruffled. "Nothing, I suppose." He professed not the slightest notion as to the meaning of the word "axiom." The Judge Advocate asked him to add the fractions one-eighth and one-ninth, and he smilingly said the sum was beyond him.

"For my calculations," he then explained calmly, "I relied on mathematical tables supplied in books."

But as for the body of the narrative, the authorities worked at it seven months before confessing that it was holeproof. They gave Nace a week's furlough and kept him under strict surveillance, in the hope that he would give himself away. He did not.

Nace maintained an air of confident innocence during the months of his ordeal. Some time before his discharge he was transferred from the guardhouse to kitchen police. He was planning as he peeled potatoes what to do with his 13 months' back pay of $339, plus the bonus of $60 which accompanies an honorable discharge. His chief thought—for he had no doubt of the outcome—was how, when he got his liberty, he would make money enough to continue his experiments in aircraft. His plans had vanished, but he was sure he could draw them again. To get the necessary funds he was thinking, he said, of accepting one of many offers to go into the movies and make a film of his adventures under some such title as "Kidnaped by a U-Boat."

The case was perhaps summed up by one of the several witnesses—former comrades of the defendant at Camps Upton and Devens, as well as fellow employes in civil life—who were questioned as to Nace's reputation for veracity. None could recall his ever telling the tiniest fib, and one witness concluded his testimony by volunteering: "If this story of his is not true it is the first lie of his career, and it's a beaut!"

hesitating on the threshold, her eyes searching the other's face.

"Pardon me, please," the voice somewhat high-pitched, "but they told me downstairs you were from New York.

"Yes, that is my home; won't you come in?"

"Sure I will. Why, I was so lonesome in this hole I simply couldn't stand it any longer. Have you only one chair?" She glanced about, her eyes widening. "Heavens, what a funny room! Why, I thought mine was the limit, but it's a palace beside this. You been here long?"

"Since yesterday; take the chair, please; I am used to the bed—no, really, I don't mind in the least. It is rather funny, but then I haven't always lived at the Ritz-Carlton, so I don't mind."

"Huh! for the matter of that no more have I, but believe me, there would be some howl if they ever gave me a room like this—even in Haskell. I know your name; it's Stella Donovan—well, mine is Celeste La Rue."

"A very pretty name; rather unusual. Are you French?"

The other laughed, crossing her feet carelessly, and extracting a cigarette case from a handbag.

"French? Well, I guess not. You don't mind if I smoke, do you? Thanks. Have one yourself—they're imported. No? All right. I suppose it is a beastly habit, but most of the girls I know have picked it up. Seems sociable, somehow. No, I'm not French. My dad's name was Capley and I annexed this other when I went on the stage. It tickles the Johnnies, and sounds better than Sadie Capley. You like it yourself."

"It is better adapted to that purpose—you are an actress then?"

"Well, nobody ever said so. I can dance and sing a bit, and know how to wear clothes. It's an easier job than some others I've had, and gets me into a swell set. Tell me, when were you in New York?"

"About a month ago."

"Well, didn't you see the Revue?"

"The last one? Certainly."

"That's where I shone—second girl on the right in the chorus, and I was in the eccentric dance with Joe Stearns! some hit—what?"

"Yes, I remember now; they called you the Red Fairy—because of your ruby ring. What in the world ever brought you out here?"

Celeste laughed, a cloud of smoke curling gracefully above her blonde hair.

"Some joke, isn't it? Well, it's no engagement at the Good Luck Dance Hall yonder, you can bet on that. The fact is, I've quit business and am going to take a flier in mining."

"Mining? That sounds like money in these days. They tell me there is no placer mining any longer, and that it requires a fortune to develop. I wouldn't suppose a chorus girl"—— is one of the main objects; to impress vividly on the minds of the little ones what their country stands for, its ideals and its hopes. Religious instruction on the broadest lines is considered essential in the development of the ideals the teachers are seeking to impress upon the minds of the children.

Putting a Church Edifice to Work Weekdays

The more serious phases of the instruction consume only about one-third of the two and one-half hours of class work, as the play features are manifold and frequently varied, so as to avoid a sameness that might weary the children and remind them too vividly of the humdrum of the regular school work that they submit to nine months in each year. Then they enjoy a wide range of privileges and can converse as much as they please while they are sewing, shaping kite frames or working at the benches. Every boy and girl is taught the meaning of hono and the stories told them carry morals illustrating and accentuating the points the teachers are seeking to implant. The class conductors handle the boys and girls in an easy, pleasant way and avoid severity as well as the slightest inclination to assert the authority that the teachers in the regular schools must sometimes perforce employ.

The wide latitude permitted in the combination of recreation and instruction was aptly illustrated a few days after the classes were organized when a party of suffrage workers visited the church to ask the assistance of the teachers in reaching the women of that district to enlist their aid in getting the widest voting privileges possible for the sex. The delegation was led by Mrs. John D. Edwards, who was invited to make an address on the subject. The children as well as their teachers listened attentively to the talk, and at its conclusion there was further discussion of the subject, in which the girls from 12 to 14 showed that they were well informed on the trend of the legislation that had accomplished so much by way of vindicating the rights of their mothers. A number of these girls unhesitatingly stood up later and discussed the various ways the women should use the new power conferred upon them, and some of the youngsters made it clear that they had been giving much time to reading on this absorbing topic.

The teachers enlisted in this work, all of whom are volunteers, serving without pay, are Mmes. T. C. Dick, R. O. Douglas, C. P. Creamer, George Law, Charles Magnus, Harry Gardner, Olin Baker and Lillie Boening, who are in charge of all the basement classes, and Mmes. R. Michel, A. Blackstone, C. Sappington and Misses Eva Douglas and Nellie Walker, who are giving their time to the kindergarten. Chairman Ewing of the Baptist Missionary Board and Pastor Aregood visit the church daily and are in constant touch with the work. When the supplies are running low they are actively employed gathering new stores, so as to insure a continuance of operations.

Before the school is closed the teachers intend to give the children an outing on a large scale, which will be far more pretentious than the ordinary school picnic. They have had their little picnics as part of the regular exercises, but the gala event is scheduled for the last day, when prizes are to be distributed among the winners.

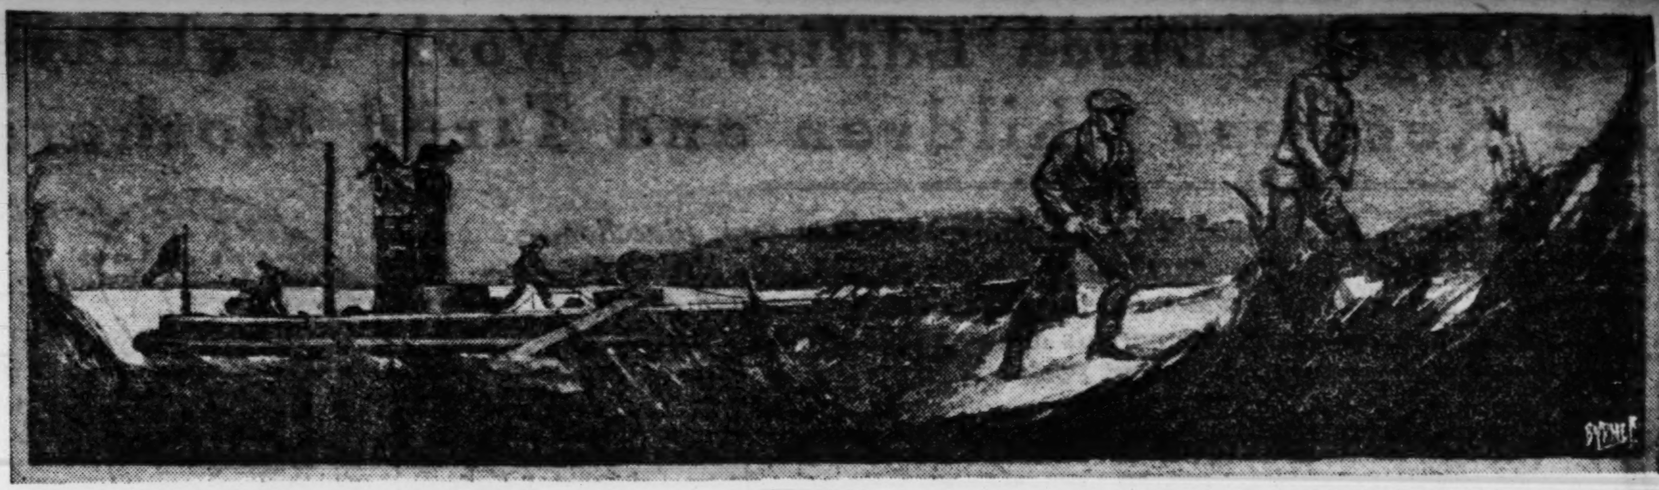
La-may Face Powder Is Harmless to the Most Delicate Skin

Now you can use a pure face powder that is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. It will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. And, it really stays on better than any other face powder. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder (Poudre de Riz) to make it stick. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder pimples. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses a medicinal ingredient that doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and pimples. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crows' feet and wrinkles. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well this La-may powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is now used by over a million American women. The large size is only fifty cents and the trial size is twenty-five cents. Remember, La-may is guaranteed absolutely pure. (One thousand dollars reward is offered to anybody who can buy a better face powder anywhere at any price). Refuse substitutes. Your common sense will tell you that when you are offered a substitute it is sure to be demonstrator trying to sell an inferior powder that pays a big commission. When you use this absolutely pure La-may and see how splendidly it beautifies your complexion, you will understand why it so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York. Save this notice. La-may Rouge is also pure.



"No one could have found the submarine base who was not looking for it. We went ashore, Greghoen walking behind with a revolver."

The Weirdest War Story Yet Told

Narrative spectacular enough for Oppenheim to have invented develops when Private Paul L. Nace is ordered by military court to account for his disappearance of five months—Vanished in May, 1918, from Camp Devens, Mass., and turned up in October, dripping from sea, at Camp Story, Va.—Declared he was kidnaped by German agents, delivered to U-boat off Long Island, and held captive at Hun submarine base on South Atlantic Coast — Authorities, though skeptical, could not disprove yarn, and closed incident by giving him honorable discharge :: :: ::

IS PRIVATE PAUL L. NACE the hero of the most astounding adventure that befell a United States soldier during the war?

Or is he a romancer before whose imaginative genius the jaws of Baron Muenchausen and Sir John Mandeville would drop in admiring despair?

These worthies, whose histories are monuments of methodical mendacity unparalleled in literature, were never confronted by a courtmartial and ordered to prove their narratives on pain of suffering the penalty meted out to deserters during the time of war. If so, their books would contain prefaces narrating how each kept an involuntary rendezvous with the hangman or a firing squad.

Private Nace has undergone such an ordeal and has emerged in triumph. For seven months he was under investigation by the authorities of Camp Devens, Mass. During a prolonged and gruelling examination army experts, secret service agents, astute attorneys and hard-headed military officers pitted their wits against this boyish doughboy of 24 years, with his candid face and ingenuous manner. He regaled them with the most amazing narrative ever told to a courtmartial. They assailed it with every resource at their command. At the end the fabric stood unshaken and unscathed. So there was nothing left for the authorities to do but order his honorable discharge from the army and award him his back pay and bonus. With the incident officially closed, Nace left Camp Devens on June 28 for his home in Harrisburg, Pa.

It was pointed out, however, that an acquittal would not necessarily solve the riddle. It might not mean that the authorities believed his story, but simply that they were unable to disprove it. Some of the skeptical officers remained unconvinced, but they confessed, with symptoms of awe, that if Nace invented a romance it was one that would rank as a classic, unique in that it was so stanchly built as to hold water without a single leak under the severest strain.

The enigma of this "strangest war story yet told" hangs upon the whereabouts of Private Nace during the five months from May to October of last year. It was agreed that on May 24 he vanished from Camp Devens, and that one morning in October he turned up at Camp Story, Va., barefooted and dripping from the sea. The military authorities scoured heaven and earth to find some trace of his presence during that time. But not a vestige of the fugitive could they discover.

Having not a scrap of evidence of their own to fill up the lacuna of five months, the courtmartial had no alternative but to listen to Nace's own account. They found that there was placed before them, to take or leave, an international melodrama of espionage which E. Phillips Oppenheim and Louis Joseph Vance are probably kicking themselves for not having invented.

To sum the story up briefly before Nace is called upon to give the details, the solemn tribunal was asked to believe that German agents could kidnap an American soldier within 200 yards of the sentries at a populous military cantonment like Camp Devens; that they could, unmolested, drive their prisoner in a truck to the shore of Long Island; that they could there deliver him to a German U-boat; that the Germans maintained a submarine base on the South Atlantic coast; and that at this base Nace was held a captive for several months.

The motive for his seizure Nace explained as the desire of the Germans to lay hands on plans he had drawn for an airplane of improved design; his escape he attributed to an explosion on the submarine which freed him to swim two miles to shore. With impassive features, the expression changing to a smile only when some question with destructive possibilities was flung at him, the soldier related his narrative under the examination of his attorney, Lieut. Francis M. Flannagan.

"I was born at Maryville, Pa.," he said, "and was 24 years old April 24 last. I completed the eighth grade of the township school. My brother, Charles W. Nace, lives at Brookings, S. D.; my sister, Mrs. H. A. Maiers, at Colon, Panama, and another sister, Mrs. C. E. Miller, at Harrisburg, Pa. (Government agents sought in vain to establish that Nace spent his A. W. O. L. time with any of these relatives.)

"I worked as a mechanic, and finally went into aviation. I began my experience with the Curtiss Aviation Corporation at Newport News, Va. (The witness produced an air club certificate, No. 792.) "My total flying experience was between 200 and 225 hours. I also learned something about installing motors on battleships while working for various companies. I was a civilian flying instructor at Mineola and Call Field, near Wichita, Kan.

"It was at Mineola that I first met a man who called himself Rudolph Greghoen. He had been watching the flying, and afterwards asked me to ride back with him in his automobile. We discussed flying, and I told him of my own ideas about a giant triplane, to surpass in power and speed anything then made. He had a considerable sum of money with him. I afterwards corresponded with him at New York and Charlestown, Mass.

"I was inducted into the service in Brooklyn on April 28, 1918, and was sent to Camp Upton. Greghoen came to see me there on May 19. He told me he was using his influence in Washington to get me a commission in the aviation service, and also that he was willing to finance my new airplane.

Paul L. Nace.

"The next day I was transferred to Camp Devens, being assigned to F Battery, 301st Field Artillery. On May 23 Greghoen came there and told me I had been recommended for a commission. I made an engagement to meet him the next night.

"On May 24 we were ordered to dispose of our civilian clothing and property that was not Government issue within 24 hours. I packed my handbag and took it to Ayer, to express it home.

"The bag contained my airplane plans, drawn in ink on six sheets of paper, 16 by 20 inches. One of the innovations was to be in the material and pitch of the propellers. I estimated that if the scheme worked out it would be worth several millions of dollars to me.

"On the way to the express office I met Greghoen, in his automobile. We went for a ride, and when we returned the express office was closed. He said he would take the bag to Boston and check it for me there. It was night as we drove back, and he let me out at the railroad tracks. As I walked on I saw a truck by the roadside, and with my flashlight saw it was marked 'merchandise.' I heard a whistle and a rustle in the bushes, and something hit me on the head. When I came to I was in the rear of an automobile, gagged and handcuffed, inside a box.

"Two men were on the seat of the car, and I overheard them talking. One was Greghoen and the other he called 'Louis.' I learned they were taking me to Long Island to deliver me over to a German submarine. There were paper and pencil in my blouse pocket, and using my flashlight, I lay on the floor and wrote a note. Then I sprung the door of the box open and threw the note out."

"How could you write when you were handcuffed?" was the question that leaped at him from one of the judges.

Nace smiled. A pair of handcuffs was snapped on his wrists and he was told to write. He sat on a table in the courtroom, his legs spread apart, tugged away until he pulled paper and pencil from his pocket, and then scribbled a note which he said was, so far as he could remember, of the same wording as that which he dropped from the truck. It read:

"From Paul L. Nace to Commanding Officer, Camp Devens.

"Subject: I have been kidnaped.

"May 24, 1918.—I have been taken by German secret service men and placed in a box on an automobile marked 'merchandise.' I overheard a conversation between two men on the seat, that I was taken for my experience on marine and aircraft production and of air service in general, and I am to be placed on a submarine off South Beach at 2 a. m. tonight. Notify the Navy Department to scout for submarines off the coast. I will hold out till the last breath.

"PAUL L. NACE."

(Testimony was later given that a note similar to this had about the end of May reached the headquarters of the Seventy-sixth Division and had been filed in the camp records, but could not now be found.)

"With your fettered hands," he was asked, "you unbuttoned your coat to get at your blouse pocket?"

"No," was the reply. "My coat was unbuttoned before I was knocked down by the blow."

"The men heard my movements," Nace continued, "and stopped the car. They took the gag out of my mouth and asked if I were hungry. They gave me sandwiches and something to drink. I became drowsy and went to sleep.

"When I awoke I smelled smoke and acid and felt the motion of what I took to be a submarine. I could not see much of the craft. I was kept all the time in a compartment, about 10 or 11 feet long. It had a curved roof running from the floor to one side of the partition. At the highest point it was just high enough to stand easily. It was ventilated by a pipe,

If Stones of Crow Memorial Could Speak

during a few years were given also by the St. Louis Trio Club, composed of Isaac L. Schoen, violin; Louis Mayer, 'cello, and Alfred G. Robyne, piano.

It was at Memorial Hall that Ernest K. Kroeger of St. Louis first launched himself on his distinguished career as a composer. For five years, from 1887 to 1891, he gave one concert a season, at which the programs were made up exclusively of his own works, his quartets and quintets, as well as his piano music. He was frequently assisted by Charles Kunkel.

At this auditorium Alfred Ernst, who was killed in the war while fighting for Germany, gave a piano recital to introduce himself to the St. Louis public on his being named director of the Symphony Orchestra, in which position he was the predecessor of Max Zach. Mrs. Ernst sang a group of songs and P. G. Anton played Grieg's violoncello concerto. The audience "went wild" over Ernst's piano playing, an art in which he was a remarkable virtuoso, according to all accounts.

Here also occurred one of the most extraordinary events in local musical history, a concert given by an octet of 'cellists. It is related that one afternoon a number of friends gathered at a cafe at Sixth and Chestnut streets, a favorite rendezvous for musicians, and one of them suddenly remarked that there were six violoncello players in the company.

"If there were two more," said Theodore Heberlein, "we could play my violoncello octet." It appeared that he had, for fun, composed such a freak work. The talk that ensued resulted in plans for the concert. Those taking part were Heberlein, Louis Mayer, Theodore Hennemann, P. G. Anton, Henry Broeckhaert, Charles Mayer, August Lelievre and Karl Froehlich. There was neither piano nor singer at the recital, but there was everything from a 'cello solo to a 'cello octet. One of the numbers was an arrangement of Chopin's "Funeral March," for which the eight 'cellists were reinforced by Robert Buhl, now first double-bass player in the Symphony Orchestra. The effect of this moving composition, all upon instruments so eloquent, was such that the players themselves almost lost command of their feelings.

The experiment was such a triumph that shortly afterwards it was repeated, with Mrs. Georgia Lee Cunningham as vocal soloist. Accompanied by six violoncellos, she sang the soprano aria from Mozart's "Il Re Pastore," which had never been done in St. Louis before, and the music of which was brought to her from Europe by George Heerich. The first piano-player recital in this city was given at Memorial Hall.

The Ethical Society of St. Louis first began its Sunday meetings at Memorial Hall during the winter of 1888-1889, and continued to meet there for eight months of each year until 1912, when it removed to its new building, the Sheldon Memorial Auditorium, on Washington avenue, near Grand. From 1888 until his death in 1907, the founder, Walter L. Sheldon, was the leader and conducted the meetings, either speaking himself or inviting prominent men from out of town. During the four years following his death the society had no definite leader, until, in 1911, Percival Chubb was called to take charge. He officiated at Memorial Hall for one year.

During Mr. Sheldon's lifetime the building was a beautiful and dignified place, containing the busts of old Greek philosophers on pedestals, and with portraits of eminent St. Louisans on the walls. One passed through a vestibule which contained interesting reproductions of sculpture of all ages, while upstairs and down the walls were hung with paintings, engravings and etchings. Once a month, after the Sunday morning exercises, members of the Ethical Society were privileged to visit the art galleries upstairs from 12:30 to 1 p. m.

Some distinguished speakers who spoke there before the Ethical Society were Dr. Felix Adler, Prof. Josiah Royce, Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt, Charles Zueblin, Prof. G. Stanley Hall, Prof. Paul Shorey, Dr. Stanton Coit and Dr. A. Ross Hill. Most of the smaller musical recitals are now given at Sheldon Memorial Auditorium, with occasional deviations to the St. Louis Woman's Club and the Wednesday Club Auditorium.

From 1901 to 1910, at every Sunday morning meeting of the Ethical Society, a string quartet played. Victor Lichenstein was first violinist for the whole period, during which the musicians traversed virtually the entire string quartet literature.

The Artists' Guild, organized after a suggestion of Miss Florence Hayward, met first at her father's home, then at the homes of members, and finally in the basement of Memorial Hall. It abode there only a few years, and then, folding its tents, moved across the street to Robert Bringhurst's studio. Later it occupied a hall at Vandeventer avenue and Delmar boulevard. The organization is now domiciled in a building of its own at Union boulevard and Enright avenue.

The last organization to occupy the building was the Junior Citizens, a boys' club, fostered by Clarence H. Howard. About four months after its lease was given up, on the evening of Jan. 10 last, fire, caused by crossed wires, destroyed the interior of the structure. Only the walls were left, and part of the roof fell in. Thereupon the Washington University Corporation decided, with the consent of the Crow heirs, to replace the old Art Museum with a modern commercial building.

The income is to be used for establishing a fund to be known as the Wayman Crow Fund, for the advancement of art and its teaching. Chancellor Hall, in discussing the change, said a few days ago:

"As this fund, under the terms of the improvement of the property, will become very lucrative, it in time will provide instruction in art for thousands of students through its support of the School of Fine Arts, and will keep alive for all time the memory of Wayman Crow."

"Con" Men Thrived All During the War

public into their confidence; accordingly, they seek the panacea offered by the licensed but unofficial agencies. Sometimes these victims get back some of their losses, but in most cases they get no satisfaction beyond the experience which all agree is a bitter teacher.

Most of the recent confidence jobs in St. Louis have been worked on foreigners and "easy" persons who happen along at times from places remote from regular train service and other advantages of the higher civilization. They come along pretty regularly and fall into the clutches of glib talkers who sell them the free bridge, Railway Exchange Building, United Railways and other obviously valuable properties for very little money, comparatively speaking. Not so long ago a wayfarer from the Arkansas hills bought the municipal bridge for $350, but that deal was consummated while he was under the influence of a brand of liquor sold only in the worst of the barrel houses. Italians, Bulgarians, Croatians and residents of other foreign colonies in the vicinity of St. Louis are visited at times by clever workers who speak their languages and very often they annex the savings of some poor victim on the strength of a plausible tale, but the amounts, even when they succeed, are rarely imposing.

While the gold brick, three-card monte, green goods and shell game were the beginning of the confidence specialty, there has been an extensive elaboration of the system with the years that have elapsed since the performances of the pioneers. The latest and most popular method of garnering the money of the subject is called the "Florida Game," and takes its name from the popular winter resort State, which has long been a paradise for confidence men when the season is open.

It takes two or three men to stage the Florida plan, and it is designed to insure profitable returns. The victim is usually selected in advance and the men who look after this important detail are not in the habit of picking one of small means. Once he is chosen for the slaughter, the street man strikes up an acquaintance and walks along with him engaging him the while in conversation, calculated to remove any suspicion he may entertain that he is about to be buncoed. All at once the victim is led to a spot where he suddenly picks up a pocket book another member of the gang has dropped, just where he would be sure to find it. This is opened and found to contain a hundred dollars or so in bills, also a great number of stock certificates with gold seals attached, as well as papers of undoubted private character. There are cards in the case neatly engraved and they disclose the name and address of the owner. The steerer then suggests that they take the pocketbook to the address indicated and the finder, being an honest man, in most cases assents. They go to a neatly appointed office and are fairly overwhelmed with the thanks of the man who claims the book.

He insists on the finder keeping the money as a slight evidence of his gratitude and then he launches into a long speech telling what the loss of the stock certificates would have been to him had they not been found by an honest man. The honest man is then shown some private letters telling how such a mine or oil property, represented by the stock, had prospects that would make even a bonanza look insignificant. It then happens, and very often, too, that the finder is permitted to purchase some of the good stock, and when he buys he loses his own money as well as the reward paid him for his honesty in returning the pocket book. There are other forms of the same game, and it is having quite a run among the more accomplished of the crooks who know how to realize in a manner most substantial on one of the innate weaknesses of man.

Of course, if it is necessary to do a little scene shifting to get satisfactory results, the trained "con" will not confine his system to any hard and fast rules, as his bag of tricks is large and easily adapted for quick changes. Thus it often happens that the slippery conductor who can successfully develop the Florida idea in the daytime, has a way of turning up at night wearing a smile, in a game of cards, dice or some other gambling pastime, where the men marked to do the losing always deliver as per schedule. They are never permitted to have even half a chance.

In view of the annual crop gathered at the Florida winter resorts by these swindlers, it is not surprising that substantial recognition is given in the designation of one of the most popular games worked by the talent. Florida has long been a field for the confidence man's efforts, because the supply of victims is sure, once the season is open and the crowds with money take up their quarters. Detective authorities estimate that at least $3,000,000 was its contribution last year.

So the confidence operator goes merrily on, settling if forced to, when he is driven to a corner, but in most cases holding on to his loot, because his victims are so frequently unable, or, rather, unwilling, to invoke the law, which is broad enough to protect even the "easy mark" and the superlatively credulous.

Miss Forsythe Meets a Stranger

less than an hour ago, with this man! The noise of Fifth avenue was around her. She was almost at home. She felt very much alive, very much mistress of herself, very reassuringly the superior, in breeding at least, of this extremely rude hero who scoffed at any halo for himself.

"I shall not promise to forget," she smiled. "I shall always remember you very gratefully. But I can promise not to annoy you with protestations of interest and friendship. I will give you my card, and if you ever change your mind"——

He shook his head. They had drawn up now before the imposing entrance of her home, and he got out of the cab and held the door open for her. She overpaid the man magnificently and gave him some instructions; then she turned to her escort.

"He is going to take you back to Brooklyn," she said, smiling. "Or wherever you wish. Are you too proud to let me do that, when your hands are helpless?"

He hesitated, then hunched his shoulders and grinned. "Oh, all right," he said, awkwardly. "If it makes you feel better."

As she opened her card case he held up his bandaged hand again, a quick flush staining his dark face.

"Chuck it," he said. "I don't want it."

Seeing her chagrin, he added concisely:

"You see, you ain't caught on yet. It ain't you I helped. How could I, when I don't know who you are? It's jest a woman. That's the way I want it. It's jest"—— He sought for words to carry his final meaning to this persistent person, then triumphantly produced them. "It's all in the day's work. See?"

She saw. He raised his bandaged hand to his hat, got into the cab and closed the door. Looking at her through the open window, he nodded.

"Get a move on," he told the driver. "So long," he said to Miss Forsythe. Then he sank back in the cab and forgot her.

The driver lashed his reluctant steed and the cob moved off. For a full minute Helen Forsythe stood staring after it. He was going away. That was the end of him. He had probably saved her life, and he had taken the achievement as lightly as if she had been a kitten. Thinking it over, as he stood there, she realized why.

She had not been plucky. She had not met the situation as his "girl" would have met it. He didn't want her friendship, for—the truth came to her abruptly now—he really, simply had no interest in her, personally. They had met in a situation which tests souls, and he had weighed hers and found it wanting. She had been cowardly; she had been selfish; and, finally, to crown it all, she had tried to patronize him. For a moment she stood still, seeing herself in this new, relentless light. Then, very slowly and with a dazed look in her eyes, she ascended the steps and entered her home.

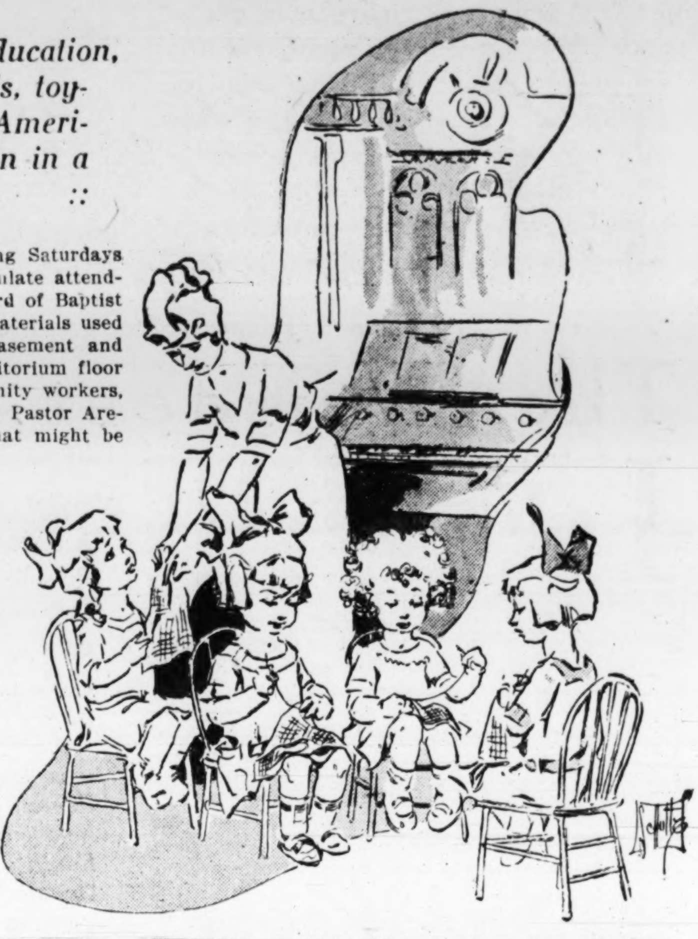
Putting a Church Edifice to Work Weekdays for Restless Children and Tired Mothers

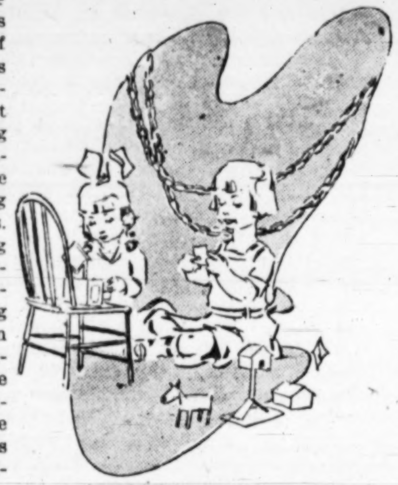
A St. Louis congregation develops the free play school idea—Fun, education, religion and moral training combined — Sewing for the little girls, toy-making and mechanical devices for the boys — Patriotism and Americanization featured—Relief for parents and recreation for children in a vacation-time experiment at Walnut Park :: :: :: ::



Even the wee kiddies are taught to make garments for their dolls, also paper and cardboard decorations.

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH at Emerson and Lilian avenues, on the edge of the the populous Walnut Park district, has solved the problem of what to do with the children during the school vacation season, and in the development of its system has won the heartiest approval of many mothers in that part of the city. To be strictly accurate and entirely just, it should be said that the women of Calvary Church have scored this achievement, especially in view of the fact that they have done all the work since the beginning, and have mapped out a program that will keep them employed until the end of July. And best of all, they enjoy every minute of the time they are thus occupied.

The women of the Calvary congregation have also demonstrated that practical uses may be made of expensive church edifices on other days of the week besides Sundays, without the slightest danger of laying themselves liable to a charge of profaning such holy places. And in working out their practical plan of doing something for the children of the community they have helped the mothers to a degree that surpasses even their fondest expectations. Mothers in the neighborhood of the church who have enrolled their children in the community school and workshop know that on the forenoons five day of every week their little ones are in excellen hands, learning something of value and indulging in play under skilled care and direction. They can go on with their household duties with satisfactory assurance that their children are not only out of the path of automobiles and protected from the call of alluring swimming holes of uncertain depths, but are having an enjoyable time in a happy combination of work and play, with enough religious and patriotic instruction to help them in character building of the right kind.



Toys are shaped by small but deft fingers and every little girl has her name entered on her products.

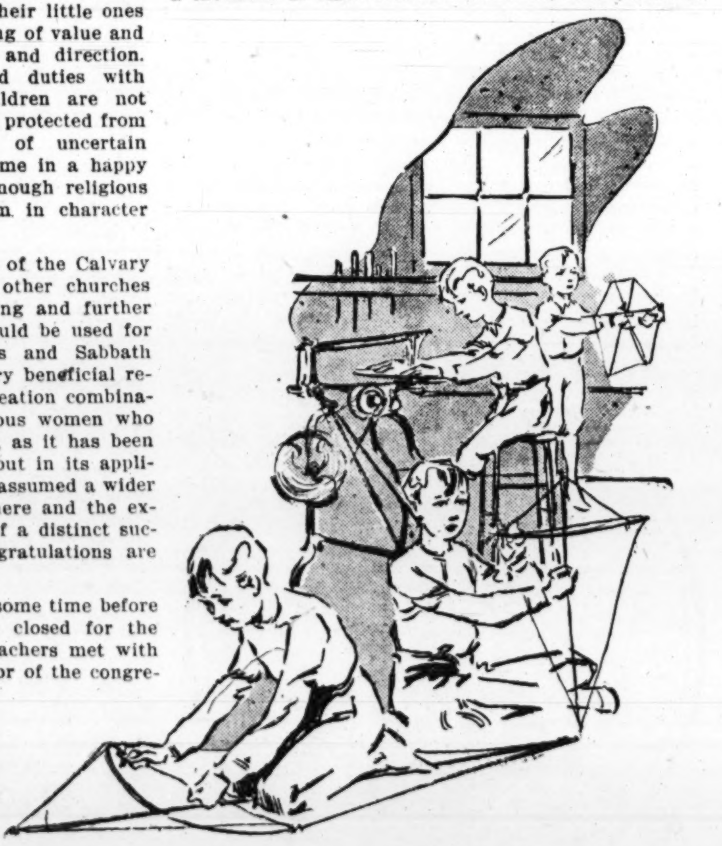
And this is not all. The experiment of the Calvary organization is working so well that other churches are getting ready to do the same thing and further demonstrate that church buildings should be used for purposes other than Sunday sermons and Sabbath school instruction, with promise of very beneficial results. The community school and recreation combination is not original with the industrious women who have undertaken to make it a success, as it has been successfully tried out in other cities, but in its application the Walnut Park movement has assumed a wider scope than has been attempted elsewhere and the experiment so far bears all the marks of a distinct success; so much so, in fact, that congratulations are coming from many sources.

The Calvary program was arranged some time before the public and private schools were closed for the summer and the call for volunteer teachers met with ready and willing response. The pastor of the congregation, Rev. Nelson Aregood, in cooperation with the Board of Baptist Missions and the various organizations conducted by the women, held a number of conferences and discussed many details before extending a general invitation to all the children in the community to come forward and enroll themselves for the season of five weeks.

It was decided to hold sessions every day from 9 to 11:30 a. m., excepting Saturdays and Sundays, and to offer prizes to stimulate attendance and interest in the work. The Board of Baptist Missions volunteered to furnish all the materials used in the play and work features. The basement and the Sunday School classroom on the auditorium floor were placed at the disposal of the community workers, with the privilege, cheerfully extended by Pastor Aregood, to take all the additional room that might be required. The opening day was Monday, June 23, when some 65 girls and boys, ranging in ages from 4 to 14, reported with shining faces and a maximum of childish curiosity to know what it was all about. They were greeted by the pastor and the corps of volunteer teachers and were soon made acquainted with the entire plan. The next day a dozen or more new children reported and on the third day there were 71 in the basement classes and 25 in the kindergarten section in the Sunday school classroom. Small organs were installed in both rooms and there were many tables to accommodate the little workers.

The fourth day swelled the attendance to the 100 mark and the patronesses and other managers of the enterprise felt greatly encouraged. The little ones were frankly told that it was a thoroughly democratic school and that if they wanted to exercise their privilege of self-determination they could come in their barefeet. Quite a number availed themselves of this liberty, particularly the little boys and some of the girls in the kindergarten section. None of the larger girls, however, felt the self-determination urge to this extent.

And what a treat those youngsters had spread out before them! There were rolls and rolls of colored papers and cardboard for the wee pupils to convert into play chairs, tables and other articles of furniture, and flags in abundance for all to help make the patriotic features duly impressive. In the basement were a thousand or more feet of kite sticks, twine, rolls of tissue paper and other materials necessary in the construction of kites, airplanes and other up-to-date toys. The girls were given thread, needles and cotton goods of many colors to sew on, and the teachers were there to properly direct the nimble little fingers in the way of turning out bean bags, handkerchief containers, aprons, laundry bags, doll dresses and other articles that appealed to them.



The larger boys are taught how to cut and measure their kite and airplane frames. It is needless to add that the embryo mechanics are keen for this work.

When the boys around 12, 13 and 14 were given their first instructions, a scroll saw and a few other pieces of machinery employed in manual training were installed and news of this acquisition brought in more boys who were not so keen for the Calvary Church plan at the first glance. The managers, having boys of their own, knew the fondness most growing boys have for mechanics and mechanical appliances, and having this knowledge, it was not difficult to win the support and boisterous enthusiasm of the lads up in the 14-year classification.

The exercises always open with music, hymns and patriotic airs being about equally distributed, and then there is a brief Bible lesson, followed in turn by a half-hour or so of story telling. The stories are arranged to suit the tastes of the pupils and they find attentive listeners in all the classes. The kindergarten children are entertained with tales of fairies, big black bears and the like, while the older children are given a pabulum calculated to increase their knowledge of American history and impress upon their young minds the sacrifices that were made by the founders of the country in making it a haven for the oppressed of all lands. Then there are the humorous anecdotes sandwiched in so as not to have the program too serious and formal.

To encourage self-confidence the boys and girls were invited at the beginning to join in the story telling, and after a few had broken the ice the first feeling of restraint was gradually dissipated and volunteers were much in evidence thereafter. Even among the youngest the willingness to help in the entertainment was pronounced, and it was in this way that the teachers discovered the high esteem in which Mrs. F. A. Walker's "Sandman" stories are held by the wee folks, who importune their elders nightly to read them this bedtime lore. A majority of the little narrators showed a close familiarity with these tales.

Though most of the teachers are members of the Calvary congregation, and therefore of the Baptist denomination, the school is free from all sectarianism, children of all affiliations being welcomed. This point was made clear in the invitations extended when the community plan was developed. Children of foreign parentage were particularly sought, as Americanization

"CON" MEN, ALL DURING THE WAR, THRIVED AS NEVER BEFORE

Loot gathered by sharpers last year estimated at $10,000,000 by William A. Pinkerton—How the smooth-tongued crowd flourished while honest men responded to the calls of patriotism—St. Louisans involved — New methods developed for separating the unwary rich from their cash—Many victims unwilling to prosecute, dreading publicity :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: ::

NOT even the greatest war of all times and its consequent drain on the American purse in the loan campaigns and numerous drives for necessary relief work under many auspices, restrained the activities of the confidence men, who play upon the credulity of mankind. In a recent statement, William A. Pinkerton, head of the detective agency which bears his name, estimated the amount gathered in by these bunko artists in 1918 at fully $10,000,000, despite the unprecedented call that was made on the savings of every man, woman and child in the United States.

His observation also showed that these shrewd operators who are continually devising new schemes for separating gullible humanity from its capital, never granted an armistice at any stage. The call on the patriotism of the people found these leeches impervious to any such feeling; they knew the frailty of their fellow men to jump at the opportunity to annex money without working for it; to incline the ear to a gilded prospect that bore the earmarks of the "sure thing," and to part with goodly sums of money without the formality of getting a report on the status of the people who had such glittering chances to offer.

That human nature is woefully weak in this respect is the reason why confidence operators thrive, why even penitentiary sentences never wean them from the pursuit of the "easy mark" whose tribe seems to keep on increasing, even though the literature of crime fairly bulges with the wreckage of such victims. It is scarcely to be wondered at, then, that the confidence man figures if he does not get the money from such persons, someone else will, and that it is up to him to let no prospect get away and fall into the clutches of some rival in the profession.

The higher efficiency which has been applied to nearly all professions and lines of business, has even been extended to the confidence game. Years ago it was the custom to work only on farmers and others who might class as unsophisticated, but that is all different now, Pinkerton declares. The really clever "con" man no longer seeks such quarry, but, obeying the larger impulse, seeks big prospects, and when he "makes a turn" the yield is something worth while. Accordingly there are confidence men now living in sumptuous style, with motor cars, well-gowned women assistants and attractive home or hotel surroundings. They have been known to clean up as much as $100,000 in a single transaction and many who have fallen into the toils in recent years were found, on investigation, to have very large bank accounts.

St. Louis has had its share of confidence men, but their operations in recent years, so far as police records go, can hardly be considered as highly profitable. But the hauls made by these polished deceivers are not always called to the attention of the police, as it happens quite frequently that the victims are in no mood to cry out their distress to the passing policeman, who might make the heart-rending details known to the public. A banker or other business man, who enjoys the reputation of a wizard in his home place, is certainly in no position to have the people in that same town learn how neatly he was fleeced when he got away from his own reservation, only to fall into the pitfalls of the big city.

Sometimes there are added reasons why he should become a stoic and bear his loss in silence, as some of the smoothest sharps employ feminine aids, who are handsome and otherwise adapted to play the vamp in real life. When the money is annexed by the confidence crew, the man who shows a disposition to call in the police only too often discovers that he has led himself into a very embarrassing situation, in which he is threatened under the operation of the Mann act. Many an irate victim has been quickly brought to an attitude of discreet silence and even resignation when "the lady in the case" began throwing out hints about what she might tell, if she wanted to be right mean. The use of women accomplices is becoming more common, as they lend safety as well as grace to the game. These same aids furnish potential blackmail possibilities besides.

Another reason why other victims prefer to hold their peace is the ignominy that would necessarily follow the admission that a perfectly model man who voted the dry ticket regularly in all the home-town elections, who attended the revivals and consistently denounced the devil and all his works and machinations should so far fall from grace as to come under the influence of drink as a prelude to his shearing by the confidence men. Being schooled in all the phases of their trade, the operators are never at a loss to find a way to wiggle out of most of their predicaments. But even the best of them get caught and then it is sometimes difficult to get the witnesses to take the stand and tell how they were lured and fleeced.

One of the most notable of the cases involving St. Louisans was that in which Henry Gallant, a wealthy Market street pawnbroker, fell into the hands of the shearers. When he got through figuring, his losses were given as $58,000. Unlike some of the others who met with similar misfortune, he was not averse to making all the details public. He has been active in the prosecution of the gang which lured him to New York, and only recently caused the arrest of Frank Thompson, alias Cherry, one of the most noted of the "big store" operators in that city. Thompson had just finished a term in one of the New York State penitentiaries, and as soon as he stepped out there was Gallant and an officer ready with another warrant which landed him back in a cell. Thompson, according to Gallant, got more of his money than any of the rest of the gang, not less than $38,000 of the whole amount passing into his pockets.

Gallant's dealing with the Thompson syndicate began in the fall of 1915 and the denouement came about four or five months later. He was induced on one of his trips to New York to visit Thompson's apartment, where he found many evidence of wealth, if not regal splendor. The furnishings were fairly dazzling and impressed Gallant most vividly. Those who were doing the steering then told him how Thompson worked it and there were exhibits in the apartment to prove what they were saying. There were gold cigarette cases and match boxes lying on the table, engraved in artistic style and they were there for their effect on the impressionable, as the lettering told that they had been presented to Thompson by such close friends as John Jacob Astor, J. Pierpont Morgan and other millionaire friends.

Then the whole secret was whispered to Gallant. Thompson was regularly invited to sit in all the poker games which such men of wealth were represented as being in the habit of getting up, just to while away time, and it was asserted that with all the tricks of the game that he could employe, if he felt in that humor, one could easily win a fortune. Gallant was told also that these rich men would never miss a few hundred thousand, if not a million or so, and that it was about time for Thompson to break up the game by cleaning these men, who, while long on Wall street lore, were as infants in the hands of a skilled player in a poker game. Of course, it was necessary for Thompson to go into the game with a large capital, as these Napoleons of finance had little time for a "piker."

This hint was not overlooked by the St. Louis pawnbroker, who had plenty of money lying idle in St. Louis banks, as well as goodly real estate holdings. There were other conferences and Thompson was removed from the "piker" classification by large cash advances to finance his plan of teaching the New York millionaires that they were not as skilled at poker as they were at other money-making pursuits. The other men who attended these little gatherings were also expected to help swell the Thompson exchequer, but the details that came out in the final recital indicated that Gallant had a monopoly in the producing end. The others who were so keen for fleecing the New Yorkers were well-trained confederates. The only St. Louis man in this case aside from Gallant was George R. Pohlman, son of a former Sheriff and Republican leader here, who, according to the police records, was sentenced to Blackwell's Island Prison in 1916 for wire-tapping. Pohlman, it appears, accompanied Gallant on his visits to the Thompson apartments and helped to convince him that the plan was well worth underwriting.

There was another case of two brothers who have made a comfortable fortune in the liquor business, which they inaugurated in St. Louis some years ago. Charles Diehr, with about a half-dozen other names, induced these whisky merchants to accompany him on an Eastern trip to see for themselves how easy it was for a smart man to get money from others without risking his liberty. The liquor men were shown a lot of literature and met the business associates of Diehr, whereupon they returned to St. Louis wearing expressions that indicated a feeling of disgust. They did not tell how much the trip had cost them, and they never indicated the same zeal for a complete vindication of the law that has characterized the demeanor of the Market street pawnbroker. They, it seems, preferred to suffer in silence, as has been the case with many other presumably keen business men who walked into palpable traps.

Most of the big confidence men of the country have been in St. Louis at different times, and the records of the Bureau of Identification tell that many of them were arrested and in some cases sent to cities where they were particularly desired, but very few large operations were attempted here. Chief of Detectives John P. Hannegan was for many years assigned to this class of detective work before his elevation to his present rank, and arrested a number of the most skilled confidence men in the country. Some of these were in the celebrated Mabray gang, which made a specialty of fake footraces, prize fights and horse races. This gang had ramifications reaching through many states and numbered its victims by the thousands. It was always an easy matter to get possession of a roll of bills covering an itching palm to bet on a "fixed" race, when the bettor had every reason to believe that, even though the whole scheme was crooked, there was no chance for him to lose. But he did lose every time, and that's why the Mabray list of "Mikes" looked so formidable when it was published following one of the successful raids on the organization.

Private detective agencies, which have to be supported, have no particular reason to deplore the fact that there are confidence men who prosper and therefore an inexhaustible supply of material on which such talent feeds, for the very good reason that many of these cases are passed to the special, or unofficial, organizations, which combat crime. As is elsewhere indicated, there are often cogent reasons why those who meet with misfortune at the hands of such criminals cannot afford to take the regular police or the Demolition of historic Art center at Nineteenth and Locust streets, to make way for automobile plant, recalls men of genius and learning to whose utterances of music and wisdom shattered walls have echoed—Fritz Kreisler made first St. Louis appearance there as boy prodigy—Other famous visitors Mark Twain, W. D. Howells, Joseph Jefferson, Admiral Peary and many of world's foremost painters :: :: ::

The Crow Memorial in its heyday as art-center of St. Louis.

FOR some weeks persons chancing to traverse Locust street at Nineteenth street have been more or less vaguely aware of a band of masons, wreaking destruction upon an edifice of white stone on the northeast corner. Such spectacles of havoc are too frequent to excite marked attention. Old landmarks are constantly crumbling and swirling down in the vortex of ravenous industry.

But if the memory of the passerby were alert for things of two or three decades ago, he could scarcely help pausing in this instance for a few moments of compassion. Glancing about the heap of debris, he would very likely come upon shattered bits of pediment with such dismembered inscriptions as "USEU" or "E ART." Then he would perhaps utter a sigh over these melancholy relics of an institution that in its heyday was the art center of St. Louis, its temple of beauty and learning. He could imagine the broken stones finding tongue and lamenting:

"What genius have we not heard uttered by instrument and voice! What beauties of brush and chisel have we not sheltered! What affluence of talent has been fostered within our walls! We have echoed back noble music and wise eloquence. We were the nest from which were hatched the Art Museum in Forest Park, the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, the Artists' Guild, the Sheldon Memorial Auditorium. Did our founder design us for so inglorious an end?"

To make way for an automobile plant the Wayman Crow Memorial Building, formerly known as the Museum of Fine Arts, is being torn stone from stone. The fane in which Fritz Kreisler and Josef Hofmann as boy prodigies first disclosed their genius to St. Louis auditors, in which the late John Fiske read many of the lectures afterwards embodied in his famous series of historical books, in which William Chase, Richard Miller, Paul Cornoyer and William Howe were trained as painters—this monument to art will give room to a structure resounding with the blasts of motor horns and the hammering of mechanics, and dedicated to the chaffering of buyers and sellers.

During 1878 there died in England Wayman Crow Jr., son of St. Louis' great merchant prince of the day, founder of the Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. Wayman Crow, who had had little schooling save in the college of experience, devoted much of his fortune to providing educational opportunities for others. It was he who, in 1853, without suggestion from anyone, drafted, introduced and obtained the passage of a bill chartering Washington University. In 1875 he presented to the university $25,000 to endow a chair of physics, and his total gifts to this institution approximated a quarter of a million dollars.

On the death of his son he decided to erect a memorial which would perpetuate the name of the boy who was cut off in his prime. It is doubtful if the project would have taken its ultimate form except for the influence of a friend, the late James E. Yeatman. The latter was director of the board of the Art School, which was then domiciled in an attic at Seventeenth street and Washington avenue. He persuaded Crow to consecrate his memorial to the use of the fine arts.

The edifice was erected in 1879, and two years later was dedicated and conveyed by deed to Washington University. It was, for that day, an ornate and costly structure, and it stood in the heart of Lucas place, the fashionable center of the city. It included an auditorium seating about 700, which, because of its splendid acoustics, became a favorite gathering place for lectures, recitals and smaller musical events.

Here the late Prof. Halsey C. Ives began assembling the pictures and art objects which formed the nucleus of the present great collection in the museum in Forest Park. From wealthy St. Louisans he obtained donations of paintings, some good and some bad; among the former are some of the gems of the gallery today, such as Sorolla's "Another Marguerite," Lefevre's "La Cigale" and Von Uhde's "Sewing Bee in Holland." Subscriptions were raised for the purchases of collections of pottery and ceramics, always keeping in mind utility as well as beauty.

Casts of classical sculptures were obtained—not casts of casts, but always reproductions directly from the originals. Copies of great works in the Louvre were secured by Prof. Ives' intercession with the Minister of Fine Arts in Paris. This collection grew into one of the finest in the country. Ellis Wainwright picked up a beautifully carved mantelpiece in a French chateau and gave money to have tables and cases carved in harmony with this acquisition. The furniture now decorates the library of the art school at Washington University. Another friend of the institution donated a collection of bronzes from Pompeii, Naples and Rome. It is related that Furtwaengler, the greatest authority on Greek archeology, went to the museum one morning at 9 o'clock during the World's Fair, and became so fascinated with this collection that he remained absorbed until noon, totally oblivious of a lecture he was to deliver at 10 o'clock. During those days began the collections of reproductions of German, Italian and Oriental metal work, including the big cast of the Ghiberti doors at Florence, and of fictile ivories, or carvings from altars and church decorations of the Renaissance.

Here was held the very first of those itinerant exhibitions of paintings which have since become a national artistic enterprise. It was held by the Society of Western Artists, which had been organized in Chicago. Such an undertaking had never been essayed before, but it proved so successful that the idea spread all over the country. Many of the foremost artists of the world were visitors there during the World's Fair—men like Julian Story, Anders Zorn, Alexander Harrison, Mesdag, the Dutch painter of marines, and Schultzberg from Sweden. Among the students trained here, who afterwards became famous, may be mentioned William Chase, Richard Miller, George Aid, the etcher; William McKillops, Fern Forrester, Alice Beach Winter, Paul Cornoyer and William Howe, the distinguished animal painter.

The museum was at first for the use of students of the art school only, but the public became interested and the movement for a municipal art museum began. But it had grown steadily clear that the building was no longer practicable. Lucas place had long since passed as a residential center, and the neighborhood deteriorated until young women were no longer willing to attend night classes there. The springing up of factories in the downtown district destroyed the sunlight; the skylight of the school was so assailed by smoke and so difficult to keep clean that on many days it was impossible to work. There used to be a joke to the effect that if anyone wished to view the art galleries he should equip himself with candles.

So, 10 years ago, the building was abandoned, and the art school and Art Museum, being separated, removed to their present domiciles. For a few years the building was used as a library for the Washington University Medical School, and a few artists maintained studios there.

John Fiske, as visiting lecturer on history at Washington University, always read his addresses at Memorial Hall. Whenever a celebrity came to town, he was usually entertained there with a reception. Admiral Peary was one of these, after his discovery of the North Pole. Thither came at various times Joseph Jefferson, the actor; Edward C. Pickering, the celebrated astronomer; William Dean Howells and Mark Twain, the latter of whom never failed to praise the properties of the hall for easy public speaking.

No less distinguished were the musical celebrities who gave concerts at the auditorium. There was formerly in existence an organization of some 200 women called the Union Musical Club, which sponsored many recitals. Under their auspices Fritz Kreisler, as a boy of about 15, in short trousers, first came within the ken of music lovers here. Those who recall his playing say that it was then as brilliant and consummate as it is today. In one number his E-string snapped and pieces flew into the audience. There were several children in the front rows, and there was a scramble for the bits, which some of them hoarded as mementos for years. Kreisler was on tour with Moritz Rosenthal, the eminent pianist, who was so chagrined at finding that his juvenile colleague won the lion's share of the applause that he declared he would never again go on a joint tour.

Thither also, musicians of a former generation relate, came Josef Hofmann, also a boy prodigy. It was the year of his first American tour, before the Vanderbilts became patrons of the brilliant Polish lad and sent him back to Europe for further study. Other distinguished musicians heard at Memorial Hall include Mme. Schumann-Heink, Vladimir de Pachmann, Karl Rummell, Julia Rive King, Edouard Remenyi, Mme. Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler, Marie Brema, Plunkett Green, Dr. Louis Maas and Louis Sherwood.

The Memorial Hall auditorium, being wide rather than deep, was especially found adaptable to chamber music, which, almost extinct here at present, was in former days probably the most popular form of musical activity. The Jacobsen Quintet came from Cincinnati and the Kneisel Quartet later gave annual concerts. Still later, for several years, Theodore Spiering, today a distinguished violinist, a native of St. Louis, came from Chicago with the quartet bearing his name. The viola was played by Adolf Weidig, a leading professor of music in Chicago, one of whose compositions was played by the Symphony Orchestra a few years ago.

Numerous local chamber music organizations were heard at the auditorium. In early years there was the Philharmonic Quintet Club, of which Ernest Spiering, father of Theodore, was first violin. The elder P. G. Anton was the viola player. John Boehmen played second violin, Louis Mayer, violoncello, and Louis Hammerstein, piano. One of its successors was the Mendelssohn Quintet, of which Alfred G. Robyne was for a short time pianist, being succeeded by Victor Ehling. George Heerich was first violin and Karl Froelich, who could drop his instrument and sing an admirable bass solo, was violoncellist. This position was held during the last three seasons of the club by P. G. Anton the younger. The Mendelssohn Quintet usually gave five or six concerts a season. Concerts is the kind who will fight to the last ditch. Perhaps he hasn't any chance, but if he ever does learn how we got hold of his letters and discovered the location of that vein of ore, he's going to turn this whole affair inside out and catch us red-handed. You made a fool play tonight."

"That wasn't my fault," Lacy protested sullenly. "The fellow misunderstood; however, there won't be no fuss made over a Mexican."

"I'm not so sure of that; Westcott will know it was meant for him and be on his guard. Anyhow it was a fool's trick."

"Well, we do things different out here from what you do in New York. It's my way to take no chances, and when a man's dead he can't talk."

"I'm not so sure of that; there's been many a lad hung on the testimony of a dead man. Now see here, Lacy, this is my game, and I propose playing it in my own way. You came in under those conditions, didn't you?"

"I reckon so, still there wasn't much to it when I came in. This mining stunt developed later out of those letters Westcott sent East. This man Beaton here offered me so much to do a small job for him, and I named my price without caring a whoop in hell what it was all about. I don't now, but I've learned a few things since, and am beginning to think my price was damn low. You never came way out here just to stop me from tunneling into Westcott's mine."

The other hesitated.

"No," he admitted at last, "I did not even learn what was being done until after I got here."

"Beaton sent for you?"

"Not exactly. I never had any personal connection with him in the case. I am not sure he ever heard of me, unless the woman told him. He was working under her orders, and wired her when Cavendish got away to come out at once. He didn't know what to do."

Lacy laughed, and began to refill his pipe.

"That was when I first began to smell a mouse," he said, more at ease. "The fellow was so scared I caught on that this was no common kidnaping outfit, like I had thought before. He wasn't easy pumped, but I pumped him. I told him we'd have the guy safe enough inside of 24 hours—hell! there wasn't no chance for him to get away, for the blame fool headed east on foot straight across the desert—but he sent off the wire just the same. That's what I thought brought you along." He leaned over and lowered his voice. "There was a dead man back East, wasn't there?"

"What difference does that make?"

"None, particularly, except to naturally increase the worth of my services. I'm not squeamish about stiffs, but I like to know what I am doing. What are you holding on to this other fellow for?"

Enright walked nervously across the room, chewing at his cigar, only to come back and face his questioner.

"Well, I suppose I might as well tell you," he said, almost savagely. "You know so damn much now, you better know it all. You're in too deep already to wiggle out. We made rather a mess of it in New York and only a bit of luck helped us through. We had the plans ready for three months, but nothing occurred to give us a chance. Then all at once Cavendish got his first telegram from Westcott, and decided to pull out, not telling anyone where he was going. That would have been all right, for we had a man shadowing him, but at the last moment he quarreled with the boy we had the woman slated up with."

"Hold on; what boy?. Let me get this straight."

"His nephew, and only relative—John Cavendish."

"Oh, I see; he was his heir; and you had him fixed?"

"We had him where he couldn't squeal, and have yet. That was Miss La Rue's part of the game. But, as I was saying, there was a quarrel and the uncle suddenly decided to draw up a will, practically cutting John out entirely."

"Hell! Some joke that!"

"There was where luck came to our help. He employed me to draw the will, and told me he planned to leave the city for some time. As soon as I could I told the others over the phone, and we got busy."

Lacy struck his knee with his hand, and burst into a laugh.

"So, he simply disappeared! Your idea was that an accident might happen, and our friend Beaton here took the same train to render any necessary assistance."

"No," said Enright, frankly, "murder wasn't part of our plan; it's too risky. We had other means for getting this money—legally."

Lacy stared, incredulous.

"And there hasn't been no killin'?"

Enright shook his head.

"Not by any of us."

"Then how about that dead man in New York—the one that was buried for Cavendish? Oh, I read about that. Beaton showed it to me in the paper."

"That's the whole trouble," Enright answered gravely. "I do not know who he was, or how he came there. All I know is, he was not Frederick Cavendish. But his being found there dead in Cavendish's apartments, and identified, puts us in an awful hole, if the rest of this affair should ever become known. Do you see? The charge would be murder, and how are we going to hold the real Cavendish alive, and not have it come out?"

"The other one—the stiff—wasn't Cavendish?"

"Certainly not; you know where Cavendish is."

"I never saw Fred Cavendish; I wouldn't know him from Adam's off ox. I've got the fellow Beaton turned over to me."

"Well, he's the man; the dead one isn't."

"How do you know?"

"Because Frederick Cavendish bought and signed a round-trip ticket to Los Angeles, and boarded the midnight train. My man reported that to me, and Beaton just had time to catch the same train before it pulled out. Isn't that true, Ned?"

"Yes, it is, and I never left him."

"But," insisted Lacy stubbornly, "did you see the dead one?"

"Yes. I kept away from the inquest, but attended the funeral to get a glance at his face. It seemed too strange to be true. The fellow wasn't Cavendish; I'd swear to that, but he did look enough like him to fool anybody who had no suspicions aroused. You see, no one so much as questioned his identity—Cavendish had disappeared without a word even to his valet; this fellow, despite the wounds on his face, looked enough like him to be a twin, dressed like him, is found dead in his apartments. Dammit, it's spooky, the very thought of it."

"But you saw a difference?"

"Because I looked for it; I never would have otherwise. Of course, what I looked at was a dead face in the coffin, a dead face that was seared and burned. But anyway, I was already convinced that he was not the man. I am not sure what I should have thought if I had met him alive upon the street."

Lacy appeared amused, crossing the room and expectorating into the open stove.

"You fellows make me laugh," he said grimly. "I am hardly idiot enough to be taken in by that sort of old wives' tale. However, if that is your story stick to it—but if you were to ever tell it in court it would take a jury about five minutes to bring in their verdict. Still, I see what you're up against—the death of this fellow means that you are afraid now to leave Cavendish alive. If he ever appears again in the flesh this New York murder will have to be accounted for. Is that it?"

"It leaves us in an awkward position."

"All right. We understand each other then. Let's get to business. You mant me to help out in a sort of accident, I presume—a fall over a cliff or the premature discharge of blasting powder; these things are quite common out here."

Neither Enright nor Beaton answered, but Lacy was in no way embarrassed by their silence. He knew now he had the whip-hand.

"And to prevent any stir at this end, before you fellows get hold of the stuff, you want me to call off my working gang and let Westcott alone. Come, now, speak up."

"Yes," acknowledged Enright. "I don't care so much for Westcott, but I want things kept quiet. There's a newspaper woman down at the hotel. I haven't been able to discover yet what she is doing out here, but she's one of the big writers on the New York Star. If she got an inkling of this affair"——

"Who is she? Not the girl you had that row over, Beaton?"

The gunman nodded.

"She's the one."

"Do you suppose Jim Westcott knew her before? He brought her to the hotel and was mighty touchy about her."

"Hell, no; she told me all about that—why, she cut that fellow dead in the dining room when he tried to speak to her the next day."

Lacy whistled a few bars, his hands thrust deep into his trousers pockets. Then, after a few minutes' cogitation, he resumed:

"All right, then; we'll take it as it lies. The only question unsettled, Enright, is—what is all this worth to me?"

CHAPTER XV.

MISS LA RUE PAYS A CALL.

SOME slight noise caused Westcott to straighten up and turn partially around. He had barely time to fling up one arm in the warding off of a blow. The next instant was one of mad, desperate struggle, in which he realized only that he dare not relax his grip on the wrist of his unknown antagonist. It was a fierce, intense grapple, every muscle strained to the utmost, silent except for the stamping of feet, deadly in purpose.

The knife fell from the cramped fingers, but the fellow struggled like a demon, clutching at the miner's throat, but unable to confine his arms. Twice Westcott drove his clenched right into the shadowed face, smashing it the last time so hard the man's grip relaxed, and he went staggering back. With a leap forward, the battle fury on him, Westcott closed before the other could regain position. Again the clenched fist struck, and the fellow went down in the darknes, whirling backward to the earth—and lay there, motionless.

An instant, panting, breathless, scarcely yet comprehending what had occurred, the victor stared at the huddled figure, his arm drawn back. Then he became aware of excitement within, the sound of voices, the tramp of feet on the floor, the sudden opening of a door. A gleam of light shot out, revealing the figures of men. With one spring he was across the shapeless form on the ground, and had vanished into the darkness beyond.

Lacy was first to reach the unconscious body, stumbling over it in the black shadow, as he rushed forward, revolver in hand. He cursed, rising to his knees, and staring about in the silent darkness.

"There's a man lying here—dead likely. Bring a light. No, the fellow is alive. Dammit, it's Moore, and completely knocked out. Here you—what happened?"

The fellow groaned, opened his eyes, and looked about dazedly.

"Speak up, man!" and Lacy dragged him to a sitting position in no gentle fashion. "Who hit you?"

"There—there was a fellow at that window there. I—I saw him from below, and crept up behind him, but he turned around just as I struck."

"Who was he?"

"I never saw his face. He hit me first."

"He was at the window, you say?"

"Yes; kneelin' down like he was lookin' into the room. Oh, Lord!"

Lacy crunched over to the side of the shack, and bent down to get a better view. His fingers came in contact with the knife which upheld the sash, and he plucked it out, holding it up into the beam of light passing through the rent in the torn curtain. He stared at the curiously carved handle intently.

"This is certainly hell," he said soberly. "That's Jim Westcott's jack knife. He's been listening to all we said. Now we are up against it."

"What's that?" The question came from Enright, still at the corner of the house, unable to tell what had happened.

"Westcott has been here listening to our talk. He pried up the window with his knife, so he could hear. Moore caught him, and got knocked out."

"He—he heard our talk in—in there," repeated the dazed lawyer, his lips trembling. "And—has got away? Good God, man, where has he gone? After the Sheriff?"

Lacy stared at him through the darkness, and burst into a roar of unrestrained laughter.

"Who? Jim Westcott? The Sheriff? Well, hardly at this stage of the game. That's your way down East, no doubt, but out in this country the style is different. No, sir; Westcott isn't after any Sheriff. In the first place, he hasn't any evidence. He knows a thing or two, but he can't prove it; and if we move faster than he does we'll block his game—see?"

Lacy leaned forward and hissed his answer into Enright's ear.

"Put Cavendish where he can't get at him. There's no other chance. If Jim Westcott ever finds that fellow alive our goose is cooked. And we've got the advantage—we know where the man is."

"And Westcott doesn't?"

"Exactly, but he will know. He'll comb these hills until he finds the trail—that's Jim Westcott. Come on back inside, both of you, and I'll tell you my plan. No, there is no use trying to run him down tonight—a hundred men couldn't do it. What's that, Moore? Go on to the shafthouse and let Dan fix you up. No, we won't need any guard. That fellow will never come back here again tonight. Come on, boys."

The door closed behind them, shutting out the yellow glow, and leaving the hillside black and lonely. A bucket of rock rattled onto the dump, and Moore, limping painfully, swearing with every step, clambered up the dark trail toward the shafthouse.

Miss Donovan did not go down to supper. Beaton waited some time in the office, his eyes on the stairs but she failed to appear, and he lacked the necessary courage to seek her in her own room. Then Enright called him and compelled his attendance. The absence of the girl was not caused from any lack of appetite, as she subsidized the Chinaman to smuggle her a supply of food by way of the back stairs, which she ate with decided relish, but she had no desire to show any anxiety regarding a meeting with the newcomers.

Her newspaper experience had given her some knowledge of human nature and she felt convinced that her task of extracting information would be greatly simplified if these people sought her company first.

This theory, however, became somewhat strained as the time passed quietly, and seemed to break entirely when from her window she saw Beaton and the heavy-set man ride out of town on a pair of livery horses. She watched them move down the long street and turn into the trail leading out across the purple hills. The lowering darkness finally hid them from view. She was stil at the window, beginning to regret her choice, when someone rapped at the door. She arose to her feet and took a step or two forward, her heart beating swifter.

"Come in."

The door opened and the light from the windows revealed Miss La Rue, rather tastefully attired in green silk, her blonde hair fluffed artfully and a dainty patch of black court plaster adorning one cheek. She stood

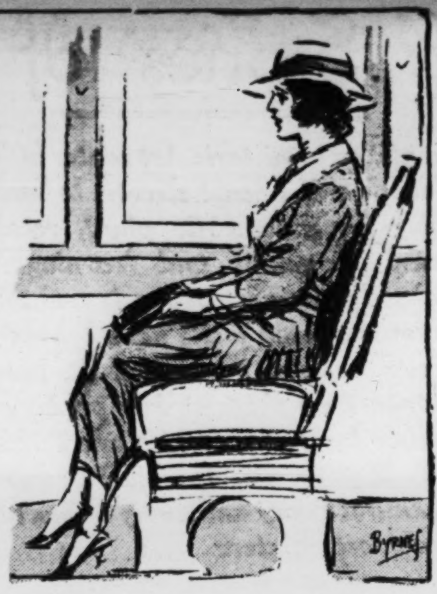
Miss Forsythe Meets a Stranger

By Elizabeth Jordan



MISS FORSYTHE made her way through the crowded subway car and sat down in a cross-seat, with a deepening of her instinctive distaste for this manner of travel.

She objected to such enforcedly close association with human creatures not of her class; to the lack of proper ventilation and, above all, to the sense "the underground" always awakened in her, of being trapped and helpless in case of accident and danger. She was not a nervous woman, in the usual sense of the words; but she had a vivid imagination, and unless her mind was strongly preoccupied, journeys by this kind of transportation—happily rare for her—were often made to the accompaniment of grewsome scenes her fancy called up; scenes in which the most restful showed the train stalled under the river for an hour or more, with lights turned off and the passengers in a resulting panic.

She had a special, really abnormal, horror of the dark, dating back, she believed, to a certain experience under ether in which she had seemed to be in a blackness and alone for centuries, while generations lived and died around her. Something of the mental agony of this obsession always returned to her, in after years, when she found herself in complete darkness. To give it the least possible play she slept with a night lamp in her room, and carried with her by day a tiny electric candle, warranted to flash out in a weak but cheering illumination at the pressure of a finger.

Recalling this now, with the reassurance the thought of it always brought, she glanced into her handbag. Yes, it was there, and she touched it fondly before she closed the bag, recalling how many times it had served her in the unexpected tunnels encountered in home and foreign travel. Then, suddenly realizing the trend of her thoughts, she set her teeth in quick, disgusted rejection of such puerile weakness, and, to rout it, began observing her fellow passengers.

She reminded herself that she had deliberately elected to travel in the tube, rather than in her comfortable motor car. She told herself again that she could never be the captain of her soul until she had taught herself to overcome this degrading fear of what others accepted as a commonplace incident of daily life.

She was alone in a cross-seat, facing forward. Directly opposite her was a young man—a workman, judging from his clothing. He had a well-shaped head, very thick, wavy black hair, gray eyes, a collar which was not quite fresh, and strong, well-shaped hands, whose nails he was at this moment carefully but primitively manicuring with the small blade of a pocket knife.

Miss Forsythe shut her eyes to the spectacle in esthetic disgust. It made her cold. It made her ill. It awakened a hot repulsion. She kept her eyes closed as long as she dared, hoping that when she opened them the operation would have ended. But no. The wretch had finished his left hand, and was beginning beautification of the right with unabated interest and with an awkwardness which showed that he was not lefthanded.

Miss Forsythe shifted her glance from the plebeian hands and fixed it on his face, hoping her direct gaze would attract his attention and then remind him, if his indecency was culpable indifference, that public conveyances were not suitable places for fundamental toilet rites. It failed to do so. He was too absorbed in his horrible occupation. She turned her head and stared around the car. There was a vacant seat just across from her. Should she take it?

She hesitated. She had that perfect courtesy based on extreme consideration for others, and, though she considered this fellow creature impossible, she was not willing to risk wounding his sensibilities. Her change of seat could hardly fail to do this, marked as it would be. Even if it failed to attract his attention, it would suggest to their neighboring fellow passengers why she had moved away. She hesitated, her tortured nerves on edge, her eyes irritably averted from the maddening spectacle, which seemed to draw them like a magnet. Turn which way she would, she could still see those thick, stubby, industrious fingers, that frightful knife, that irritating insensibility.

After all, why hesitate? she asked herself. Why consider the feelings of one who even at that moment was writing himself down as lost to the most elementary decencies of life in a civilized community? His actions forfeited his claim to its consideration, by branding him as one outside the pale of refined persons. Of course, he was ignorant—but if he had even the most elementary imagination, or the least possible sense of consideration for others, he must realize that the protest her action would convey was warranted. She arose and took the vacant seat.

After a moment she glanced across at him, her eyes drawn irresistibly to what she felt would be his shamed or possibly indignant face. He was still placidly at his work, but he glanced up and his eyes met hers. It was plain that he saw her for the first time. Into his eyes crept the look with which she was so familiar—the masculine tribute to striking feminine beauty.

His regard, however, was singularly impersonal. He looked at her intently for a moment, as he might have looked at a good horse or a new make of automobile. Then his glance fell on his hands again. He finished trimming the nail of the little finger, closed his knife and leaned back in his seat. He had not known she was there when she sat opposite him. He did not care where she was now. He regarded his nails with a careful, critical scrutiny, as an artist studies his canvas after some good touches. Then, as if satisfied, he thrust his hand into his pocket and brought out an evening newspaper. Into this he plunged, in oblivion to his surroundings.

The train, in the meantime, had entered the tube and was half-way to Brooklyn. Miss Forsythe had not noticed the stop at the last station, but she realized that she was under the river now by the clamminess of the atmosphere and the sharply metallic ring of the car wheels on the rails. She had just begun to congratulate herself on the near end of an experience always intensely unpleasant to her, when the train stopped with a suddenness that nearly pitched her into the opposite seat. Shouts, the grinding of brakes and the sharp crash of glass followed. Almost simultaneously the lights went out, leaving the car in complete darkness.

For an instant there was absolute silence. Then it was broken by a woman's shriek, excited questions, a man's oath, the sound of scuffling. The passengers were springing to their feet or already making their way along the aisle in an effort to reach the door. Panic was betraying itself.

From the end of the car a voice shouted: "Keep your seats. The doors are locked. No one can leave the car. There's no danger." Men projected themselves toward the voice, obviously that of a train guard. There were protests and more oaths. The women shrieked again and a baby, far down at the end of the car, hastened to lend its slight but poignant note to the uproar.

Helen Forsythe took a grip on herself and sat perfectly still, rigid with terror. The fear which had so often paralyzed her imagination was now trebled by its realization. Her nightmares had taken this form, and now she must go through the actuality, so much worse than any phantom of sleep. She wanted to shriek with the horror of it, but the dominating note of a gentlewoman restrained her. She set her teeth, with the hope that she might be given strength to act like a rational human being and not like an hysterical coward.

Then she remembered the electric candle, and with a leap of the heart felt for her handbag. It was gone. Evidently the jolt of the sudden stop, which had pitched her forward, had also sent the bag flying. But surely, she reasoned, it could not be far. She groped for it wildly—in her lap, in the seat, in the empty seat opposite her, and finally on the floor. It was not to be found. She must go through this episode without it, then, whatever developed; and already the horror of the surrounding blackness was eating into her very soul; already it had become to her a substance that weighed upon her as if she had been buried, uncoffined, 50 feet underground. Her lips parted in a groan she tried to stifle. At that instant she felt a groping hand touch her shoulder, and, happily, at the same time heard a masculine voice.

"Feelin' all right?" it said, calmly. "I saw you was alone before the jolt came, so I thought you might be frightened."

Oh, that delivering hand, whoever it was! The haughty Miss Forsythe caught it, held it, pulled its owner toward her, yet mastered enough pride withal to answer with a semblance of calmness.

"Thank you," she said, breathlessly. "I wish you would sit down beside me. I do feel nervous—very nervous."

She felt a body sink into the vacant seat beside her, but she could not, she dared not, release that saving hand—the link that bridged the awful chasm which had seemed to stretch between her and a human world. The hand held her gloved one with a firm, pleasant grip of understanding sympathy.

"There ain't no danger," said the voice out of the darkness. From the sound of it, it was very close. She realized that the stranger had turned sidewise on the seat, facing her. He went on, reassuringly, his voice taking on a slightly cajoling quality, as if he were trying to divert a child.

"You see, the minute there's an accident they turn off the power. That turns off the lights, too. But it's got to be done, for then nothin' can happen: No trains can run into us. Nothin' can catch fire. All we got to do is to keep still an' be patient till the car starts."

"I—I—know."

Helen Forsythe tried to keep her voice from trembling, but it was very unsteady. "I dislike the dark. I—I mean"—her voice grew a little firmer; she would not lie to this unknown friend—"I mean I'm actually afraid of it. I have a peculiar horror of it."

"I see." He spoke with the same quiet reassurance, with the same understanding. "Some folks is like that. I know a girl that is. She's all right, too; got lots of pluck. But if she was here she'd throw a fit. She won't even go to the theater if there's dark scenes." Then, with an evident intention to divert her thoughts, he went on:

"We got some good shows in New York now, all right, all right. I ain't laffed for years like I did over 'The Man From Harlem.'"

She could not follow this friendly lead, nor could she yet release his hand. Discussing local dramatics with an actuality like this claiming her attention was quite beyond her. She recalled the fact that witty or sagacious remarks, of almost academic quality, had been made between the tumbril and the descending blade of the guillotine. But the victim of the Revolution had had a ride in the open air, and the precious light of heaven flashed on him as well as on the oblique blade. In her incipient panic, however, she realized how well this Samaritan cavalier was rising to the demand on his tact and sympathy. He held her hand quietly, firmly, as he would have held the hand of a small child for whom he felt responsible.

"Have you any matches?" she asked, suddenly.

"Yes, I guess so."

"Will you light one? If I could see one flash"——

The mere promptness of his response was sustaining to her.

"Sure I will," he said, with leisurely heartiness. "Tell you what I'll do." He released his hand now, to search his pockets. The fastidiously exclusive Miss Forsythe grasped his coat. "I'll light one now. Then when it's burnt up you stand it as long as you can, and after a while I'll light another. The guard'll kick if we light many."

The match flared up as he spoke, and she saw his face in its sudden, brief illumination. It was the young man of the trimmed finger nails, smiling at her in an every-day reassuring way. Even as she discovered his identity the light died out. He apparently put out the charred end of the match between his calloused thumb and index finger.

"How long will this last?" she faltered, when the blackness rolled over them again.

"Oh, not long, I guess," he said, briskly. "Depends on what's happened out there. We must 'a' been here five or 10 minutes now."

Five or 10 minutes! To her it had seemed an hour.

"I'll go ask the conductor, if you want," he volun-

The Strange Case of Cavendish (Continued)

Last night I went in our drift clear to the end, and put my ear to the rock. It was far away, but I hear."

"No, no, Jose; that's impossible. Why, their tunnel is over a hundred yards away; not even the sound of dynamite would penetrate that distance through solid rock. You heard your heart beat."

"No, senor," and Jose was upon his feet gesticulating. "It was the pick—strike, strike, strike; then stop an' begin, strike, strike, strike again. I hear, I know."

"Then they must be running a lateral, hoping to cut across our vein somewhere within their lines."

"And will that give them the right, senor?"

Westcott sat, has head resting on one hand, staring thoughtfully into the dying fire; the yellow flame of the oil lamp between them on the table flickered in the draft from the open window. Here was a threatening combination of forces.

"I am not sure, Jose," he answered slowly. "The mining law is full of quirks, although, of course, the first discoverer of a lead is entitled to follow it—it's his. The trouble here is that instead of giving notice of discovery I have kept it a secret, and even blocked up the tunnel. If the La Rosita gang push their drift in and strike that same vein, they will claim original discovery, and I reckon they'd make it stick. I didn't suppose Lacy had the slightest idea we had struck color. Nobody knew it, but you and I, Jose."

"Never I say a word, senor."

"I am sure of that, for I knew exactly where the news came from. Lacy spilled the beans in a bit of misunderstanding we had last night down in Haskell. My letters and telegrams East to Cavendish went wrong and the news has come back here to those fellows. They know just what we've struck, and how our tunnel runs; I was fool enough to describe it all to Cavendish and send him a map of the vein. Now they are driving their tunnel to get in ahead of us."

He got to his feet, bringing his fist down with such a crash on the table as to set the lamp dancing.

"But, by God, it's not too late! We've got them yet. The very fact that Lacy is working a night shift is evidence that he hasn't uncovered the vein. We'll tear open that tunnel the first thing in the morning, Jose, and I'll make proof of discovery before noon. Then we'll put a bunch of good men in here, and fight it out, if those lads get ugly. Come on, let's take a look in there tonight."

He picked up the lamp, and turned! At the same instant a sudden red glare flamed in the black of the open window, accompanied by a sharp report. The bullet whizzed past Westcott's head so closely as to sear the flesh, crashed into the lamp in his hand, extinguishing it, then struck something beyond. There was no cry, no sound except a slight movement in the dark. Westcott dropped to the floor below the radius of dim light thrown by the few embers left in the fireplace, and, revolver in hand, sought to distinguish the outlines of the window frame. Failing in this, he crept noiselessly across the floor, unlatched the closed door and emerged into the open air.

It was a dark night, with scarcely a star visible, the only gleam of radiance coming from a light across the gulch, which he knew burned in the shafthouse of the La Rosita.

Everything about was still, with the intense silence of mountain solitude. Not a breath of air stirred the motionless cedars. Cautiously he circled the black cabin, every nerve taut for struggle, every sense alert. He found nothing to reward his search—whoever the coward had been, he had disappeared among the rocks, vanishing completely in the black night. The fellow had not even waited to learn the effect of his shot. He had fired pointblank into the lighted room, sighting at Westcott's head, and then ran, assured no doubt the speeding bullet had gone straight to the mark. It was not until he came back to the open door that the miner thought of his companion. What had become of Jose? Could it be that the Mexican was hit? He entered, shrinking from the task, yet resolute to learn the truth; felt his way along the wall as far as the fireplace, and stirred the embers into flame. They leaped up, casting a flickering glow over the interior. A black, shapeless figure, scarcely discernable as a man, lay huddled beneath the table. Westcott bent over it, feeling for the heart and turning the face upward. There was no visible mark of the bullet wound, but the body was limp, the face ghastly in the grotesque dance of the flame. The assassin had not wasted his shot—Jose Salvari would never see Mexico again.

CHAPTER XIV.

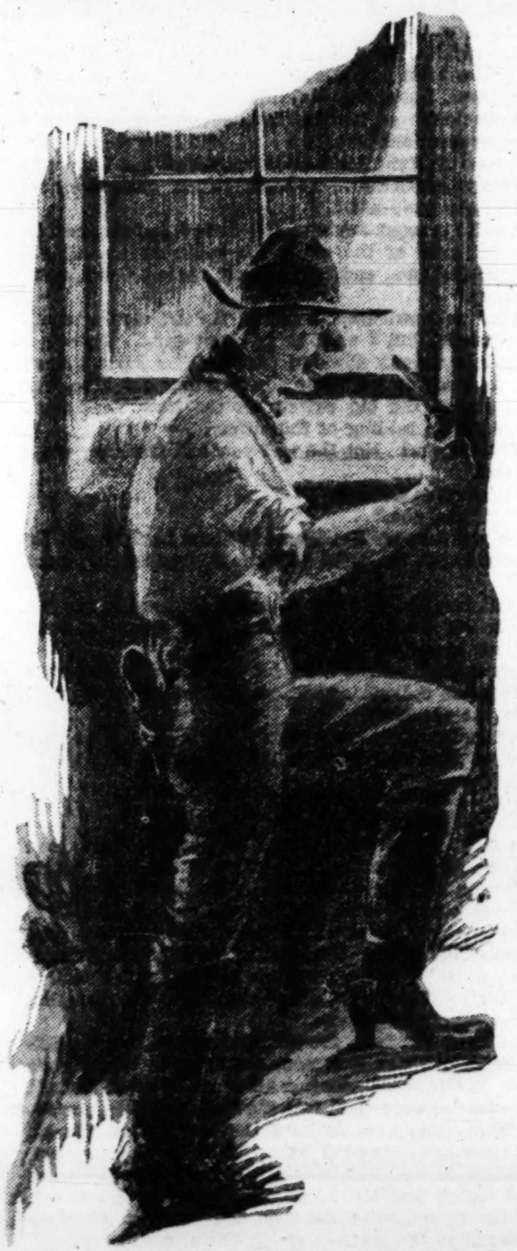
LACY LEARNS THE TRUTH.

WESTCOTT straightened the body out, crossing the dead hands, and covered the face with a blanket stripped from a bunk. The brief burst of flame died down, leaving the room in semi-darkness. The miner was conscious only of a feeling of dull rage, a desire for revenge. The shot had been clearly intended for himself. The killing of Jose had been a mere accident. In all probability the murderer had crept away believing he had succeeded in his purpose. If he had lingered long enough to see anyone emerge from the hut, he would naturally imagine the survivor to be the Mexican. Good! This very confidence would tend to throw the fellow off his guard; he would have no fear of Jose.

Westcott's heart rose in his throat as he stood hesitating. The dead man was only a Mexican, a servant, but he had been faithful, had proven himself an honest soul; and he had died in his service, as his substitute. All right, the affair was not going to end now; this was war, and, while he might not know who had fired the fatal shot, he already felt abundantly satisfied as to who had suggested its efficacy. There was only one outfit to be benefited by his being put out of the way—Bill Lacy's gang. If they already had Fred Cavendish killed, or held prisoner in their power, it would greatly simplify matters if he should meet death accidentally, or at the hands of parties unknown. Why not? Did he not stand alone between them and fortune? Once his lips were sealed, who else could combat their claims? No one; not a human being knew his secret—except the little he had confided that afternoon to Stella Donovan.

The thought of the girl served to break his reflections. This was all a part of that tragedy in New York. Both were in some way connected together, the assassination in the Waldron Apartments and the shooting of Jose here in this mountain shack. They seemed far apart, yet they were but steps in the same scheme.

He could not figure it all out, yet no doubt this was true—the struggle for the Cavendish millions had come to include the gold he had discovered here in the hills. Bill Lacy was merely the agent of those others, of Ned Beaton, of Celeste La Rue, of Patrick Enright. Aye, that was it—Enright! Instinctively, from the very first moment when he had listened to the girl's story, his mind had settled on Enright as the real leader. The lawyer's arrival in Haskell with the La Rue woman only served to strengthen that conviction. For certainly a man playing for potential stakes as big as those Enright was gaming for, would intrust no cunning moves to a mere Broadway chorus girl. No, Enright was on the ground in person because the matter in prospect needed a director, an excessively shrewd trickster, and the others were with him to do his bidding. If Cavendish really lived, all their plans depended on his being kept out of sight, disposed of, at least until they had the money safe in their grasp.



"This is certainly hell," he said soberly.
"That's Jim Westcott's jack-knife."

He reached beneath the blanket, drew forth the dead Mexican's revolver, slipped the weapon into his own belt, opened the door and went out, closing it tightly behind him. Jose could lie there until morning. While the darkness lasted he had work to do. His purpose settled, there was no hesitancy in his movements. His was the code of the West; his methods those of the desert and the mountains, the code and method of a fighting man.

A dim trail, rock strewn, led to the spring, where it connected with an ore road extending down the valley to Haskell. Another trail across the spur shortened the distance to the La Rosita shafthouse. But Westcott chose to follow none of these, lest he run into some ambuscade. The fellow who had fired into the shack was, unquestionably, hiding somewhere in the darkness, probably along one of these trails, in the hope of completing his work.

To avoid encountering him the miner crept along the far side of the cabin, through the dense shadow, and then struck directly across the hill crest, guided by the distant gleam of light. It was a rough climb, dangerous in places, but not unfamiliar. Slowly and silently, cautious to dislodge no rolling stone, and keeping well concealed among the rocks, he finally descended to the level of the shaft, feeling confident that his presence was not discovered. He was near enough now to hear the noise of the hoisting engine, and to mark the figure of the engineer in the dim light of a lantern.

Rock was being brought up the shaft and cast onto the dump, but was evidently of small value, proof to the mind of the watcher that the gang below were merely engaged in tunnel work, and had not yet struck ore in any paying quantity.

He lay there watching operations for several minutes, carefully studying out the situation. He had no clearly defined plan, only a desire to learn exactly what was being done. The office beyond the shaft was lighted, although the faint gleam was only dimly revealed along the edge of lowered curtains concealing the interior. However, this evidence that someone was within served to attract Westcott's attention, and he crept around under the shadow of the dump, and approached the farther corner. He could perceive now two men on the hoisting platform, and hear the growl of their voices, but without being able to distinguish speech. Every few moments there sounded the crash of falling rock as the buckets were emptied. Revolver in hand he made the round of the building to assure himself that no guard had been posted there, then chose the window farthest away from the shaft and endeavored to look in.

The heavy green curtain extended to the sill, but was slit in one corner. With his eye close to this slight opening he gained a partial glimpse of the interior. It was that of a rough office, with a cot in one corner, as though occasionally utilized for a sleeping room, the other furniture consisting of a small desk with roll top, an unpainted table and a few chairs. In one corner stood a rusty-looking safe, the door open, and a fat-bellied wood stove occupied the center of the floor.

There were three men in the room, and Westcott drew a quick breath of surprise as he recognized the two faces fronting him—Bill Lacy at the desk, a pipe in his mouth, his feet elevated on a convenient chair, and Beaton, leaning back against the wall, apparently half asleep, with his eyes closed. The third man was facing Lacy but concealed by the stove; he seemed to be doing the talking, and held a paper in his hand resembling a map. Suddenly he arose to his feet and bent over the edge of the desk, and Westcott knew him—Enright!

The man spoke earnestly, evidently arguing a point with emphasis, but the sound of his voice failed to penetrate to the ears of the listener without. Desperately determined to learn what was being said, the miner thrust the heavy blade of his jack knife beneath the ill-fitting window sash and succeeded in noiselessly lifting it a scant half inch. He bent lower, the speaker's voice clearly audible through the narrow opening.

"That isn't the point, Lacy," the tone smooth enough, yet containing a trace of anger. "You are paid to do these things the way I plan. This mining proposition is all right, but our important job just now is at the other end. A false move at this time will not only cost us a fortune, but would send some of us to the pen. Don't you know that?"

"Sure I do; but I thought this was my end of it."

"So it is; but it can wait until later, until we have the money in hand, and have decided about Cavendish. You say your tunnel is within 20 feet of the lead; which it must be, according to this map, and you propose breaking through and holding on until the courts decide. Now don't you know that will kick up a hell of a row? It will bring us all in the limelight, and just at present we are better off underground. That's why I came out here. I am no expert in mining law, and am not prepared to say that your claim is not legal. It may be, and may not be—we'll waive that discussion. The point is this—from all I can learn of Westcott, he teered, starting to rise. She held him down almost wildly.

"And leave me alone?" she cried. "Oh, not for worlds. Promise me you won't leave me till we're both out of this." She caught his hand again as she spoke. He gave her's a brusque pressure. When he answered he was curt but encouraging.

"Sure I'll stay," he said, emphatically. "I'll look out for you like you was my sister. We'll see this thing through together."

She felt wonderfully comforted. "You're very good," she said, gratefully. Then she added with an effort: "Of course, I don't want you to run any risk for me—if there's any danger," she faltered.

"Oh, that's all right," he returned, carelessly. "There ain't no danger. But when there's anything like this goin's on, every man's gotta help a woman."

From the first there had been movement, talk and incipient hysteria around them. Now the woman who had shrieked before was crying hysterically, and other voices were breaking treacherously. Miss Forsythe's new friend lifted his voice and addressed the assemblage around him in the darkness.

"Now, see here," he called, "there ain't no danger. I ain't the conductor, but I know that much. Nothin' ain't goin' to happen, except a little delay. But there's women here an' children, an' every man's got to buck up an' help 'em through. Some man get beside that lady and take care o' her. I guess she's alone or she wouldn't be so scared. Get up a little conversation. Talk politics—anything y' like. Sing a song."

"Sing yerself." The advice came in a surly tone from the other end of the train. "Take yer own medicine. Do somethin' besides give advice. You ain't givin' up anything we don't know as well as you."

"Oh, all right." Helen's friend remained uncrushed. "I don't mind," he added cheerfully. "You brought it on yourself, though, so don't blame me." He lifted up his voice, a wholesome, husky tenor, wholly untrained, but with some sweet notes in it. The song he sang was a song of the day, with a refrain already made popular by street organs; and he gave it with a rollicking spirit which had an immediate effect on his hearers.

"Say, you're all right."

The voice was that of his former critic, changed now to hearty admiration. "Do it some more." The woman had stopped crying. There was silence in the car, broken only by the singer and by one or two tentative efforts at chaffing him. American humor can outlive any situation.

The young man responded with another ditty.

"Don't be an old maid, Molly;
Make up your mind to-d-a-y,"

He chanted lustily. And Helen Forsythe, who had lived all over the world, and who knew life as few women can, held humbly to his hand as he sang, and got, as she listened, a glimpse into a bigger world than she had ever known—a world in which men and women are judged by what they are; a world in which she and this singing stranger would play roles in which hers, by comparison, would be small indeed.

For some time she had been conscious of an oppressive weight on her chest. The atmosphere was getting closer; she could hardly breathe. When his song ended she told him this. "I'm afraid I'm going to faint," she added, quietly. He seized her shoulders and shook them gently, as if to rouse her.

"No you ain't," he protested, anxiously. "You ain't goin' to do nothin' of the kind. I couldn't do nothin' for you if you did. Ain't you got as much pluck as the other women? Why, even the baby's stopped cryin'!"

There was primitive masculine scorn in his voice now. Her face scorched under the humiliation of it, but she could not deny the justice of his words.

"It isn't fear," she faltered. "Though I am afraid," she hastened to add, with her usual perfect honesty. "It's an oppression on my chest—a difficulty in breathing; I feel queer—choked."

While she was speaking she felt him suddenly stiffen, as if under the shock of some discovery. His grip fell from her shoulders. He took her hand again, and held it firmly. When he spoke it was in a whisper.

"You're right," he said. "It's smoke! I smell it m'self. There's somethin' wrong. But just keep your head. Nothin's goin' to happen to you."

She trembled, but remained silent.

"That's right," he said, appreciatively, evidently realizing the strain she was putting on her nerves. "It's up to me now, an' I'll look out for you. Ain't I said so? How much d' y' weigh?" he added, suddenly.

She told him. He laughed out. "A hundred an' thirty," he repeated. "Well, I guess I can handle that. Now you listen," he cautioned in a whisper. "When the rush comes—it'll begin in a minute, when the rest catch on—I'll pick you up an' make for the door. You keep quiet; don't you struggle or catch me too tight round the neck. Jest hold on, an' we'll get out of this all right, all right."

"Won't you—won't you light a match again, first?" she whispered.

"I ain't got no more." The words came reluctantly. "I hoped you wouldn't know, but that time I opened my box they was only one left. I lit it."

She told him then of her own loss, and when he understood he dropped her hand and began to grope hurriedly on the floor and under the seats.

"I got it," he said, suddenly. "I got a little leather bag here. Gee! that's luck!"

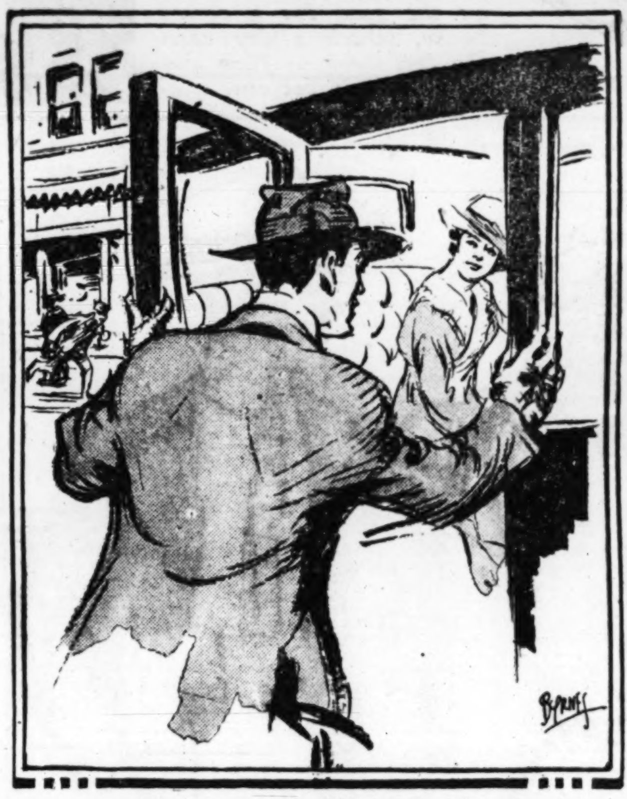
His cool voice held its first note of excitement now. He placed the bag in her hand, and she felt for and found the electric candle. As she took it out she pressed it. Only a dim head of light responded. She handed it to him without a word and felt him fussing over it in the darkness.

"Battery used up," he said at last, abruptly. "Well, I'll be d——"

He checked the word and handed the useless thing back to her. "Ain't had it charged lately, have you?" he asked, quietly.

"No."

She was stunned by this new calamity. Around them other voices had begun to whisper. Suddenly the man who had spoken before raised his voice again.



"Have you time?" she asked humbly. "I want to talk to you."

"I'm goin' to get out of this trap," he said. "There's something queer about this."

There was the sound of a struggle near the door, of oaths, of heavy breathing, of blows, or breaking glass. Then pandemonium broke loose in the darkness. Miss Forsythe felt herself picked up and carried forward. She heard another crash, the cries of guards; she felt the acrid taste of smoke in her throat and its sting in her nostrils. Then she lost consciousness.

When she came to she was still in the nightmare; yet she was dimly conscious of some directing, splendid force that bore her onward through it. Then she saw the red gleam of a lantern, and she realized that the air which entered her lungs was fresh and pure. She struggled feebly, and with an exclamation the man who was carrying her set her down. They looked at each other in the dim illumination. They were almost at the Brooklyn end of the tunnel, and the lights they saw were the welcome light of the station.

"Well, we're out of it," the man gasped. "But all hell's loose back there. Come along." He seized her hand again and began to drag her toward the exit. "Think you can walk it?" he asked. "Only a few steps more. Look out. I'll show you where to put your feet."

He guided her carefully but swiftly, and she, seeing life and sanity winking at her in those cheering red lights, drew a deep breath and followed where he led.

"How did you do it?" she asked, simply, as they scrambled on.

"Ran!" he answered, succinctly. "Dug my way through the gang with one arm, held you in the other, and then ran like the—like Johnny Hayes himself."

Gangs of workmen and police were passing them now on a run toward the scene of the accident. They heard the clang of ambulance bells above them as they emerged into the station. Alarms had been sounded. Several men stopped them with excited questions on their lips, but the man with her pushed them aside and rushed her up the stairway.

"This lady ain't answerin' no questions now," he explained, briefly. "She's goin' home."

There were two cabs at the entrance. Without a word he put her into one. "Where to?" he asked, tersely. She gave him her New York address, and motioned him to follow.

"Have you time?" she asked, humbly. "I want to talk to you."

He hesitated. "I oughta go back an' see if I can't help 'em; but I'm afraid I ain't much good," he added.

He stretched out his hands as he spoke, and for the first time she saw that they were covered with blood. With an exclamation of acute sympathy she pulled him into the cab beside her and ordered the driver to start. Then she opened her bag, found the fresh handkerchiefs it contained, wiped his hands, and bound them up carefully. He was very pale, but he grinned at her reassuringly. She worked rapidly and without a word. When she had finished he leaned back luxuriously, with his knees crossed. They were half-way across the bridge by this time, and he drew the pure air into his lungs with deep satisfaction.

"Say, this is all right, ain't it?" he asked, suddenly. "We don't know how good the sun and air is till we've had a little dose like that without 'em. Gee!" His face sobered. "I oughta be back there, helpin'," he said again, slowly.

She looked at him in silence, and the full realization of what he had done for her swept over her.

"I should be back there still if it were not for you," she said, huskily. "How can I show my gratitude?"

He grinned and waved his bandaged hand.

"Oh, forget it!" he urged chivalrously.

She went on without noticing the interruption.

"What can I do for you?" she asked, slowly. "You must let me do something in return, you know. What do you want? Are you ambitious? I have friends who can help you, if you are."

His face hardened as he turned it toward her.

"I don't want nothin' from you," he said, quickly. "I ain't been workin for pay."

She leaned toward him and laid her hand on the bandaged one resting on his knee. There were tears in her eyes as she answered him.

"Do you suppose I think I could pay you? You have saved my life. I do not value that in dollars and cents. But I like to do things for my friends. Won't you let me do something for you as a friend?"

His face softened as he looked at her, but he shook his head.

"Say, you an' me ain't friends," he said, bluntly. "An' we couldn't be—not in a thousand years. I ain't your kind. You ain't my kind. Don't I know?"

"But you saved my life."

"P'r'aps. 'Nd if I hadn't done it, mebbe the next feller across the aisle woulda done it. Why shouldn't I save it? Ain't I a man?"

For the third time that day he formulated his simple creed of life.

"Every man's gotta look out for some woman at a time like that. I oughta done more. Me, with me strength, only gettin' out one, an' a woman with a baby left there. God! I feel like a cur." Then he turned on her. "That's your kind," he said, severely. "Makin' me ride home with you when I was that tired I didn't know what I was about. My girl, the girl I got; she'd 'a'made me go back for the woman an' the baby!"

Again the soul of Helen Forsythe was scorched by this workman's contempt. Again she answered him as the splendid frankness of her nature dictated.

"You are right," she said, humbly. "I am a coward, and I showed it. I let you do everything for me, when there was no reason why you should."

"Sure there was. You're a woman." He spoke more gently now. "I ain't blamin' meself for gettin' you out. See? It might as well be you as anyone," he added, handsomely. "All I'm kickin' about is that I didn't do more. But that ain't your fault. We was both rattled."

She took this in silence. Then she added, gently:

"You will give me your name and address, won't you? I want my brothers"——

"No, I won't." He spoke shortly and decidedly. "I ain't goin' to have no swells from Fifth avenue comin' down my way. Now, get this straight."

He leaned toward her as he spoke, and bit his words decisively.

"I don't want no help from you, nor from your brothers, nor from anyone else. Savvy? I can look out for meself, an' I can do it good. Take that in, an' ferget the rest."

Miss Forsythe laughed, irrepressibly. She began to feel as if she had awakened from a bad dream. Surely she had not been under the river in a panic and a fire,

The Strange Case of Cavendish

By RANDALL PARRISH Illustrations by Marguerite Martyn

CHAPTER XIII.

THE SHOT OF DEATH.

WESTCOTT'S purpose in visiting the La Rosita mine was a rather vague one. His thought had naturally associated Bill Lacy with whatever form of deviltry had brought Beaton to the neighborhood of Haskell, and he felt convinced firmly that this special brand of deviltry had some direct connection with the disappearance of Frederick Cavendish. Just what the connection between these people might prove to be was still a matter of doubt, but as Miss Donovan was seeking this information at the hotel, all that remained for him to do at present was an investigation of Lacy.

Yet it was not in the nature of the big miner to go at anything recklessly. He possessed a logical mind and needed to think out clearly a course of action before putting it into execution. This revelation had come to him suddenly, and the conclusion which he had arrived at, and expressed to the girl, was more of an inspiration than the result of calm mental judgment. After she had disappeared on her walk back to Haskell, Westcott lit his pipe and resumed his seat on the big rock again, to think it all out in detail, and decide on a course of action. He was surprised how swiftly and surely the facts of the case as already understood marshaled themselves into line in support of the theory he had advanced. The careful review of all Miss Donovan had told him only served to increase his confidence that his old partner still lived. No other conception seemed possible, or would account for the presence of Ned Beaton in Haskell, or the hurried call for Miss La Rue. Yet it was equally evident this was not caused by any miscarriage of their original plans. It was not fear that had led to this meeting—no escape of their prisoner, no suspicion that their conspiracy had been discovered, no alarm of exposure—but merely the careful completion of plans long before perfected. Apparently every detail of the crime, which meant the winning of Frederick Cavendish's fortune, had been thus far successfully carried out. The money was already practically in their possession, and not the slightest suspicion had been aroused. It had been a masterpiece of criminal ingenuity, so boldly carried out as to avoid danger of discovery.

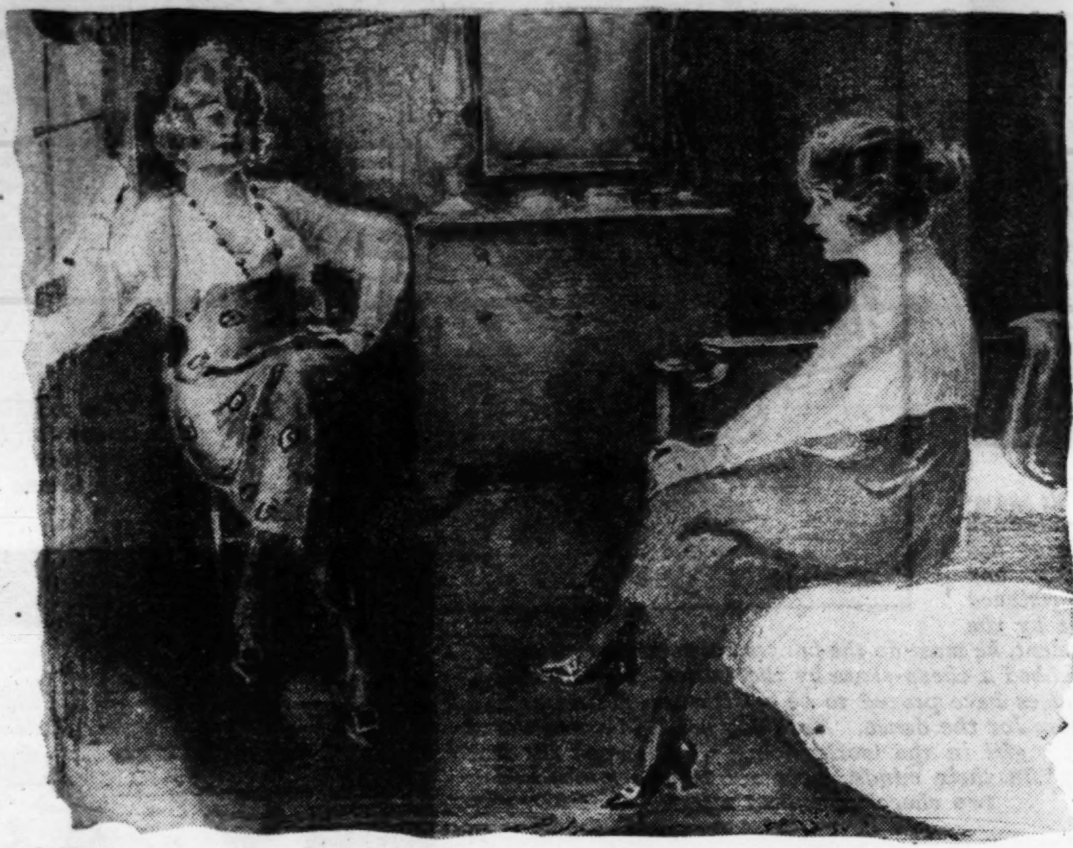
Westcott believed he saw the purpose which had actuated the ruling spirit—a desire to attain these millions without bloodshed; without risking any charge of murder. This whole affair had been no vulgar, clumsy crime; it was more nearly a business proposition, cold-blooded, deliberately planned, cautiously executed. Every step had been taken exactly in accord with the original outlines, except possibly that they had been hurried by Cavendish's sudden determination to return West, and his will disinheriting John. These had compelled earlier action, yet no radical change in plans, as the machinery was already prepared and in position. Lack had been with the conspirators when Frederick called in Enright to draw up the will. What followed was merely the pressure of his finger on the button.

Enright! Beyond doubt his were the brains dominating the affair. It was impossible to believe that either Celeste La Rue or Ned Beaton—chorus girl or gunman—could have ever figured out such a scheme. They were nothing but pawns, moved by the hand of the chief player. Aye! and John Cavendish was another!

The whole foul thing lay before Westcott's imagination in its diabolical ingenuity—Enright's legal mind had left no loophole. He intended to play the game absolutely safe, so far, at least, as he was personally concerned.

The money was to go legally to John, without the shadow of a suspicion resting upon it; and then—well, he knew how to do the rest; already he had a firm grip on a large portion. Yes, all this was reasonably clear; what remained obscure was the fate of Frederick Cavendish.

Had they originally intended to take his life, and been compelled to change the plan? Had his sudden, unexpected departure from New York, on the very eve possibly of their contemplated action, driven them to the substitution of another body? It hardly seemed probable—for a man bearing so close a resemblance could not have been discovered in so short a time. The knowledge of the existence of such a person, however, might have been part of the original conspiracy—perhaps was the very basis of it; may have first put the conception into Enright's ready brain. Aye, that was doubtless the way of it. Frederick was to be spirited out of the city, accompanied, taken care of by Beaton or some other murderous crook, and this fellow, a corpse, substituted. If he resembled Frederick at all closely, there was scarcely a chance that his identity would be questioned. Why should it be—found in his apartments? There was nothing to arouse suspicion; while, if anything did occur, the conspirators were in no danger of discovery. They risked a possible failure of their plan, but that was all. But if this was true, what had since become of Frederick?



"What in the world brought you out here?"

Westcott came back from his musing to this one important question. The answer puzzled him. If the man was dead, why should Beaton remain at Haskell and insist on Miss La Rue's joining him? And if the man was alive and concealed somewhere in the neighborhood, what was their present object? Had they decided they were risking too much in permitting him to live? Had something occurred to make them feel it safer to have him out of the way permanently? What connection did Bill Lacy have with the gang?

Westcott rose to his feet and began following the trail up the canon. He was not serving Cavendish nor Miss Donovan by sitting there. He would, at least, discover where Lacy was and learn what the fellow was engaged at. He walked rapidly, but the sun was nearly down by the time he reached the mouth of his own drift.

While waiting word from the East which would enable him to develop the claim, Westcott had thought it best to discontinue work and hide, as best he could, from others the fact that he had again discovered the lost lead of rich ore. To that end, after taking out enough for his immediate requirements in the form of nuggets gathered from a single pocket, which he had later negotiated quietly at a town down the railroad, he had blocked up the new tunnel and discontinued operations. He had fondly believed his secret secure, until Lacy's careless words had aroused suspicion that the latter might have seen his telegrams to Cavendish. His only assistant, a Mexican, who had been with him for some time, remained on guard at the bunkhouse, and, so far as he knew, no serious effort had been made to explore the drift by any of Lacy's satellites. Now, as he came up the darkening gulch, and crunched his way across the rock pile before the tunnel entrance, he saw the cheerful blaze of a fire in the Mexican's quarters and stopped to question him.

"Senor—you!"

"Yes, Jose," and Westcott dropped on to a bench. "Anything wrong? You seem nervous."

"No, senor. I expected you not tonight; there was a man there by the big tree at sunset."

"You saw him?"

"Yes, but not his face, senor. He think me gone at first, but when I walk out on the edge of the cliff then he go—quick, like that. When the door creak I say maybe he come back."

"One of the La Rosita gang likely. Don't fight them, Jose. Let them poke around inside if they want to; they won't find anything but rock. There is no better way to fool that bunch than let them investigate to their heart's content. Got a bite there for me?"

"Si, senor, aplenty."

"All right, then; I'm hungry and have a bit of work ahead. Put it on the table here, and sit down yourself, Jose."

The Mexican did as ordered, glancing across at the other between each mouthful of food, as though not exactly at ease. Westcott ate heartily, without pausing to talk.

"You hear yet Senor Cavendish?" Jose asked at last.

"No." Westcott hesitated an instant, but decided not to explain further. "He must be away, I think."

"What you do if you no hear at all?"

"We'll go on digging ourselves, Jose. It'll pay wages until I can interest capital somewhere to come in on shares."

"You no sell Lacy, then?"

"Sell Lacy! Not in a thousand years. What put that in your head?"

The Mexican rubbed the back of his pate.

"You know Senor Moore—no hair so?" an expressive gesture.

"Sure; what about him?"

"He meet me at the spring; he come up the trail from Haskell on horseback with another man not belong 'round here."

"What did he look like—big, red-faced fellow, with checked suit and round hat?"

"Sir, senor; he say to Moore, 'Why the hell you talk that damn greaser,' an' Moore laugh, an' say because I work for Senor Westcott."

"But what was it Moore said to you, Jose?"

"He cussed me at first, an' when I wouldn't move, he swore that Lacy would own this whole hill before 30 days."

"Was that all? Didn't the other fellow say anything?"

"No, senor, but he swung his horse against me as they went by—he mighty poor rider."

"No doubt! that is not one of the amusements of the Bowery. Where did they go? Up to La Rosita?"

"Si, senor; I watched, they were there two hour."

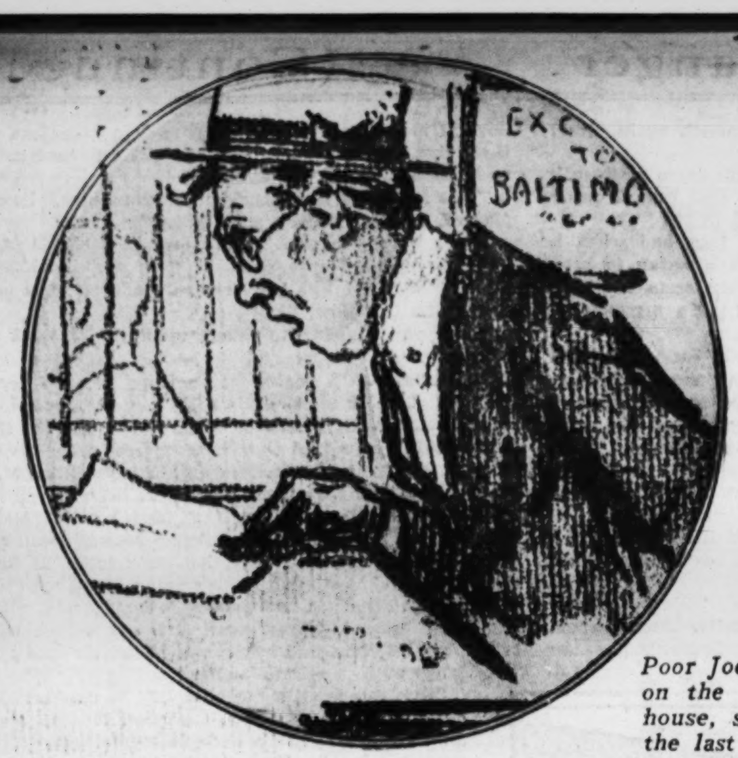
Westcott stared into the fireplace; then the gravity of his face relaxed into a smile.

"Things are growing interesting, Jose," he said cheerfully. "If I only knew just which way the cat was about to jump, I'd be somewhat happier. There seemed to be more light than usual across the gulch as I came up—what's going on?"

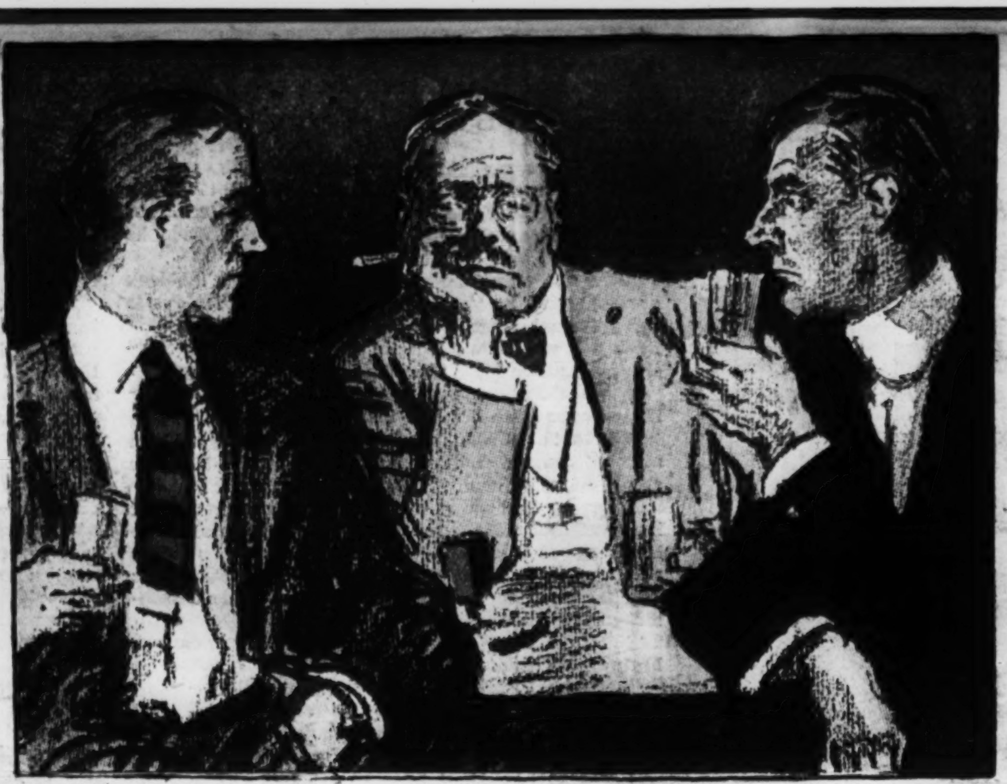
"They have put on more men, senor—a night shift.

How They Fortified Themselves Against JULY 1

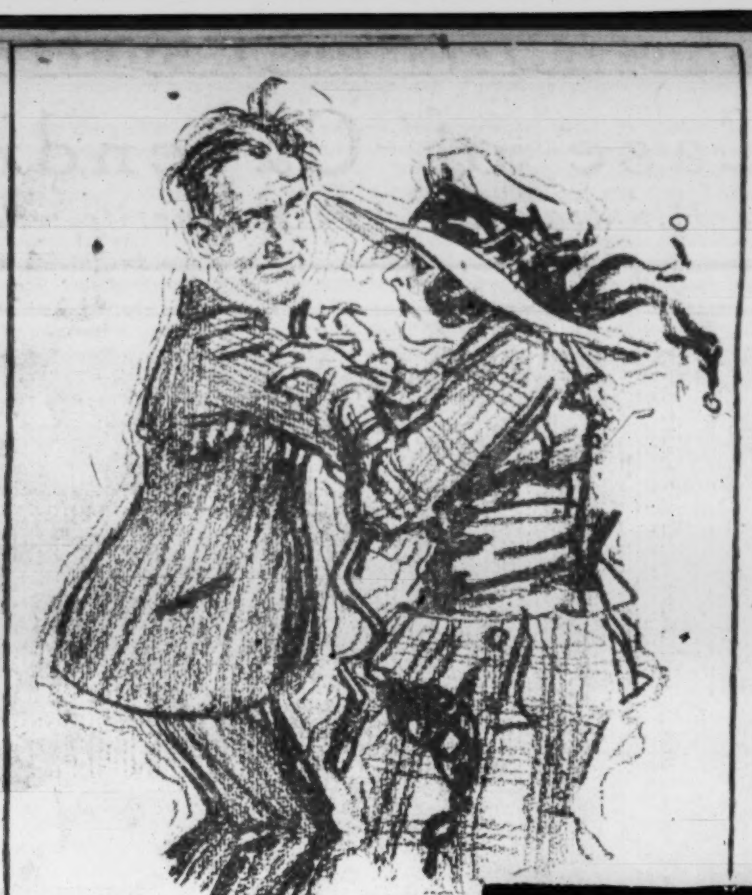
Character Sketches by W. E. HILL



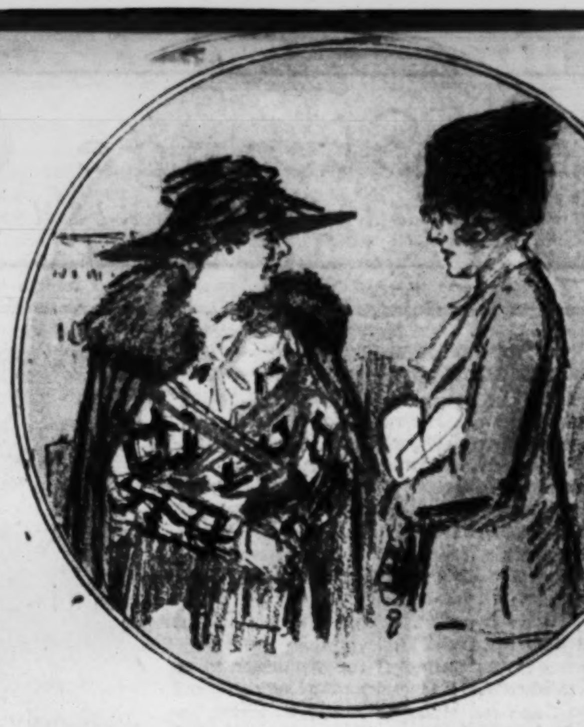
Poor Joe Raty, who travels on the road for a corset house, struck a dry zone the last week in June and couldn't get out.



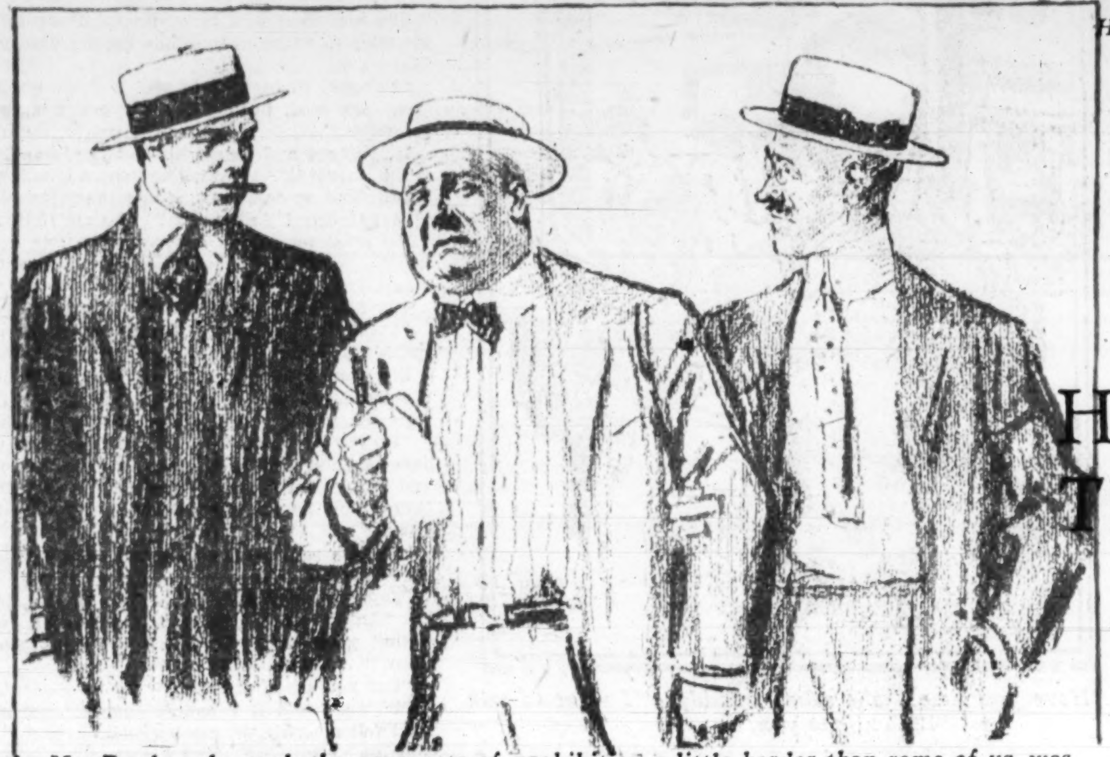
How unreconstructed spirits visioned the last, sad rites, a few minutes before midnight on the 30th.



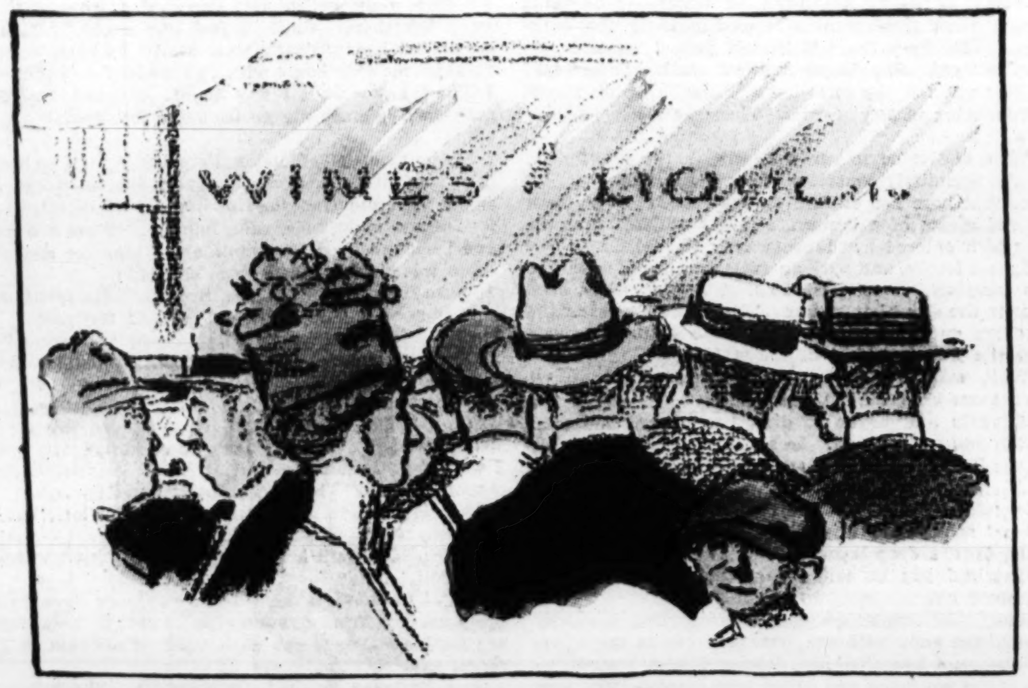
Eddie felt somehow, even though the cabaret had gone dry and was christened cafeteria by the management, he must do the honors between every dance or be dubbed a cheap skate by the waiter. Soft drinks and sundaes have proved to be a little too filling as a foundation for the dance. Here you see Eddie and the best little girl in the world doing what passes for a "shimmy" in their minds, after six banana splits and two chocolate malted milks.



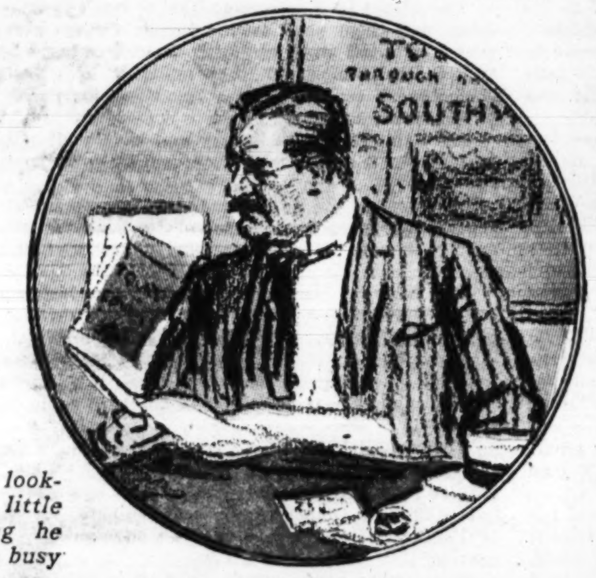
The mark-down sale of wines and liquors proved too much for Mrs. Deady and Mrs. Nut, who are explaining that the bottle of cognac in Mrs. Deady's arms and the Creme Yvette clutched by Mrs. Nut are for medicinal purposes only.



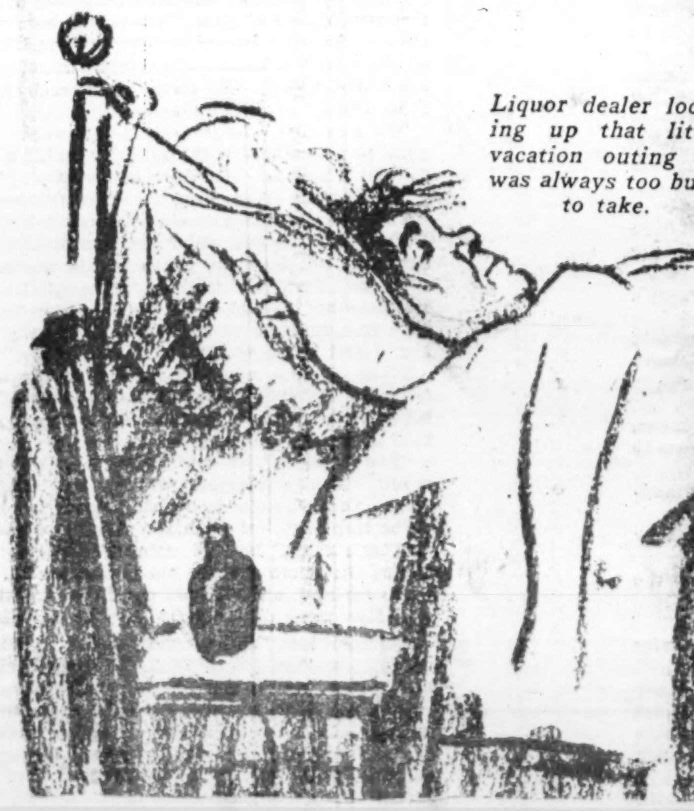
As Mr. Bugle, who took the prospects of prohibition a little harder than some of us, was being escorted home by two friends. You see, Mrs. Bugle had not been in the habit of kissing her husband except to find out whether he had been drinking, and Mr. Bugle, who loves his wife, had it figured out that after July 1 he wouldn't be kissed at all.



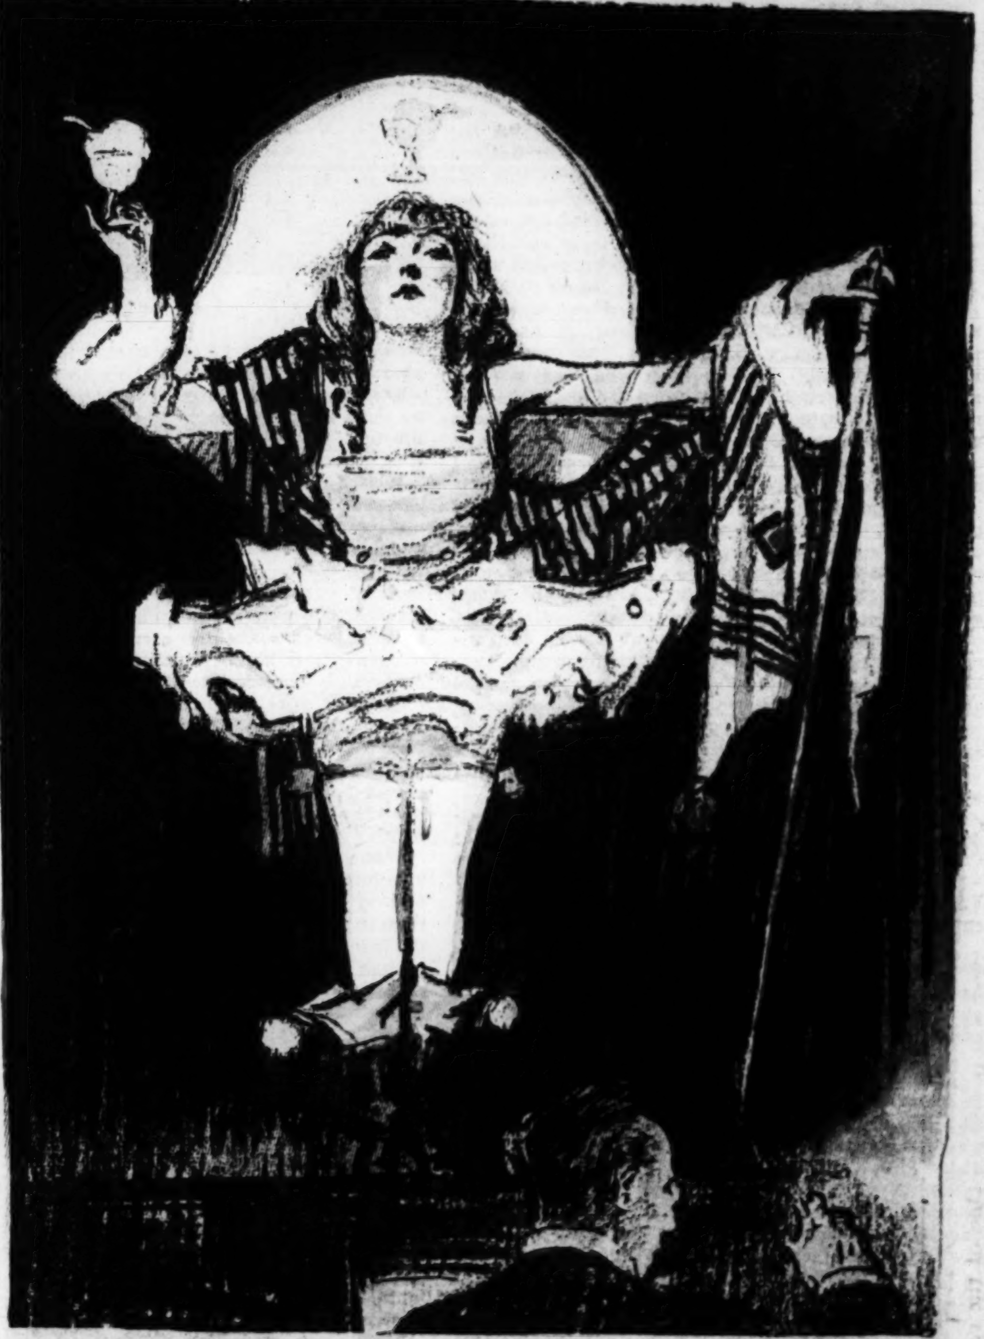
Everybody tried to figure out the working principle of the miniature "still" in the liquor dealer's window.



Liquor dealer looking up that little vacation outing he was always too busy to take.



As for Agnes, the cook, July 1 seemed too terrible to be faced without a little preparation. So for several nights Agnes retired to her bedroom without a sojourn with the "black bottle."



The national prohibition movement hit the drama harder than most persons realized. Take the case of Teddie La Pearle, for instance, who was to be "The Spirit of Haig and Haig" in the new summer revue, "Have One, Homer," with a little verse all to herself—all about how she was "the spirit of drink; hear how the glasses clink," etc. Then along came the July 1 scare, and they changed her part to "The Spirit of Maple Nut Sundae." It was bad enough, "after learning all them lines for nothing," but the saddest part of the whole thing was that the author couldn't think of any rhyme for Maple Nut Sundae, and Teddie was left without any lines at all.

owe much of their attractiveness to their beautiful Eyes, adorned with long, luxuriant, silky Eyelashes and perfectly formed Eyebrows—"those Fringed Curtains which Veil the Eyes," and give to them that rare charm of expression which all women prize so highly, and which is so greatly admired by women and men alike. If Nature has denied you these Beauty Aids, do not despair. You may now have them if you will apply just a little

The Best Way to Use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it: It goes on splendidly and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last six months, yet the box is small enough to fit your purse. When you use this pure, harmless Rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Because La-may Rouge is so new, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. Show this notice to your dealer and if he refuses to get you a package you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th St., New York.
